Prophets

We cannot think of anything quite so foolish as trying to predict what will happen next. There has arisen an unusually large crop of prophets in the past two years, some predicting a speedy return of prosperity, others telling us that we are in for many years more of hard times.

We have our own opinions as to what is going to happen, but we try to keep them to ourselves. When it comes to predicting facts, we are sure only of a very few things.

We predict, for example, that there will be a lot more cold weather than warm weather between now and Spring. We feel reasonably safe on that point. We predict that there will be either a Democrat or a Republican elected to the Presidency next year, and we don't believe anybody can hit it any closer than that, as politics look now. We won't take a chance on predicting whether Henry Ford is going to bring out a new car for 1932 or not, but we feel safe in prophesying that if he does he'll sell a lot of them. We wish we knew whether the price of wheat and cotton were going up or down. We don't but we predict that, whichever way farm prices go, the political farmers will still be asking Uncle Sam to help them out. There are a few other things still in the future of which we are certain. Water will continue to run down hill, the sun will rise daily in the East as usual, and there will be just about as many fools on wheels breaking their own necks and others' next year as there were this year We can't tell whether women are going to wear their hair and their skirts long or short, but we feel certain that whatever any man says they are going to do, they'll do the opposite.

Outside of a few certainties like that, because upon the unchangeable laws of nature, human and otherwise, we don't set up to be any kind of prophet. But we do predict that almost everything will be different next year and succeeding years from what they are today.

It would be a pretty dull world, seems to us, if anybody could tell what is going to happen next. What makes life interesting is the variety there is in it.

Autumn

There is one thing in which America has it all over Europe. That is our Autumn season, or as we usually call it the Fall of the year.

It must be admitted that we don't have very much of a Spring season, in most parts of this country. We go from Winter smack into Summer. We don't understand what the English poets are talking about when they sing of Spring. But over there they go from Summer right into Winter, almost. There is none of that long-drawn-out season after harvest, when the leaves are turning and falling and, in the North, at least, there is a touch of frost in the early morning and the sweet smell of fallen leaves and Nature takes on a coat of gorgeous color before shifting to the somber gray of Winter.

Fall is the season of play for the farmer. When the crops have been harvested and the Fall plowing done, there is a period before Winter sets in when hunting is at its best, when it is a pleasure to be out of doors with nothing of immediate importance to attend to. It is the season of relaxation after the heat and strain of the Summer, when folks can take time to sum up the result of the year's work and begin their plans for the next.

Thanksgiving Day, in most parts of this country, marks the end of Fall and the real beginning of Winter. Then we begin to look forward to Christmas and thence to next Spring. We hear travellers tell of countries where the seasons never change from one year's end to the other. It seems to us that half of the pleasure of life comes from the changing seasons, and from looking forward to the next change.

Advertising Did It

Reports drifting in to various departments in Washington indicate that the people of Winston-Salem are successfully beating the general business depression. In fact, business courage plus aggressive advertising of its principal product is making that old North Carolina city stand out like an oasis in the desert in these troublesome times.

Advertising and cigarettes are the weapons of combat that have been so successfully used, the reports show. Winston-Salem is the home of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company. When the depression came along, the Reynolds people decided to increase their advertising instead of decreasing it. And their courage has been rewarded, because there have been no layoffs or wage reductions affecting the 12,000 Reynolds employees. In fact, the recent introduction and extensive advertising of the new moisture-proof cellophane wrapper for Camels caused such an increased demand that the Reynolds factories had to put on night shifts.

The result is a happy, prosperous and contented community, when the wage dollars of the workers enjoy an added value because of the depression in other parts of the country. Stores are crowded with buyers. Winston-Salem is one place where visitors seldom hear stories of poor business.

PAST-PRESENT-FUTURE
IN CHILTON COUNTY

Due to the fact that this column will be new to the readers of this newspaper, it might possibly be a rather good idea for the writer to go into the workings of a newspaper and its attitude toward news stories, opinions of its editors, and the thousand and one things they have to bear in mind at all times during the publishing of a newspaper.

Opinions that will be expressed in the future in this column will not necessarily be the opinions of the editorials of this newspaper. If opinions of the writer of this column coincided with the general policies of this newspaper, then there would be no real need for this column as the editor has his columns in which he may express his opinions if he wishes. It will be somewhat of the purpose of this column for the writer to comment in his own manner, on the happenings over the county, as well as the happenings over the state and nation, however, at the same time attempting to keep the interest local.

During our stay in Clanton we have had occasion to notice many items that we believe would furnish splendid reading matter for everyone interested in Clanton. Some are humorous, some serious and some coming in a medium of the two. It will be our endeavor to cover them all, if possible.

One which just struck us as Leonard Williams was making his rounds this week reading electric meters for the Alabama Power Company, is a fine example of what will occur when a man selects his profession or trade and sticks to it. I can remember when Clanton was supplied with electric power by the Wade Ice Plant. The service was good under the conditions. Lights would be extinguished at a certain hour of the night and the town would be in darkness. But Clanton becoming a much larger town since that time is now along with the cities in the electric service respect.

Leonard Williams was working for Wade, handling the electrical end of the business, on a small scale. The power company soon took over this privately owned plant and Leonard stuck. Now, here he is with an attractive office and local manager of the Alabama Power Company's interest, holding the respect of the entire county, ever on his job with competent assistants.

Otto Jones is another young man who is a fine example of what will happen when a man sticks to his job. No doubt many of the residents of Clanton can picture Otto now, as he was in his teens with knee trousers on. Not only being assistant cashier of a bank now, he is also a member of the insurance firm of J. C. Page Company.

We note that there are several vacant business houses in Clanton now. It would certainly be a blessing to our town should these buildings become occupied, and of course we are sure that every business man here is ever on the alert, watching for an opportunity to bring a new business to town.

But there is a possibility of one being too eager to bring new concerns to town, and by chance may secure one that would not prove so desirable as first thought.

Did you ever drive into Clanton on the Birmingham-Montgomery highway at night, especially Saturday nights about eight or nine o'clock? If you haven't then you should get in your car, drive out for about a mile then return. You would behold a sight that would no doubt cause you to say, "Clanton's a nice sized town." The various electric signs seen on the highway through Clanton are really an asset to the town, saying nothing of the way they speak for the stores displaying them, and of course there are others not on the highway.

Speaking of signs, makes us call to mind the James Sign Shop and the attractive window displays they carry at all times. The taste used in displaying these window decorations with their varied colored lights and clean, neat appearance, is attracting attention over the entire state and is certainly bringing James some returns for his money.

This sign shop is not the only place of business in Clanton with front windows. But, the question arises, "Are the other places using their display windows to an advantage, not only for themselves but for the town. Stores with attractively arranged, and well-lighted display windows throughout a town, show up well, and it does not take much to give every window an attractive appearance. That is the reason the large stores in cities devote so much of their space to window displays. It is inviting to customers—it shows a progressive, wide-awake spirit on the part of the management.

We are pleased to note that Thorsby is still booming to a certain extent. Passed through there Sunday and noticed some work going on in a building on the highway which appeared as if another new place of business was opening up, possibly another drug store.

Thorsby has always had a spirit of a "go-getter" and is being admired for it. The town is made up of a class of public-spirited citizens who are always watching out for the better things for their town. Have you ever been fortunate enough to attend one of the general social functions of Thorsby? If you haven't then you have certainly missed a treat. For an interesting story of reality, you should get one of the pioneer residents of the town of Thorsby to tell you how the town was settled and why. It would indeed make an interesting story.

Another asset to the town of Thorsby is the Thorsby Institute. While many of the counties of the state are facing a predicament in their schools, the Thorsby Institute remains undisturbed, being a private school and a good one, with a corps of teachers and instructors who are competent for their work. No doubt should the schools of this county be forced to close before the term is completed, Thorsby Institute will receive many new students, who will carry on their studies there, receiving full credit as prescribed. The Institute will certainly prove its stand, if this were to occur.

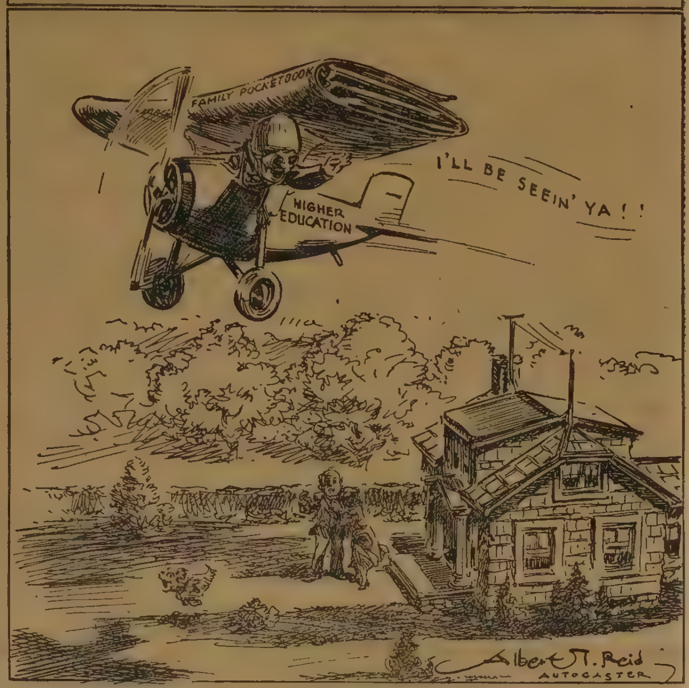
We hope to be thoroughly acclimated in this new column within a few days and will endeavor to give our readers something of interest each week. Until then, good evening.

Off For College — By Albert T. Reid



THE ALABAMA PROGRAM OF FARMING FOR PROFIT

Since Texas has rejected the proposal to suspend completely production of cotton for one year it is obvious that Alabama and other States cannot undertake it.

Therefore, we, in Alabama, must find the solution of our agricultural problems by application of our regular program. We must push forward diligently with our research work in order to find out the facts and then endeavor, through our bankers and other business people, county agents, Farm Bureaus, teachers of vocational agriculture, and other agencies to make the widest possible application of these scientific facts on each farm.

Strengthen Farm Organization

In order to deal effectively and intelligently with the difficult problems of agriculture all sincere and thoughtful friends of the farmer unanimously agree that the one paramount matter standing out over every other question is that the farm people must have a sound, wise, efficient and thorough going farmer-owned and farmer-controlled organization.

Out of the industry of agriculture itself must arise a strong, sturdy, bold, courageous leadership. Under these leaders, and with the counsel and assistance of all of the agencies created to serve agriculture there must be built this organization of farm folks for educational and cooperative purposes.

Through such an organization, and with the counsel and assistance of the private and public agencies created to serve them the farmers themselves must.

(1) Cut costs of production.
(2) Improve marketing facilities.
(3) Adjust production to normal demands.
(4) Improve the farm home and rural social life.

Above all, therefore, every real friend of agriculture in Alabama should put forth every effort to strengthen the farmers' organization.

What Shall We Do With The Present Cotton Crop?

The immediate question before us is what shall we do with the present crop of cotton.

Farmers should join with all of their neighbors in pooling their cotton with the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association. Under this plan the farmers will receive a substantial cash advance, and at the same time retain their interest in and their control over their cotton, and thus be in position to get the full benefit of any advance in price.

This Association is on a sound business basis, and is in the hands of efficient and capable management.

The Cotton Outlook

There is in sight an ample supply of cotton for two years based upon the present rate of consumption.

The Remedy

This means that we should reduce our production of cotton annually for the next two years to one-half of the 1931 production.

In the meantime we should:

1. Make plans for the ample production of food for the family and feed for all livestock.

2. Make some form of livestock a part of the permanent program.

3. Improve in every conceivable way the efficiency, the comfort and the convenience of the farm home.

4. County farm and home demonstration agents and teachers of vocational agriculture in the several counties are in possession of full information as to methods and plans of procedure. Farm people, business people, and others interested in agriculture are urged to cooperate actively with these agencies in making their plans to meet the situation.

5. That such meetings or conferences as may be necessary be held to acquaint farmers, bankers, merchants, and others with the facts and enlist their full cooperation in the adoption and application of these recommendations.

George C. Handy, publisher of the Ypsilanti (Michigan) Press, says:

"Buying at home is the keynote of the small town symphony. It's like giving money to the baby to put into the family bank. It all comes back. And in the meantime you have rendered the baby a service, helped him a little in the education of thrift, given him the pleasure derived from handling money, cheered him. Those are among the biggest things in life—thrift and pleasure.

"When our boy was small he found pleasure, as all real boys do, in spending money. We discovered that what he bought was not of so much importance to him as the privilege of spending. Some boys are that way, you know, even after they grow up. Well, we hit upon the idea of buying Thrift Stamps. He made his penny and nickel deposits in a novelty bank and when he accumulated a quarter we took him to the postoffice and showed him where he could spend it. There was a thrill in pushing that quarter through the window, watching the clerk count all those coins he treasured, and then in dealing with the government, of standing in line with business men of the town and grown women and spending his money at the same window and in much the same way that they did.

"Of course it required a little salesmanship on the part of the old man to keep a live youngster pleased with this procedure, but it worked pretty well and finally he had enough small stamps to secure a big $5.00 one, and in time he discovered that the day we had talked about when he might get a real bond had arrived. What a day that was! He had thrift stamps enough to convert into a $100.00 bond! Mister, we sure celebrated that occasion.

"Well, this bonding business is big business. It was time now to start talking about a second bond, and so the lesson in thrift went on and the boy spent a lot of money and did some trading in stamps, got the pleasure a boy wants and should have in spending money and still he has the money and some interest besides. He spent his money and still kept it."

"Depression Villages" Inhabited by Jobless Along Mississippi River—Newspapers There Are "Hoover Blankets"

Washington, D. C. — "Depression Villages bearing the ironic names of "Happyland," "Merryland," "Hooverville" and "Hoover Heights" on the banks of the Mississippi River within the city limits of St. Louis are described in a recent issue of the St. Louis Star.

The inhabitants, according to the reporter for the Star, are for the most part, hard-working people, formerly employed, but now jobles. One of these described as an engineer forty-three years old, who had worked all his life until let out as a result of the depression gave the reason for the existence of these improvised settlements, saying: "Landlords want rent and we can't pay. Here on the city's land, we can live free, except for food."

The shacks in "Hooverville" are referred to as "cigar boxes." The reporter found sixty-five of these facing on the rover, some neat and orderly and others made of junk and debris.

"Merryland," even larger than "Happyland," is a succession of shanty boats, moored along the bank of the river, and of dug-outs in the river bank. An illustration shows a hut there built of stone, with a large portable rock at the entrance to serve as a door. Another picture shows a jobless young husband with his wife and three small children aboard a shanty boat.

The Star's reporter describes an incident which evolves a new depression phrase coined in "Hooverville." One inhabitant picked up a bundle of newspapers in front of a shack, when the occupant of the shack called out "Here, where are you going with my blankets?" He explaintd to the reporter: "Down in these parts, we call newspapers "Hoover blankets."

That we think with loving remembrance of his many years of service in our Lodge work.

That an expression of sympathy be extended to his family.

That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of our Lodge, and that they be published in each of our County papers.

HOPES WANING OF LEGISLATION TOENRICHSTATE

Extra Session Not Likely While Bloc Holds Out Against Tax Measures

By Atticus Mullin
In The Montgomery Advertiser

The financial plight of the schools and of the highway department, which has already resulted in serious curtailment by the highway department and which is expected to result in curtailment of school sessions, is not a surprise to those who keep in touch with the financial affairs of the State and it should not surprise those members of the Legislature who steadfastly refused to heed the warning of Gov. Miller and the expert accountant staff of the State.

And a careful study reveals that nothing can be done about the State's finances if the Legislature, or, that is, the majority of the Senate, continues to stand steadfastly against all relief plans. And if information trickling in to the Capitol during the last week is accurate, and it is generally believed to be, the majority member of the Senate are not yet ready to do anything about conditions.

In the matter of economy, Gov. Miller has done all that he can do, cutting down the salaried personnel of the State by 591 persons and saving approximately $1,000,000 a year through such cutting and other economies. But that $1,000,000 per annum saving is not a drop in the bucket when there is stacked up against it the $20,000,000 deficit the State will face October 1.

Revenues Shriveling

Legislative appropriations were not reduced but the income of the State the coming fiscal year will fall off approximately $2,000,000 from the normal income. That $2,000,000, with appropriations remaining as they are, will further serve to increase the financial difficulties of the State. As has been frequently printed, every item of State income is falling. Naturally, property taxation is falling more slowly than special forms of taxation but this form of revenue will fall more rapidly next year as values are reduced. The $1,000,000 a year increase in the valuations of the Alabama Power Company will nowhere near offset general property value decreases in the various counties as assessments on property in these counties are expected to fall next year more than five per cent and perhaps 10 per cent, which will result in a total decrease in State valuations of considerably more than $75,000,000. The only forms of property values that will not decrease will be those of the railroads, large corporations and public utilities that are assessed by the State Tax Commission. Real estate holdings and farm holdings will show a large decrease next year when the assessment returns are all in. These decreases will affect the schools more than any other State agency because they will be reflected in decreased district school tax receipts in the various counties.

Bloc Unchanged

From what can be learned there is little hope of the "21 Governors" as the Senate bloc is generally called, weakening on an income tax. An income tax, it is estimated, would bring into the treasury something like $2,250,000 a year now and this amount would not serve to even up things with such a large deficit. In other words, if the State's back debts are paid, those inherited from a previous administration, there will be no money for any State activity in a short while. Of course these back debts cannot be paid in full but some of them will have to be paid. But even if all of the back debts of the State were paid by some kind philanthropist, the State would still lack money for its necessary activities such as schools, roads, etc., because the income of the State is steadily falling while the appropriations remain at the normal level.

The last Legislature turned a deaf ear to an increase in the list of the so called "nuisance taxes." Such taxes as those on soft drinks, candy, cosmetics, theater and amusement admission and similar objects, had thumbs turned down on them by the Legislature. And the income tax met a similar fate even though it was finally adopted but killed by the Supreme Court. If it had been ratified in the form submitted by the Legislature, with big decreases in general property taxes, the resultant sum from the income tax would have been more than offset by the decrease in the amount received from property taxes.

Gov. Miller, students of the State's finances assert, can do nothing towards remedying the financial condition of the State without the cooperation of the Legislature and there is no indication that he would receive such cooperation from the Senate, at least, if the Legislature were called back. In other words, the Legislature is the only branch of the government now that can remedy the financial situation and there will be no cooperation between the Legislature and the Governor in the event of an extra session, at least not now.

Gov. Miller was in a humor 30 days ago to call the Legislature into session at once to attempt to remedy the financial situation but found on investigation that he would not have the cooperation of the Senate in the event of such a call and it was deferred. He has not indicated when he will call it, if ever. He does not want to saddle extra expense on the State unless results can be obtained. It is known he would call it soon if he could secure cooperation.

COOLER WEATHER TENDS TO QUICKEN FALL BUYING

Trade Retarded Because Of Heat, To Become Aggressive

Purchases of Fall goods, retarded because of the extreme heat during the past month, will be greatly stimulated, due to the arrival of cool weather, most of the merchants and business men predict over the South.

One merchant was known to express that all during September no one did any shopping if it could be avoided. Women stayed at home, due to the sizzling heat, and had no desire to purchase Fall goods at that time, but now with the coming of cool, pleasant weather, buying is believed to be on the upgrade in many items.

Following are some comments made recently by some of the leading merchants and department stores in Birmingham:

"The coming of Autumn will improve the tendency to buy heavier goods." We could feel the effect of the change in weather in our sales Saturday, and expect it to last and improve still more. The weather is bound to bring out seasonable business that has been held back by hot weather."

"The season has been delayed as everyone knows." We should see a decided change in buying now. I know the cooler weather can't help but stimulate the demand for seasonable goods."

"Business will improve considerably as soon as people realize Fall is here. This weather will put people in a buying mood, and there is sure to be a steady improvement."

"I expect quite a pick up with cooler weather. People have been holding off on heavier merchandise, and I expect a stimulant in all buying."

Hot Weather Blamed

"Hot weather has kept people away that wanted to buy. It was so hot people stayed at home. We expect to do a good business now that Autumn weather has arrived."

"Conditions were off last month, attributable to unseasonable hot weather. We are expecting real business now and things will be better in every line. There has been very little Fall buying so far."

"This weather is just what we need to start things rolling. The cool weather will start people buying what they need. They are not going to buy what they don't need, but the average man's wardrobe needs bolstering up. When the break came, people were like stores. They were overstocked. This surplus has been used up in the past two years and replacement of normal needs will bring normal business. People have not been buying the past two years because they didn't have to buy. As long as a man has a reserve, he doesn't have to go into the market. Now that the reserves have been used up, and Fall weather has arrived, I expect a material stimulant in business and a move towards normalcy."

"It can be assumed that cool weather will stimulate business to a considerable extent. While there has been considerable Fall buying, it has not been to the extent that it will be now that cooler weather has arrived."

Purchases of Autumn goods, retarded in many cities because of the extended Summer weather, are expected to pick up immediately, according to The Associated Press which made a survey of the effect of the cool wave.

Merchants throughout Dixie said they weer jubilant over the South's first real touch of Autumn weather.

"This weather is just what we have been waiting for." Merchants in various lines of trade in other cities made similar comment.

Advertising Planned

"Business will be decidedly differtn from now on. Merchants have been waiting for a change in temperature and it will be welcomed. We are planning to advertise Fall and Winter goods."

Merchants in Clanton and Chilton County should be able to readily see the situation now facing them in the upturn of Fall business and prepare to take advantage of all possible, through the use of extensive advertising from now until next January or February.

It is believed business in this immediate section is now picking up to such an extent that it is quite noticeable, and will continue to show up well throughout the remainder of this year, with a slight drop after January.

New Rainbow Division Hailed

Widespread interest and enthusiasm is being manifested over the State in the proposal to have the 167th Infantry, Alabama National Guard, assigned to the reorganized Rainbow or 42nd Division, according to Col. W. P. Screws, the wartime colonel of the famous Alabama fighting unit. The militia bureau at Washington has decided to reorganize the Rainbow Division, and thereby perpetuate as a unit of the national defense one of the outstanding combat divisions of the World War.

News of this action has been received with hearty approval by officers and men of the 167th and by other Alabamians who are proud of its outstanding record, and who wish to see the regiment form a part in peace, as it did in war, of the historic 42nd Division.

Col. Screws said yesterday officers of the old 167th would call on Gov. Miller in a body at an early date and request him to direct his adjutant general, Col. Hartley A. Moon, to assign the regiment to the reorganized Rainbow Division. The State convention of Rainbow Division veterans recently went on record as favoring such action.

The original Rainbow or 42nd Division was composed of fighting units of the National Guard of some 26 states, and Alabama was considered signally honored in having one of its regiments chosen from her native sons. The idea back of the organization of the Rainbow Division was to promote a spirit of national unity and exemplify the common interest of the nation in the conflict then raging by obliterating sectional lines.

STATE FERTILIZER BILL REDUCED BY $7,829,000

Alabama farmers spent $7,829,000 less for commercial fertilizer used on cotton this year than they spent last year according to the Department of Agriculture. State farmers last year spent $14,385,000 for commercial fertilizers used on cotton while this year they spent $6,569,000.

Not only did Alabama reduce its fertilizer bill but all cotton growing states did likewise with total reduction of $38,658,000. Last year the south spent $75,607,000 for commercial fertilizers to use on cotton compared with $36,949,000 spent for the same purpose this year.

Of the 3,410,000 acres of Alabama land in cotton this year 76 per cent or 2,592,000 acres received fertilizer. Last year 3,486,000 acres or 92 per cent of the 3,789,000 acres planted to cotton were fertilized. The average cost for fertilizer was $2.53 per acre this year compared with $4.13 last year. State farmers applied 213 pounds of fertilizer per acre compared with 262 pounds last year.

F. W. Gist, agricultural statistician shows that this year Alabama farmers used 425,000 tons of commercial fertilizer. Of this 322,000 were used on cotton and 103,000 on other crops. These figures compare with 646,000 tons used last year—513,000 on cotton, 133,000 on other crops.

THE ROAD TO BEAUTY

Artists and other beauty connoisseurs have declared that beauty in girls depends more on health and living habits than on any other factors. Home economic experts of University Farm, Minnesota, seem to agree with this conclusion and recently pointed out the qualifications for a good-looking girl.

They include a clear smooth skin; bright, clear eyes; glossy hair; strong white teeth; firm, strong muscles; a good posture, sitting or standing; normal weight; happy, good-natured disposition, with energy and pep for work and play. To aid in attaining these, the following recipe is offered:

Nine hours sleep with windows open every night. Play or work outdoors at least an hour every day. Three regular meals every day. Some suggestions for diet are quoted:

"Milk, cocoa or some other substitute should be used instead of tea or coffee; vegetable other than potato instead of a second helping of meat; as much dark bread as white; dark breakfast food as often as light; green vegetables or salad daily; fruit dessert instead of pie, cake or pudding; fruit, milk and cereal for breakfast instead of griddle cakes, sausage and coffee; fruit, bread and butter, or milk for lunches, instead of candy, pop, hot dogs or ice cream.'

This seems like a sensible program and one within the reach of all, well worth the effort required, considering the prize at stake.

ORCHARD SOILS

Many orchard soils have become unproductive because of lack of organic matter. Fruit spur and terminal growth on the trees are short; the bark becomes tight; the fruit doesn't size up; fruit may crack in summer following rainy periods which come after severe dry spells; die-back or rosette may appear on the terminals; top and root injuries may occur in winter; and sometimes there is no response from nitrogen fertilizer. Supply organic matter either by growing heavy sod in sod orchards or by turning under heavy cover crops in cultivated orchards, advise horticulturists.

3 RULES
big help to BOWELS

What a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:

1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour every day.

Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwells' Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleaning-out, and it won't leave your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin, and other helpful ingredients that couldn't hurt a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels! How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

ALABAMA ALONE TO USE BLACK ON WHITE IN 1932 AUTO PLATES

While several states will share the reverse order of Alabama's 1932 automobile license plate scheme, Alabama alone will have black numerals on a white blackground, according to information released by the American Automobile Association.

Thirty-one states will change the color combination of their license plates next year, and 23 different color motifs will be used, an indication that almost every hue will be represented in the 1932 parade.

The survey revealed that first rank will be divided between two color combinations, with white on black (the reverse of Alabama's motif) and white on blue each being adopted by six states. White on black predominated in 1931.

Second honors will go to black on yellow, white on green and yellow on black combinations, which will each be used by four states. Black on orange and white on maroon will each be used by three states.

Among Alabama's neighbors, Mississippi will have gold on black; Louisiana white on red; Georgia, white on blue; Florida, yellow on black, and Tennessee, black on yellow. North Carolina also will employ a black and gold motif but will use it in the reverse order to that of Mississippi.

Alabama's new color scheme is advantageous, automobile owners state, because black and white will blend with any color motif used in decoration of the automobile.

State of Alabama

A PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama at its last session ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which proposed amendment is herein set out, and ordered that the election be held on the Second Tuesday after the expiration of three months from and after the final adjournment of the regular session at which the said amendment was proposed, and

WHEREAS, as provided by Section 287 of the Constitution of Alabama, the Act proposing the amendment was not submitted for the approval of the Governor but was valid upon its adoption by the Legislature without his approval, and

WHEREAS, the Legislature adjourned on Saturday the 25th day of July, 1931, and Tuesday, the 3rd day of November, 1931, is the second Tuesday after the expiration of three months from and after the final adjournment of the said Legislature at which the amendment was proposed, and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, B. M. Miller, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that on Tuesday the 3rd day of November, 1931, an election will be held at the several polling places within the State of Alabama for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama in the manner and form as required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz:—

"ARTICLE XX-B. Section 1. The State is authorized to engage in the construction, improvement, repair and maintenance of public roads, highways and bridges in the State of Alabama. To this end and for these purposes, the State is authorized to appropriate funds and for constructional purposes only the State is authorized also to issue and sell interest-bearing negotiable State bonds in addition to those already authorized and sold under Article XX and XX-A, as amendments to the Constitution of 1901, in an amount not to exceed the sum of twenty-five million dollars ($25,000,000.00), to be issued under such denominations, numbers and series, maturing at such times as may be provided by law, and all such bonds shall bear a rate of interest not greater than six per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, and shall be sold at a price not less than par value thereof.

Section 2. The State Highway Commission or Highway Department shall locate, construct and maintain highways, bridges and State trunk roads so as to connect each county seat with the county seat of the adjoining county by the most direct or most feasible route by a permanent road, having due regard for the public welfare, and shall connect the county seats of the several border counties at/or near the state line with a public highway in the border states. Provided, that in counties which are divided into two or more judicial divisions in each of which regular terms of the circuit court are held, the places where said terms of court are held, shall likewise be connected with each other.

Section 3. The proceeds of said bonds shall be used for constructing and/or surfacing of roads and constructing and/or repairing bridges, but not for maintenance or discharging of contract debts, liability or obligations existing prior to the adoption of this amendment.

Section 4. Eighteen million four hundred twenty-five thousand dollars ($18,425,000.00) of the proceeds of said bonds shall be set aside by the Governor and apportioned in amounts of Two Hundred seventy-five thousand dollars ($275,000.00) to each of the respective counties of the State which must be expended by the State Highway Commission or Highway Department in each of said counties for construction, which shall include hard surfacing, of existing and also new public roads and bridges therein. The remaining proceeds of said bonds shall be used for the construction, which shall include surfacing, of existing, or new highways and constructing or repairing bridges in the State.

Section 5. The proceeds of such bonds shall be kept separate and apart from all other funds and no part of the same shall ever be used in honoring a warrant not legally drawn against such proceeds.

Section 6. There is hereby levied and every distributor, retail dealer or storer shall pay an excise tax of one cent per gallon upon the selling, distributing or withdrawing from storage for any use gasoline, provided, however, that the excise tax is not levied upon the sale of gasoline in interstate commerce, and provided further that where this excise tax shall have been paid by a distributor or by a retail dealer or storer such payment shall be sufficient, the intention being that this tax shall not be paid but once. The terms 'distributor', 'retail dealer', 'storer', 'selling', 'distributing', 'withdrawing' and 'gasoline' are used as the same are used in existing gasoline excise tax laws of the State and shall be so construed, and all rights, duties, liabilities, penalties, powers and methods pertaining to the collection of gasoline excise taxes under such existing laws of the State shall apply to the collection, payment and accounting for the within excise tax, provided, the Legislature may limit, extend or further define the same. The excise tax of one cent herein levied shall be in addition to the excise gasoline taxes provided by existing laws of the State, but this section shall not be construed in any way as limiting the power of the Legislature to increase or decrease this or any other gasoline tax.

Section 7. The one cent excise tax hereinbefore levied shall be used first to create a sinking fund for the prompt and faithful payment of the principal and the interest on the bonds herein authorized, and, second, by the State for the construction, improvement, repair and maintenance of public roads, highways and bridges of this State.

Section 8. The bonds herein authorized when issued shall be a direct obligation of the State, and for the prompt and faithful payment of the principal and interest thereon the full faith and credit of the State is hereby irrevocably pledged and such bonds shall be exempt forever from taxes of every kind.

Section 9. The bonds herein authorized shall be issued and sold in the same manner by a Bond Commission as set forth, defined and prescribed in Article 5 of Chapter 32, Code of Alabama, 1923.

Section 10. That House Bill No. 1204 by Mr. Tunstall, if and when passed by both houses of the Legislature of Alabama of 1931 and approved by the Governor and being, "A bill to be entitled an act to impose, for the use and purpose of surviving, preserving, maintaining, constructing and regulating the use of public roads and bridges in the State of Alabama, an excise tax on all persons, companies, agencies, corporations, and associations who sell, distribute, store or draw from storage for any purpose whatsoever, gasoline or any other liquid motor fuels or devices or any substitute therefor within the State of Alabama; providing for the collection of such excise tax and the payment of same into the State Treasury; providing for the enforcement of this act and fixing a penalty for the violation of the provisions hereof; providing that the said excise tax so imposed shall be in addition to all other excise tax now imposed by law; and, providing that freight agents or railroads and all agents of all transportation companies operating within the State of Alabama and who transport motor fuels shall report to the State Tax Commission all shipments of gasoline or any substitute therefor, received at any of their stations within the State", be and the same is hereby ratified, confirmed and validated and made constitutional as a law, and such ratification, confirmation, validation and constitutionally as a law, shall, according to the terms thereof when finally passed, in the manner aforesaid, take effect and be effective on the day of the passage of said bill by both houses of the Legislature of Alabama of 1931, and approved by the Governor, as fully as if said bill was set out in words and figures herein."

I further direct and proclaim that notices of the election, upon the above set forth amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, be given by publishing the same once a week for eight consecutive weeks prior to the 3rd day of November, 1931, in each county of the State of Alabama in a newspaper published in said county.

Down On The Farm

Down on the farm 'bout half past four,
I slip on my pants and sneak out the door;
Out in the yard I run like the dickens
To milk all the cows and feed all the chickens,
Clean out the barnyard, curry Maggie and Jiggs
Separate the cream, and slop all the pigs;
Hustle two hours, then eat like a Turk,
By heck, I am ready for a full day's work.
Then I grease the wagon and put on the rack
Throw a jug of water in the old grain sack,
Hitch up the mules, slip down the lane,
Must get the hay in, looks like rain.
Look over yonder, sure as I am born,
Cows on the rampage, hogs in the corn.
Back with the mules, then for recompense
Maggie gets a-straddle the barb-wire fence.
Joints all aching, muscles in a jerk,
Whoop! Fit as a fiddle for a full day's work.
Work all the summer till winter is nigh
Then figure at the bank and heave a big sigh.
Worked all the year, didn't make a thing,
Less cash now than I had last spring.
Some folks say there ain't no hell,
Shucks; They never farmed; how can they tell?
When spring rolls 'round I take another chance
As fuzz grows longer on my old gray pants.
Give my galluses a hitch, belt another jerk,
By gosh! I am ready for a full year's work.

MANY SCALES INACCURATE

Much produce is weighed inaccurately on the farm because of the mistaken idea that a scale which balances is accurate. Livestock weight supervisors of the U. S. Department of Agriculture say that a scale that balances with the platform empty is not necessarily accurate and may have serious defects. For instance, the weight of both sliding and counterpoise weights of an accurate scale in good condition can be reduced by half, the scale made to balance correctly with the platform empty, and the weights yet be so completely wrong that a 100-pound load will appear to weigh 200 pounds. Errors like this actually occur, if counterpoise weights belonging to one scale are used on another scale designed for a different counterpoise ratio. Similar errors may arise from losing poise parts or having repairs made by inexperienced or unreliable persons. Another reason why scales go wrong is that hay, straw, string, paper, and even nests of rats and mice accumulate around the levers. Another thing of equal importance which should be kept in mind is that a scale may also be very sensitive, readily showing a pound or less applied on the platform, and yet give weights in error by many pounds.

CHAPTER L

The Germans had a preponderance of 323,000 rifles March 21, 1918, and although this number had decreased they still had a superiority of about 200,000 May 27. July 15 this was changed and the allies then had the superiority by the same number. In other words, the Germans were relatively worse off by 523,000 rifles in July than in March.

This was accounted for almost entirely by the great increase in the numbers of Americans. The French and British had not been able to add to their strength, but, on the contrary, they were being reduced faster than the Germans.

The German offensive south of Rheims, July 15-16, having been checked, the moment was favorable for an allied counteroffensive. The selection by the Germans of the Champagne sector and the eastern and southern faces of the Marne pocket on which to make their offensive was fortunate for the allies, as it favored the counterattack already planned.

We shall now see the reason for the concentration of several American divisions southwest of Soissons. Some of them were available for use in the main counterstroke, to be delivered by the French Tenth army under Mangin. The American First and Second divisions were hastily assembled to form the American Third corps under General Bullard. But his corps staff had not yet been fully organized and these divisions, by his direction, under discretionary authority given by me, became a part of the French Twentieth corps, commanded by General Berdoulat.

Form Spearhead of Attack.

This corps then was composed of these two divisions and the French First Moroccan division, which had a fine reputation, and was assigned to the most important position in the attack on the left center of the Tenth army. The three divisions mentioned had the honor of being the spearhead of the thrust against the vulnerable flank of the salient. The line of advance ran eastward over the commanding plateau just south of Soissons, and across the main road leading from that place to Chateau Thierry.

The First had recently been relieved from the Cantigny sector and was en route to a rest area. It was scattered throughout the Dammartin area, just north of Meaux, when it received orders July 13 to move by truck to the front. After a hurried departure the advance troops arrived at dawn the 16th at the forest of Retz (or forest of Villers-Cotterets) and during the night the division moved to the front of the forest. The night of July 17 it went forward over muddy and congested roads, the columns of infantry working their way to the front, where they arrived in the nick of time.

The Second division was at Montreuil-aux-Lions in reserve of the First corps, recuperating, when the order came on the 14th to move by truck toward the front. Dawn July 17 found the infantry and machine-gun elements arriving at the forest of Villers-Cotterets. The night of the 17th the movement toward the front, through the forest, was made with extreme difficulty. The narrow roads became jammed, troops lost their direction and there was serious doubt whether they would be at their line of departure at the appointed hour of 4:35 a. m., the 18th.

Proceed Against Odds.

With most commendable energy and initiative the officers led their commands forward during the night, winding in and out through the almost inextricable snarls of wheeled vehicles. One of the battalions assigned to lead in the attack, though on the march most of the night, was forced to move on the run for the last few hundred yards, and just reached its place as the barrage started.

The Second division headquarters found itself July 16 with no knowledge of the terrain and little obtainable from any source. Harbord and his chief of staff, Col. Preston Brown, started for the front and accidentally ran into the headquarters of the Twentieth corps. They there found the directive for the attack, from which they issued the division's orders.

The country over which the Twentieth corps attacked consisted of a succession of wooded ravines that lay across the line of advance, with scarcely any roads leading toward the front. The enemy's main defenses along the ridges of the Soissons plateau were naturally strong, and with the added intrenchments the enemy evidently felt himself reasonably secure. It was harvest time and the ripening wheat that covered the rolling landscape gave excellent cover for the enemy's infantry and machine guns, but it also helped to hide our advance.

Enemy Caught by Surprise.

Without the usual preliminary artillery preparation, the assaulting battalions, accompanied by light tanks, plunged forward behind the barrage. The enemy was caught by surprise and the First and Second divisions, gallantly supported by the Moroccan division in the center, soon overran his forward positions and broke through the zone of his light artillery. Though constantly confronted by fresh enemy troops, this corps took the lead in the advance and its progress was most satisfactory. By noon it had captured half of the great plateau in its front, with many prisoners, and a little later forward elements reached the day's objective.

The Second division encountered strong opposition at Vierzy. In a determined effort launched after 6 p. m. the town was captured and a line overlooking the valley of the Crise was occupied. The First division had carried everything before it, capturing defended farm houses and other points where it met stiff resistance, finally taking Missy-aux-Bois and holding a front line slightly beyond that town. The line ran diagonally across the Paris-Soissons road.

The attack of the corps was resumed the morning of July 19, but during the night the German lines directly in front of Soissons had been heavily reinforced with machine guns and artillery. In their advance the French One Hundred Fifty-third division and the First division met with much resistance, the Second brigade of the First encountering fire of the enemy both from the front and the left flank. Tanks were sent to its assistance and with close artillery support the division was enabled slowly to gain ground, but at considerable cost.

The Second division, with the reserves of the first day in the lead, forged ahead to the Soissons-Chateau Thierry road but was compelled to withdraw to the vicinity of La Raperie. It finally established a line just west of Tigny, with the road under its guns. The division was relieved by the French Fifty-eighth division the night of the 19th, having advanced six and one-half miles, captured 3,000 prisoners and seventy-five guns, and sustained about 5,000 casualties.

First Division Makes Advance.

July 20 the First division continued its advance doggedly against a desperate stand by the Germans on the knoll in front of Berzay-le-Sec. The French had been ordered to take Berzy-le-Sec, but failed. In the afternoon Summerall directed that it be assaulted by his Second brigade, but the attempt did not succeed that day. Assisted by the skillful use of artillery and with consummate dash, under Brig. Gen. B. B. Buck, in the face of intense artillery and machine-gun fire, the Second brigade captured the town on the 21st. Meanwhile, the First brigade and the French Eighty-seventh division, which had relieved the Moroccans, had crossed the Soissons-Chateau Thierry highway and reached the Chateau of Buzancy. The line now ran parallel to the Crise, with Soissons commanded by our artillery.

The First division, throughout four days of constant fighting, had advanced nearly seven miles, taken 3,500 prisoners and sixty-eight guns from seven different German divisions employed against it, and had about 7,200 casualties.

The thrust of the Twentieth corps was conducted with such magnificent dash and power that the enemy's position within the salient was rendered untenable. The dangerous character of the threat caused the crown prince to begin a general withdrawal from the Marne. This operation snatched the initiative from the enemy almost in an instant and from that moment he was on the defensive.

Our First and Second divisions, with the Moroccan division between them, had struck the decisive blow that turned the tide of the war. Petain said it could not have been done without our divisions.

On the other side the German chancellor, Von Hertling, said later: "We expected grave events in Paris for the end of July. That was on the 15th. On the 18th even the most optimistic among us understood that all was lost. The history of the world was played out in three days."

CHAPTER LI

American participation in the second Marne offensive, which began July 18, 1918, and turned the tide of war in favor of the allies, was not limited to the operations of the First and Second divisions. While this bitter contest was being waged for the possession of the crucial point near Soissons the troops around the rim of the salient had been steadily driving ahead.

The Fourth division (Cameron), less its artillery, fought at first with the French. The Seventh brigade was attacked to the Second corps, French Sixth army, the Forty-seventh infantry in reserve, and the Thirty-ninth assigned to the French Thirty-third division.

In the attack of July 18 this regiment cleaned up the wood in its front, captured Noroy, and extended the line to the south. On the 18th the regiment went forward about two and one-half miles on a front 1,000 yards north of the Ourcq. It was relieved the morning of the 20th and went to the reserve.

The Eighth brigade was assigned to the French One Hundred Sixty-fourth division, the Fifty-ninth regiment in reserve. In the attack of the 18th, the Fifty-eighth regiment assisted in the capture of Hautevesnes and Courchamps, took Chevillon and made further substantial gains. The Fifty-ninth regiment was put in the front line during the night of July 18-19, relieving the Fifty-eighth, and on the 19th, advancing with the division, gained two miles. On the 20th, with two battalions of the Fifty-ninth in line, the advance was carried well to the east of Sommelans. The brigade was relieved from the front line July 21.

Twenty-sixth Division Participates.

Coincident with these advances on the 18th, the First corps (Liggett), serving with the French sixth army division and composed of our Twenty-sixth division and the French One Hundred Sixty-seventh division, also became a part of the movement. The Twenty-sixth division occupied the line it had taken over from the Second division July 10. The plan for the July 18 offensive contemplated a deep penetration south of Soissons by the French Tenth army, supported on the right by the French Sixth army, extending the attack as far south as Bouresches.

The Fifty-second brigade, Twenty-sixth division, captured the villages of Torcy and Belleau, and one battalion reached the base of the dominating Hill 193. Elements of the brigade reached the railroad, but severe flank fire drove them to the starting point.

On the 19th the advance of the Twenty-sixth was contingent upon the success of the French One Hundred Sixty-seventh division on its left, but that division failed to take its objectives and the Twenty-sixth did not attack. On the 20th the One Hundred Sixty-seventh was held up again, exposing the left of the division to heavy flank fire and preventing more than a slight gain. Farther to the right the Twenty-sixth succeeded in taking Gonetrie farm, and got a foothold on Hill 190.

Reach New German Line.

When the attack began on the 21st it was found that the Germans had withdrawn the night before, and the Twenty-sixth moved forward with little or no opposition until it reached the new German lines at l'Hermitage-Epieds-Mont St. Pere, east of the Soissons-Chateau-Thierry highway. On the 22nd it captured Trugny and got a foothold in Epieds, but was forced by a strong German counterattack to retire to Bretuil wood. The Fifty-second brigade was also driven back to its starting point.

The attack renewed on the 23rd was successful, one regiment reaching the Epieds-Mont St. Pere road, but in the afternoon it was forced to retire. That night the Fifty-second brigade was replaced by the Fifty-sixth brigade, Tweny-eighth division. When the latter launched its attack the morning of the 24th, it was found that the enemy had withdrawn and he was not again encountered until the pursuers, including part of the Fifty-first brigade, Twenty-sixth division, reached Croix Rouge farm.

During its offensive action beginning with the 18th, the Twenty-sixth division had progressed nearly eleven miles and had captured 250 prisoners and four pieces of artillery. Since its occupation of the sector July 10 it had suffered about 5,000 casualties. The division was relieved, together with the Fifty-sixth brigade, Twenty-eighth division, by the Eighty-fourth brigade, Forty-second division, which took over the sector on the 25th. The Eighty-fourth brigade, Forty-second division, replaced two French divisions, which were pinched out by the shortening of the line. On the 27th, the Forty-second division occupied the entire front of the First corps, about two miles in extent.

Enemy Fights Desperately.

The enemy's defeat in front of the Twentieth corps (American First and Second divisions and First Moroccan division) was the principal cause of the withdrawal of his armies, but he fought desperately from position to position and his retirement was being skillfully conducted to save men and material from capture.

In the counteroffensive of July 18 no operations were ordered for French or American troops east of Chateau Thierry, leaving them an opportunity to readjust their lines. On the 20th, patrols from the Third division discovered that the Germans had withdrawn across the Marne the night before and the division at once advanced its line to the river. The night of July 20th the Germans further withdrew to the line Charteves-Ridge, north of Mont St. Pere, connecting with their line of resistance in front of our First corps.

July 21 the Fifth brigade crossed the Marne in pursuit, capturing Mont St. Pere and driving machine guns out of Charteves. The Sixth brigade waited for the bridge to be completed at Mezy and the morning of the 22nd one regiment crossed the river and captured Jaulgonne. The Germans were contesting every step, and while the First battalion of this regiment reached Le Charmel it was compelled to retire by successive positions to Jaulgonne.

On the 26th operations planned in co-operation with the French Thirty-ninth and the American Forty-second on its left were only partly successful. The Forty-second captured the strongly held Croix Rouge farm, but the French Thirty-ninth division could not advance. The leading battalions of the Fifth brigade entered Le Charmel, but not being able to debouch from the town they were withdrawn after dark. During the night the hard-pressed Germans retired to the Ourcq, leaving machine guns behind to delay our advance.

July 27 the French Thirty-ninth division took up the pursuit, followed by the Fifty-fifth brigade, Twenty-eighth division, which relieved the French Thirty-ninth that night at Courmont. The Fifth brigade, Third division, advanced on the right to protect this movement and occupied a line running southeast from Courmont through Villardelle. During the morning of the 28th, the Fifth brigade captured Roncheres, and the Twenty-eighth division reached the Ourcq, but was unable to hold its gains north of the river. On the 29th the Third division occupied an irregular line beyond Roncheres, but neither that unit nor the Twenty-eighth division on its left was able to make material progress against the Bois des Grimpettes that day.

Third Division Relieved.

The Third division was relieved by the Thirty-second on the 30th and retired south of the Marne. It had taken a decisive part in stopping the last German offensive and had advanced ten miles through difficult country, stubbornly defended by the enemy. It had suffered casualties to the number of about 6,000 officers and men.

The Forty-second division, as we have seen, had come from the French Fourth army to the Marne salient and had relieved the Twenty-sixth division in the First corps. In the advance that followed it had gallantly captured Croix Rouge farm on the 26th, and on the following day had cleared the Foret de Fere, captured Villers-sur-Fere and had reached the Ourcq. July 28 the Forty-second established a line beyond the Ourcy and on the 29th the Fourth division, in support of the Forty-second division, captured Sergy, while the latter took Seringes-et-Nesles.

The enemy made a determined stand along the Ourcq river and some of the hardest fighting of the period occurred at this time. August 3 the Fourth division relieved the Forty-second. The Third corps (Bullard), with the American Twenty-eighth and Thirty-second divisions, relieved the French Thirty-eighth corps on the right of our First corps. Once established beyond the Ourcq, our two corps advanced rapidly toward the Vesle river, meeting with little opposition.

We had in all nine American divisions, equal to eighteen French divisions, engaged in this second battle of the Marne. This force, together with the staff, supply, medical troops and aviation, amounted to a total force of nearly 300,000 actively employed during that period. We suffered 65,000 casualties.

Brief News Notes

Sweets in liquid form are being sold by Alabama farmers this fall. They have both sorghum and sugar cane syrups for sop'n' at home plus enough for their urban friends. The Extension Service of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn is helping them to sell it.

The Progressive Farmer, a conservative and also a progressive farm paper published at Birmingham, favors a federal act reducing cotton acreage next year to two-thirds of the 1931 acreage; and, if necessary, a 15 per cent reduction in 1933 from the 1932 acreage.

Movement of the Alabama cotton crop from fields to gins and into trade continues slow, according to reports from over the state received at Auburn. Farmers are very reluctant to gin and sell at present prices. The Farm Bureau Cotton Association at Montgomery offers an opportunity to pool, draw an advance, and retain an equity.

The proposal of Governor Huey Long of Louisiana for a cotton production holiday was decisively rejected by the Texas legislature, thereby killing the proposition from a national standpoint. Without Texas, where a third of the cotton is produced, a cotton holiday would not be effective. That state expects, however, a substantial reduction in the acreage next year.

EFFECTS OF TOBACCO

Almost anything can be proved by examples and statistics. This appears to be particularly true with respect to the effects of tobacco, which have long been the subject of investigations by physicians and scientists.

So far as physical consequences go, the effects of smoking seem to depend largely upon the individual concerned. Many who have lived to extreme old age were users of the weed, while others of equal longevity were not. The concensus of scientific opinion is that tobacco exerts little influence upon the intellectual powers.

Among outstanding figures of the past who were smokers may be mentioned Washington, Bismarck, Kitchener, Spurgeon, Huxley, Keats, Browning, Carlyle, Emerson, Dickens, Tennyson, Grant and Mark Twain, the last two being inordinate users of tobacco.

Some prominent non-smokers were Lincoln, Roosevelt, Wilson, Greeley, Wellington, Tolstoi, Ruskin, Haeckel and Whittier.

In the present day relatively few persons refrain from the use of tobacco, since the cigarette has become so popular with persons of both sexes and practically all ages.

Although it can not be said that smoking is really beneficial to anyone, and while it is no doubt injurious to the young, its detrimental effects upon mature persons have perhaps been greatly exaggerated.

Senior III Class of C. C. H. S. Dedicates Electric System of Program Clock To The High School

It is traditional of all high schools for the Senior Class to make some dedication to the school when it graduates. Our class plans to make their gift now so they can enjoy it this year. The clock has been ordered and it will arrive in about two weeks. It will cost $325. The company will accept State warrants which will be one half to be paid by the State. The Senior class will be responsible for the remaining $162.50.

This clock system contains a large clock, a small clock, and three bells. The large clock is five feet six inches high and will be placed in the main hall. The small clock will be installed in the auditorium. At the end of each period the bells ring and a warning bell rings also five minutes before the close of the period.

The electric clock system is not complete but the Senior Class wishes to install the remaining part of the system at the end of the school year if they are able financially.

Mr. Riddle Visits School

Among the early visitors to our school this year was the State School Inspector, Mr. J. I. Riddle. He spent the entire day with us.

At chapel he gave a delightful talk. His subject was the following quotation: "Make every occasion a great occasion, for you do not know when fate may be taking your measure for a large place." We are glad to state that Mr. Riddle was favorably impressed with the improvement made at our school since his last visit.

C. C. H. S. Glee Club

A Glee Club under the direction of Miss Mary Ellis has been organized. Two meetings have been held. Plans are being made for a program at assembly and for an entertainment to which the public will be invited some time soon. Officers of the club are: Sallye Mahan, president; Eloise Jones, vice-president; Mary Nell Jones, secretary-treasurer; Hilda Hart, reporter; and Helen Moore, librarian. Members are Sallye Mahan, Eloise Jones, Mary Nell Jones, Hilda Hart, Kathleen Moore, Pearl Vinson, Mabel Harris, Jane Pitts, Alice Petty, Mary Petty, Dixie Johnson, and Grace Plyler.

Senior Class Makes Splendid Payment On Electric Clock

The present senior class is to be congratulated. In addition to carrying over a nice cash balance of $34.50 from last year, they have cleared in cash this year after paying $4.87 for awards, $19.38. This project was made possible through a magazine subscription campaign with the Curtis Publishing Company. Leroy Martin led with a total of twenty-four subscriptions out of a grand total of forty-seven secured. Leroy will receive a nice reward or bonus for his services. The campaign was managed by Herman Harris and Earl Ellis. The class thanks the public for their loyal support during this contest for new subscriptions.

Football News

The new bath house for the athletic teams of C. C. H. S. was completed last week. Our boys are proud of it for two reasons: They built it themselves under Coach Walker's supervision, and second they have a splendid place to take a good shower bath after each practice or game. It is in the new gymnasium room. The entire work of tearing down the old bath house, changing the piping, making the concrete, swinging the doors and walling up the sides was all done by Mr. Walker's manual training classes. The team is proud of their new bath house and hope to show their appreciation by the record of games they are to play this season.

So far, they have won one and lost one. They won from Isabella High by a score of 18-0, and lost to Selma High by the score of 13-0. The next game is with Marbury High. We understand Marbury has a good team, but we think ours is better. Be sure and see the game on October 2. It will be played on our local field.

The schedule for the rest of the season is as follows:

Marbury, October 2, here.
Prattville, October 9, here.
Centerville, October 16, here.
Plantersville, October 22, there.
Isabella, October 30, here.
Montevallo, November 6, there.
Holtville, November 13, here.
Ramer, November 20, here.

AN INVENTOR'S HOLIDAY

It sounds like a reactionary suggestion, but perhaps it would be well for inventors to take a holiday for a few years until consumption catches up with the output of the machines they have invented already.

For many years inventive genius has been devoted to the creation of machines to displace manpower. So long as such manpower as was displaced in one industry could find employment in some new field all was well. But lately it has been impossible to absorb the workers displaced by improved machinery and what is known as technological unemployment has been the result.

One thing seems certain—we must ease up on the introduction of labor-saving machines or drastically reduce the standard hours of labor, or both. Otherwise over-production and consequent unemployment may continue to menace the welfare of mankind and even the peace of the world.

On the other hand, the problem might be solved by increased consumption of all commodities, including farm crops, if such could be brought about But the best thought of economists and others has so far failed to find a practical plan for the distribution of surplus products to the millions who are in need of them.

So, we favor suppressing new inventions for a while. This is also impractical, of course, but perhaps as practical as most of the other ideas being advanced for the relief of present conditions.

386 MILES AN HOUR

Setting a new world record for speed, Lieutenant Stainforth of the British Navy a few days ago drove his seaplane 386 miles an hour over a three-kilometer course, beating the previous record by more than 28 miles an hour.

This terrific speed of more than six miles a minute represents the fastest movement of mortal man in the history of the world. When it is remembered that the earth's rotation is only about 15 miles a minute at the equator, it may readily be imagined that some day an airplane will equal that speed. If so, an aviator might fly around the world keeping the sun directly overhead all the while. Or, if he could exceed 15 miles a minute he might leave the sun behind, so that it would apparently set in the east. Then when he caught up with it again the sun would appear to rise in the west.

This may not happen in our day, but who can say that it is not among the possibilities of the future?

MORE WHITE HOUSE SECRETS ARE RUTHLESSLY REVEALED

Several more White House secrets have suddenly been exposed to the withering light of day.

Mr. Hoover refuses to have his picture taken smoking a pipe. He won't have his picture taken in an old sweater he wears playing medicine ball. He thinks that his dog may bite a marine without having stories written about him in the press.

These startling revelations are made by the Washington correspondent of Collier's Weekly, commenting on the fact that "the Presidency is the greatest goldfish bowl in the world."

Every President has got furiously angry at times at the millions of eyes looking at him. One President said, sadly, "I'd like to be able to put on my pants without the whole country looking at me."

Mr. Wilson once privately threatened to thrash the next newspaper correspondent who printed a story about one of his daughters. The stories were harmless and friendly enough. But Mr. Wilson thought his daughters were entitled to the same privacy as anybody else's daughter.

Mr. Coolidge took personal publicity philosophically. He knew that he must pay the price of being President. The world might know of his electric "horse." He would have his picture taken in a cowboy hat. Mr. Harding once indignantly refused to have his picture taken digging an irrigation ditch.

The farmers of Providence community are interested in the evening school being conducted there. The busy cotton picking season has caused the attendance not to be as large as it otherwise might be. However, it has averaged from 18 to 20 men.

The "Live at Home Program" should come first in their farming plans. Some of the men will plant vetch and all of them are interested in terracing. A number of men will set out strawberries in February. The farmers with brood sows are making definite plans to have grazing crops for hogs.

SHELBY COUNTY OFFICIALS RESCIND ACTION ON CO. AGT. WORK

At the September meeting of the Board of Commissioners of Shelby County, the Board voted to discontinue the work of the county agent, welfare worker and the health department, same to become effective October 1st.

At the request of a group of progressive citizens the Commissioners met at a called meeting Tuesday of last week and some 500 citizens of Shelby County met with them. After some two hours discussion, a motion was made petitioning the Commissioners to work out some plan to continue the work. The motion was put to a vote and some 500 voted for the motion and two against it. It was said that one of those who voted against it did not pay any taxes, and, in fact could not vote legally.

A committee was named to meet with the Commissioners and help work out means of continuing the work and after a short committee meeting the commissioners decided to continue the work of County Agent, the Welfare Worker and the Health Department, and to add a Home Demonstration agent.

It seems that the meeting was similar to the one held here last September, when some five or six hundred assembled at the call of the Commissioners Court to discuss the continuance of County Agency work.

County Schools To Close On January 15th, Report

for half term. In a statement issued from the office of Gov. Miller recently the following is quoted:

"Responsibility for the present plight of the public schools in Alabama, many of which face closing within the next 60 days, was placed squarely upon the 21 members of the State Senate by Gov. Miller yesterday, when approximately 150 county and city school superintendents called upon the Governor to ascertain whether there is any relief in sight.

"While promising he would do all that was humanly possible for him to do in the absence of any legislative relief for the schools, Gov. Miller said he could not give the superintendents any assurance as to when State warrants issued to the counties during the last school term, would be paid by the State.

"Without any such assurance, spokesmen for the superintendents explained, most of the counties would be unable to borrow any money on their anticipated income, a step necessary to insure the operation of the schools in the immediate future."

Third Man Arrested In Coosa Still Raid

Mims, the third man at the still at the time of the raid.

Fridge has made bond of $1,000 pending hearing of a charge of assault to murder, filed by Percy Pitts, of Clanton, attorney for Calloway. Calloway's condition was reported by physicians at a Clanton hospital to be "unchanged" Thursday. He received a shotgun wound in the lower part of his back when he is alleged to have grappled with Fridge, and physicians regard his condition serious.

Neither Fridge nor Mr. Buthod have made a statement regarding the shooting, pointing out that with two criminal cases involved any statement might have a tendency to create biased opinion. However, Sheriff Gillespie said that Calloway was wounded during a struggle with Fridge for possession of a shotgun the agent was carrying.

Contents of the statement contained from Baker were not revealed pending completion of an investigation being conducted by A. G. McDuffie, special investigator for the prohibition department in Washington.

Reports Tuesday from Dr. V. J. Gragg, at the Central Alabama Hospital in Clanton, stated that Frank Calloway shows improvement. Calloway was shot during the still raid in Coosa County, by a Federal officer, reports state.

COUNTY SUPTS. APPEAR BEFORE GOV. MILLER

Group Asks That Education Be Included In Call For Special Session

At a meeting of more than one hundred county and city superintendents held in Montgomery September 24, resolutions were adopted urging the governor to include education in his call for an extraordinary session of the Legislature should such a session be convened. The superintendents based their request on the threatened collapse of the public schools of Alabama at the present time. They emphasized the fact that the state is in arrears to its public schools for services rendered last year to an amount of approximately $5,000,000, of which amount $3,250,000 is in the form of unpaid and non-negotiable warrants. The resolutions adopted by the superintendents follow:

To The Governor and the Legislature of Alabama:

We, the county and city superintendents of Alabama, in joint session in Montgomery on the 24th day of September, 1931, respectfully call your attention to the following facts:

First, The State is now in arrears in its payments to its public school system for services rendered during the year 1930-1931 to an extent of approximately $5,000,000, of which amount $3,250,000 is in the form of unpaid and non-negotiable warrants;

Second, This failure of the State to meet its appropriations to the schools has made it impossible for school officials to pay teachers in full for services rendered last year and to meet other financial obligations incurred in the operation of the schools for 1930-1931;

Third, The people of the various counties and cities of Alabama are insisting that they be given definite information relative to financial relief for the schools;

Fourth, Local school authorities now find it impossible to finance their respective school systems, and because of these distressing conditions the public school system of Alabama is threatened with collapse.

Therefore, In view of the foregoing facts we earnestly request and urge that in case an extraordinary session of the Legislature is called the public school system of Alabama shall be included, and legislation to this end shall be enacted.

We pledge to you our undivided loyalty and sincerest efforts to the realization of a program of relief. Such a program to achieve its desired end must see to it that the State is able to meet promptly its assumed obligations to its public schools. Furthermore, the public school system of Alabama cannot be successfully operated on less money than is now contemplated by the laws of the State.

Local Co. Farm Agent Work Under Question

REPORT STATES SOME CITIZENS MAKE REQUEST

Voters Will Show Their Choice In Election November 3

Despite the fact that a county-wide meeting was held not so long ago at the courthouse in Clanton, giving the people of the county an opportunity to voice their approval or disapproval of the work being done by the office of the County Farm Demonstration Agent in Chilton County, and whether the work should be continued, a statement from the Commissioners Court of Chilton County this week, states that they have ordered an election to be held to determine this matter again.

The statement from the Court states that "some citizens and tax payers" have requested the Court to give the voters an opportunity to say whether or not the work now being conducted by the farm agent shall be continued. Following is the statement from the Commissioners Court of Chilton County in regard to this matter:

"The Court of County Commissioners have been requested by some citizens and tax payers of the county to give the voters an opportunity to say wheth-

OLD THORSBY HOME DESTROYED BY FIRE LAST THURS. P. M.

One of the first homes built in the town of Thorsby was completely destroyed by fire last Thursday afternoon. It was the old Home, and owned at this time by Bob Davenport, who occupied it at the time.

The family was out in the garden nearby when the flames were discovered, and were able to save quite a bit of the furnishings, as well as a quantity of canned goods stored in the cellar. The house, a two-story structure, was a complete loss. The fire occurred in the middle of the afternoon.

TEACHERS OF COUNTY GATHER HERE MONDAY

143 Present As Institute Opens In High School Auditorium

With the exception of two absentees, the entire number of school teachers of Chilton County assembled at the county high school Monday and Tuesday of this week for a regular Teachers Institute. The two who were absent were excused on account of death in their family. There are 145 teachers in the county.

W. L. Spencer, a representative of the State Department of Education, attended the institute Monday and addressed the gathering, having as his subject, "The Value of the School to the Community." Other speeches were made, among them one by County Supt. B. Lawrence, who spoke of the school situation in Chilton County.

Several departmental meetings were held, with Miss Madge Scarborough in charge of the elementary grades and Mr. Spencer in charge of the higher grades. The entire group of teachers voted to enroll one hundred per cent in the Alabama Educational Association.

The teachers of Chilton County are to be commended on their efforts to carry on despite the fact they will not receive any salaries until after January 1, 1932, at which time taxes in the county will be paid, as no funds are in sight from the State Department, with which to pay teachers salaries.

Help From State For War Orphans

It was brought to the attention of the American Legion at the meeting Monday night that a recent enactment of the State Legislature makes a generous offer to orphans of World War soldiers in helping them to secure an education.

The law provides that the State Department of Education may offer scholarships of $150 in value to any boy or girl between 16 and 21 years of age, whost father was killed in the World War or died in the service from any cause.

These scholarships may be used in any State institution of learning. The attention of the public is directed to this provision of our State law, with the hope that any boy or girl who is entitled to this help may be reminded of it and brought to avail himself or herself of this privilege.

Officials of the American Legion or the Legion Auxiliary can furnish full details to anyone interested.

COOSA SCHOOLS TO CONTINUE TEACHERS SAY

Loyal Spirit Of Teachers Will Enable Children To Resume Work

Possibly one of the most impressive gatherings of school teachers and other employees of the county educational system of Coosa County was held last Monday in Rockford, when all school teachers of the county assembled for the Teacher's Institute.

The impressiveness of this gathering was due solely to the wonderful spirit of loyalty shown by the teachers when they announced unanimously that they would continue to teach school in the county this term and wait for their salaries until the State of Alabama met its educational obligations to the county.

The announcement was made several days ago, from an action of the County Board of Education, that the schools of Coosa County would close last Friday due to the lack of funds, unless some other steps were taken to carry on.

Apparently the solution to this problem was left entirely to the teachers and other county educational employees and they alone could solve it. This decision on their part will not only show a great spirit of loyalty and unselfishness, but will mean a great sacrifice on their part as well, as it will be no easy matter for them to carry on without finances as has been accustomed to before, as there will be board bills and other expenses to take care of during the course of the school term.

All schools in the county were scheduled to open and continue work as usual on Tuesday morning of this week according to Supt. J. G. Pinson.

Mt. Pisgah News

Last Sunday afternoon, October 4th, at two o'clock, the singing society met here and was a real success.

The president, Mr. Jake Henley, directed one song, then prayer by Mr. G. W. Edwards. Mr. Henley appointed Mrs. Ollie Hayes and Mrs. Beulah Henley to arrange the program for the afternoon, while he directed a few other songs.

Directors for the afternoon were Mr. Jake Henley, Mr. Tom Wells, Rev. Ollie Hayes, Mr. Cecil Yeargan, Prof. Emmett Wilson, Mr. Roy Downs, Miss Birdie Edwards and Mr. William Wilkins; organists for the afternoon were Miss Birdie Edwards and Mrs. Emmett Wilson. The closing prayer was by Rev. Ollie Hayes.

We invite all singers and lovers of music to come and help us every first Sunday afternoon at two o'clock.

In the summer Prof. Emmett Wilson taught a very successful singing school at this place and the people are enthusiastic for a real singing society. We hope the visiting singers will be like Paul when he received the call to go over into Macedonia and help. That you will answer the call and come over to Mt. Pisgah and help our singing society.

God gave you the talent, voice and ability to sing and I'm sure it is pleasing to him to use our talents wherever needed. Let's everbody come back next first Sunday and sing praises to God.

There never was a time when we needed to thank God and praise him for his wonderful mercies more than now. We are using the 1931 song books for a while yet.

J. T. Childress Advises Farmers To Cut Down On Their Fishing & Grow Strawberries

By J. P. Montgomery

J. T. Childress in speaking to a group of evening school farmers at Providence advised them to give up a part of their fishing and spend that time on an acre of strawberries. He said it never gets too wet to pull weeds out of a strawberry patch and that it was more profitable to do that than to go fishing or to town after every rain. He likes geese and uses them but the geese will get only the grass and sometimes they need some help. Geese will not eat weeds. He pulls out the weeds himself. His neighbors who are his friends call him the Ole Gander, however, he does not mind especially as long as he nets $500.00 per acre like he did this year. He had left $1000.00 on his two acres after paying for all picking, crates, fertilizer. He told the farmers that if they are the kind who would be discouraged at a bad strawberry year then, not to start as there are bad strawberry years. Last year, 1930, was a bad year on account of the drought, he only cleared $200.00 per acre.

Mr. Childress has made a fine success of farming. He has his place paid for with a pretty new painted home, and he "runs himself." He not only believes in a Live at Home Program, but practices it. He used strawberries and a little cotton for his cash crops. He is one of the pioneer strawberry growers in this section. He uses his influence in the promotion of better agriculture in his section and has perhaps given away more strawberry plants than any man in this community.

He believes in strawberries but they are for the man who will stay ahead of the grass, won't fish or loaf too much and will stay with the crop thru the lean years as wel las the fat ones.

The four officers of last year's Senior class are Freshmen this year at Piedmont College, Demorest, Georgia. They are Byron Bean, Eunice Williamson, Kathryn Foss and Ralph Roy. John Adams, also a member of last year's Senior class, is a Freshman at Alabam Polytechnic Institute, Auburn.

SINGING AT WALNUT CREEK NEXT SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The Central Singing Society meets at Walnut Creek next Sunday afternoon, beginning at two o'clock. Bring both Stamps and Henson books. We hope to have a supply of the Henson books on hand next Sunday afternoon.

The society met at Chestnut Creek last Sunday afternoon. The secretary was not present on account of having to attend the Sunday school convention at New Salem, but reports from some singers who were there indicate that the singing was rather dry. There seems to have been plenty of listeners but the singers were scattering, according to reports.

There must be some effort put forth to get more life into our singing. The main trouble is new books; and I would suggest that communities get together in groups at night and practice up on the new songs. No class can do good singing without some practice, and the place to practice is in a small crowd where plenty of time can be given to learn each song.

More Laws, More Contempt

"The growing contempt for law is attributable in large measure to a mistaken zeal for more and ever more law," said Governor Ritchie of Maryland a short time ago.

It is refreshing to hear this thought echoed by a high public official. Too few of them are sufficiently candid—or courageous—to do so. But almost all who have studied the crime problem have come to the same conclusion.

We are a nation of law-breakers largely because we are a nation of law-makers. We have abrogated human liberties—and crime has been increasing on a great scale than in any other supposedly civilized country. We have passed laws which have acted as boomerangs and have in actual practice benefitted the criminal class which they were supposed to suppress—such as the various anti-revolver bills in effect in several states.

We cannot shut our eyes to the fact that America is a lawless nation. In almost every great city authorities are all but powerless against the depredations of a well organized, well financed underworld. Simpler and fewer laws, more justice and less litigation, sure punishment for offenders—in that direction lies victory for society in its war against criminal class.

Private Initiative Excels

The advocates of government ownership of business are especially busy at the present time.

There are a great many politicians who seem to believe that the path to high office is made easier by advocating that the government take over this business, or go into competition with that. Whether it be a municipal power plant, or a monopolistic state insurance fund, the principle behind the move is the same. And they think that the hard times of the last two years have caused the public to take a changed attitude in regard to government and business.

It is difficult to believe that the people will adopt socialism as a solution to transient economic maladies. The spectacle of debt-ridden Australia, with its high taxes, its serious unemployment situation and its industrial stagnation. should serve to show what socialism, when carried far enough, accomplishes. The American public has seen the principle of private initiative give us the highest wage and living standards in the world—a standard which, for the most part, has been pretty well maintained even during the present trying period. And the chances are they believe that private initiative—given a fair chance—will pull us through again and bring us eventually to new and unscaled heights of progress and prosperity.

In A Decade

Today, out of every 100 homes in the United States, 70 are purchasing electricity from central station companies for lighting, and for operating various electrical appliances.

Ten years ago but 35 out of each 100 families used electricity.

No other fact, perhaps, can show so completely the achievement of the electric industry in bringing its service within the reach of almost every home. The great bulk of homes which still have no service are located on farms, and electric facilities are being extended into those areas as rapidly as conditions permit. The growth of the great interconnected electric systems, serving dozens or hundreds of separate communities, has made possible the almost universay application of low-priced electric service to daily tasks.

In 1929 the nation's entire domestic electric bill was around $604,000,000—about $5.00 per year per capita. In comparison with this, the average person spent $16.50 for tobacco, $8.50 for candy, $9.50 for reading matter and $182 for food. It is a demonstrable fact that the cost of electric service is an infinitesimal item in the family budget—and at the same time an element of tremendous importance in family life. When we buy electric power we get more for our money than when purchasing almost any other commodity or service.

Job Insurance

Recently there has been a great deal of talking by people who don't know what they are talking about, in the matter of the industrial depression and the plight of the worker.

Once in a while, however, someone says something sensible. It strikes us that Senator Couzens of Michigan is in that class when he proposes to set up in America a scheme of job insurance which will protect the unemployed in future depression periods, if any.

Senator Couzens would have the Federal government, the state governments, all industrial employers and all workers in industry contribute to a fund which would be used in hard times to pay the workers who were thrown out. He figures that if $1.75 out of every $100 of industry's payroll were thus put into a fund, it would take care of all unemployment.

Something must be done to change our present system. We don't know whether Senator Couzens has the right answer or not. We only feel sure that in some way American ingenuity will find a way to meet the next industrial crisis which will be better than the way in which the present one has been handled.

IN CHILTON COUNTY

The medical doctors of the Southeastern Division of Medical Societies gathered in Clanton Tuesday for a real meeting. Much credit is no doubt due our local doctors for bringing this group of prominent men from over the state to our town.

Indications show that the meeting was a success in every way, and very valuable from a technical standpoint, as several interesting papers were read, and many instructive discussions took place.

Mayor J. Lee Smith was liberal with the visiting physicians in his welcome address and showed a spirit of real cooperation from the standpoint of the town, officially.

There is no doubt that Clanton could play host to many other gatherings of this kind, if our citizens would make an effort to bring them here. This would be quite a boost for Clanton to the outside world.

Business conditions in Clanton, so far as purchasing at local stores is concerned, is apparently on the upgrade and showing a speedy return that way. A glance into the business houses last Saturday would have made one stare in amazement at the amount of business some of them were doing.

It would be an easy matter to determine this, however, by glancing through this issue of this newspaper and see what places of business were doing the advertising, and inviting business to their doors. Business goes where it is invited, and stays where it is treated well. That is proven by such progressive merchants as M. Lande, Reedie Taylor, Jesse Baker, Hill Grocery Co., the A & P Grocery Store, and others in Clanton.

In the Rotarian of September, Roy L. Smith has some things to say about the depression that are so full of truth and wisdom, and so nearly my own notions about real wealth, that I am giving my entire column to his words. Such buoyant philisophy is good not only for this hour, but for a whole lifetime, and for every condition. Read what he says and put it in your scrapbook for future reading and frequent meditation. Says he:

"We have passed through a panic, suffered from a crash on the stock market, and are now more than halfway through the depression and I am still rich.

"It may be true that I have much less to live on than I had a year ago, but it is certainly true that I have just as much as ever to live for. The real values of life are unshaken and solid.

"The stock crash cost us much that we never had—paper profits which never got nearer our pockets than the financial pages of the daily papers. The market failed, but nothing else did. Prices went down, but not one acre lost its fertility, and all the electrons, protons and ether waves went on working in their accustomed ways.

"When the depression came I was compelled to take an invoice and soon discovered that I was still rich. All my capacity for the enjoyment of life was intact.

"My two-hundred-thousand-dollar eyes are just as good as they ever were. Every landscape and sunset is mine if I want it. Twenty-thousand-dollars scenes and views are added to my collection almost every week. A hundred-thousand-dollar sense of hearing is still unimpaired and by it I become an heir to a world of beauty and inspiration.

"Then there's my million-dollar stomach and a half-million-dollar appetite. No doctor has sentenced me to spinach for the rest of my life. Better to have plain food and an appetite than to sit down to a banquet with no appetite.

"The depression has not lowered the value of a single friendship. Neighbors still greet us in the same old cordial way, business associates believe in us, and our sons hold us in high respect. The wife's welcome at the close of the day has not depreciated in the least and our daughters continue to lavish their affection upon us with the same old extravagance.

"My faith in the goodness of the universe is unimpaired. By that faith I am emboldened as I face defeat and despair. The prayers my mother taught me and the fait hin God instilled in me by a devout father remain as priceless treasures no depression can touch.

"No nation becomes great by becoming rich. Neither does a man find enduring satisfaction in life by owning something—only by becoming something. The most degrading poverty is that which results from killing the spirit that the body may be served.

"This depression has cost us some of the things we created, but it has robbed us of none of our power to create. We may have lost some beautiful things, but we have lost no love of the beautiful.

"It is a challenge, not a catastrophe. A generation that has conquered the air and sent giant planes circling the globe, which has plunged into the deeps and disported on the ocean's floor, which has climbed above the clouds and lived in the strathosphere, is now faced with the challenge to rise above its dependence on mere things and seek an emancipation of the spirit of man.

"The last six months have been for many men a thrilling spiritual adventure through which they have discovered their real wealth. Bereft of dividends and profits, they are discovering the sustaining powers of a strong religious faith, the abiding values of courage, heroism, honor, charity, and trustworthiness.

"A financial crisis can wipe out profits and bring business to a standstill, but character is beyond its reach. It can rob us of all we have, but it cannot affect what we are.

"The investments we made in ambitious youth, hospitals, crippled-children's camps, colleges, and service institutions go on paying dividends. The deepest satisfactions of life—those which come from sharing and serving—remain secure.

"I am still rich because I am independently rich—none of my wealth depends upon business conditions or market reports."

Legion Endorses County Agent Work At Regular Meeting Held In Clanton Monday

At the regular monthly meeting of Chilton County Post of the American Legion, held at the courthouse Monday night, the matter of continuing the work of the County Agent in Chilton County was a very interesting subject to the Legionnaires.

When the question of the election on the County Agent to be held November 3 was explained, and a number of other talks made concerning the work of the County Agent in our county, the meeting unanimously adopted a resolution declaring in favor of continuing the services of the County Agent, and requesting the Court of County Commissioners to continue to appropriate the money necessary out of the county funds to carry on the work.

The resolution not only endorsed the work and requested the Commissioners to continue it, but made an appeal to every man and woman in the county to get busy and bring the importance of the matter to the attention of the people and seek to get every citizen of the county to vote in favor of the work on November 3.

Following is a copy of the resolution which was adopted:

"In view of the fact that an election has been called in Chilton County for November 3 to determine whether or not the majority of the voters of Chilton County want the work of the County Agent to be continued, we, the members of Chilton County Post No. 6 of the American Legion, in regular session, hereby go on record as favoring the continuation of the County Agent work, and appeal to our citizenship to vote for the continuation of the work at the election on November 3.

"We believe the farmers of our county have been greatly benefitted by the work of our county agent, and further, that they have great need for the help that can and will be available to them through the continuation of the work to furnish the farmers with the advantages of having a county agent; and, that it would be a serious mistake to cut off this source of help from our farmers at this time."

Chilton Co. Teachers Ass'n. Unanimously Endorse Co. Agent Stapp's Continuation in Office

The teachers of the schools of Chilton County, assembled at the county high school in Clanton last Monday and Tuesday at the regular Teachers' Institute of the County, drew up and endorsed the following resolution on the work of the County Farm Demonstration Agent work in this county. This action was taken due to the coming election to determine whether the voters of the county wish to retain the Farm Agent in this county:

Whereas, the voters of Chilton County are to say on November 3, whether the work of the county agent will be continued or not.

The present County Farm Demonstration Agent, C. E. Stapp, having performed untiringly every duty and obligation that has fallen upon him, we, the teachers of Chilton County in institute assembled, this the 6th day of October, 1931, having faith and confidence in the further continuation in C. E. Stapp's work in an educational way to the schools of Chilton County, hereby,

Be it resolved, that we, the teachers of Chilton County, appeal to the citizenship of the county for their continued cooperation in building up and sustaining the agricultural assets of our great county.

Be it further resolved, that the qualified voters go to the polls on November 3, and approve of the continuation of the County Agent's most valuable service.

Respectfully submitted,
—Chilton County Teachers Association.
Adopted October 6, 1931.

Teachers Of County Pass Resolutions Asking Miller To Call Special Session of Legislature for Purpose of Bringing Relief To Schools of State

The teachers of Chilton County, assembled at the county high school in Clanton Monday and Tuesday of this week at the regular Teachers' Institute of the county, unanimously adopted the following resolution in regard to the needed aid of the schools of the state:

Whereas, the financial situation confronting our county and state with special reference to the schools is such as to arouse keenest concern of all good citizens, and,

Whereas, the officials charged with the administration of our laws, and especially the administration of the schools of this county and state are laboring against insurmountable obstacles, and,

Whereas, it is known to the teachers of this county that funds for payment of salaries may be delayed as consequence of the general depleted condition of the State Treasury and slow movement of taxes, and,

Whereas, the ills enumerated are beyond the power of the County Board of Education of this county to remedy,

Therefore, be it resolved, that we, the teachers of Chilton County in institute assembled, this the 6th day of October, 1931, having confidence in the State of Alabama to ultimately meets its obligations and in the County Board of Education to protect the interest of the teachers of the county to the fullest extent of its limitations, hereby pledge our highest allegiance to the County Board of Education in this trying hour, and our continued loyalty to and confidence in the State of Alabama, and further that we will cooperate to the fullest extent with the County Board of Education in carrying on the schools of our county this school year just as far as it is possible to do so.

Be it further resolved, that in view of the fact that the teachers of the elementary and secondary schools seem to have been made the burden bearers of the deficiencies of the other departments of the State government to the extent that four or five million dollars of constitutional funds have been diverted to other uses, we as citizens and servants of the state respectfully demand that these funds prescribed by the Constitution to be placed at the earliest possible date from income of the State and that continued diversion of these funds be stopped immediately and that further diversions of these funds be made by legal enactment, a felony.

Be it further resolved, that we respectfully call attention to the pre-election pledges of both branches of the State government of Alabama, promising that the schools would be amply taken care of. We rightfully demand the fulfillment of those pledges and promises.

We insist that the great state of Alabama, with all of its marvelous resources, is fully able to meet all the financial demands that the public schools make upon it.

Be it further resolved, that His Excellency, B. M. Miller, Governor of Alabama, is hereby urged to call the Legislature into special session immediately for the specific purpose of saving the schools of the State.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the county papers, and to the Governor of Alabama.

Respectfully submitted,
—Chilton County Teachers Association.

Farming Program Gets Endorsement

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 9—Alabama's "farming for profit" program calling for a 50 per cent cut in cotton acreage for the next two years, the pooling of all cotton on hand with the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association, the growing of ample supplies of food and feed, and the building of a stronger farmers' organization, has met with enthusiastic approval at recent meetings held here and in Birmingham of county agents and farm bureau officials of the 67 counties.

It is expected that county-wide and community meetings will be held in the counties between now and planting time next spring in order to fully acquaint farmers with the economic situation and emphasize the necessity of the cotton acreage cut, the growing of food and feed, and other points in the program.

Bankers, merchants, and others interested in agriculture are expected to give cooperation in the Alabama program and will attend the county meetings. Leading farmers, through their county Farm Bureaus, county farm and home demonstration agents, and teachers of vocational agriculture, will unite in sponsoring the program.

The county farm bureau workers agreed to begin immediately active promotion of the plank in the program calling for cotton pooling. In this way it was pointed out farmers may receive a substantial cash advance to use in meeting their obligations and at the same time retain an interest in their

Being thoughts of one who has been confined at home for awhile and who has been reading the papers:

The tax assessment of the Alabama Power Company on its property in this county this year was two million less than in 1930. Their tax rate was also reduced from the legal rate of 60, down to a special rate of 45. The farmer and all the rest of the real voting people of the county were held, over all protest, to the 1930 assessment and the 60 rate. It would certainly be interesting reading if that wonderful Tax Commission we have in Montgomery would give us a satisfactory explanation of this rank favoritism to the Power Company.

Oh, for the day to come when the voters of Alabama will awake, like they recently did in Georgia, and wipe absolutely clean the political slate and commence over. We need more wool hats and jeans "britches" in office and need them awful bad.

County attorney Bailes of Jefferson County says it is not a violation of law for a person to offer to sell the office of Probate Judge for a price. According to that ruling you would not be liable to the law if you offered for sale a quart of booze. Both offenses are direct violations of both the Federal and State printed laws. So it seems we have a private code for special protective possibilities when the "higher ups" get in a tight.

A judge the other day promptly adjourned a Grand Jury just as they were preparing to investigate a bribery charge that pointed "high up" in its possibilities.

Mr. John Hays is having a neat home constructed on Candler Boulevard. All such enterprises help the unemployed element that much. If more people would follow the example of Mr. Hays times would improve.

Have Feagin and Miller forgotten the lashing they gave the recent Senate about trying to meddle with their business? Said the Senate was a legislative branch of the government and their duty was to make laws, and that their job was to enforce these laws, and neither had the right to dictate to the other. Now, he (or they) positively refuse to call an extra session unless they will pledge themselves to pass only the laws he (or they) propose. Oh for an Oklahoma referendum!

That "Buy Cotton" movement, if widely adopted and put into actual practice, will do world's of good in this "overproduction" situation.

Better consider well and very seriously the plan of no cotton for next year. There is more than one side to that question.

The trouble with cotton is not overproduction, but lack of purchasing ability. Millions of people in our own country are practically without sufficient clothing for August weather to say nothing of December. No jobs and no money tells the tale.

When the Senatorial Investigating Committee comes to Alabama the political racketeers will have to hustle or the pot will boil over and spill their soup.

What are we going to do with this "absentee ballot" situation? It seems from recent investigations that almost as many of our voters are "absent" as are present at election time.

cotton in order that they will be in position to take advantage of any improvement in price which might come about as a result of an acreage cut or a brighter world outlook.

its are now in operation in the United States serving about 24 per cent of the rural population. This plan of health service was started 19 years ago, or on July 1, 1911, when the first full-time health unit was established in the State of Washington. The 600 units are only one-fifth of the number of counties to which the service is applicable.

EAT MORE BREAD

Dr. Christmas Seal announces that he and his folks are going to eat more bread. We like it anyway so the change will be no hardship. Our conversion is not wholly due to the fact that one more bushel of wheat per capita per annum consumed by each citizen of the United States will go so far in reducing our wheat surplus. Nor is it because of a fear that if wheat farmers are discouraged too much this country may soon find itself facing a shortage instead of a surplus. It is because bread is still the staff of life. White bread, brown bread, take it as you will for there is little difference. If white bread lacks some few vitamins that are found in the whole wheat loaf, you easily make up for them in the milk you drink and the vegetables and fruit you eat. Our health project of this winter is "eat more bread" and we are going to give it a good trial and turn it into a "health habit."

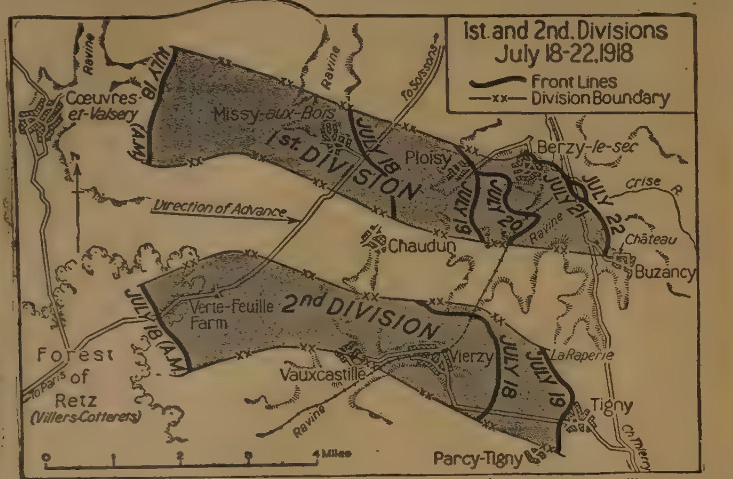
CHAPTER LII

I attended a conference of commanders in chief at General Foch's headquarters Wednesday, July 24, 1918, to discuss plans for offensive operations.

Present were Generals Foch, Petain, Weygand and Buat; Field Marshal Haig and General Lawrence, and General Conner, chief of operations, Boyd and Hughes and myself.



There was pronounced good feeling and confidence. General Foch gave a resume of the general situation. He proposed no definite plan, but submitted his remarks as the basis of discussion.

The main point was that the fifth German offensive of the year had been checked and the allied counteroffensive, beginning July 18, had transformed it into defeat. It was the general opinion that every advantage should be taken of this fact and that the allies should continue their attacks with as much vigor as possible.

On Par With Enemy.

General Foch said with satisfaction that we had now reached an equality in numbers of combatants and an actual superiority in reserves. As the enemy would soon be required to relieve a considerable number of tired divisions from the active front, the allies would rapidly gain further superiority through the constantly increasing number of Americans.

All information went to show that the enemy had two armies, so to speak, Foch continued, one an exhausted holding army and the other a shock army, already weakened maneuvering behind this frail front. Unquestionably we had material advantage in aviation and tanks, and to a smaller degree in artillery, and this would be augmented by the arrival and armament of American artillery personnel.

As to the reserve strength behind the allies, it would soon be powerful indeed if the rate of 250,000 per month at which the Americans were pouring in could be maintained. One could sense an approaching crisis on the enemy's side possibly not so very remote, because of the difficulty he was having in keeping up the effective strength of his units.

Allies Now Hold Initiative.

Beyond these advantages of material force in our favor there was also the moral ascendancy we had gained by our recent victories and his failures. Foch felt as we all did, that the allies now held the initiative and that from this time on they should abandon the defensive attitude that had been so long imposed upon them and continue the offensive without cessation.

He then pointed out the following offensives which it was evident would be indispensable to later operations:

> The release of the railroad Paris-Avricourt in the Marne region by the French; the Paris-Amiens railroad by a concerted action of the British and French; the Paris-Avricourt railroad in the region of Commercy by the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient by the American army, which, by reducing the front, would bring us within reach of the Briey region and permit action on a larger scale between the Meuse and Moselle.

Further offensives were foreseen, having in view the release of the mining sections to the north by definitely driving the enemy from the region of Dunkirk and Calais.

No Idea of Ending War in 1918.

No one suggested that the plans of the moment or those to follow might be carried so far as to terminate the war in 1918. Concerning the part each should play Foch asked expressions of opinion of the respective commanders in chief as to how these or any other operations we might propose should be conducted.

Marshal Haig gave his views and plans, which agreed with the general outline suggested, as did General Petain, who wanted further to consider the possibilities. As far as these preliminary operations applied to the Americans, they were simply a restatement of the plans we had been leading up to ever since our entry into the war. I, therefore, advised that details of organization and supply were receiving every consideration in the preparation of the American army to do its part.

While at General Foch's headquarters I arranged with General Petain for the expansion of the First corps, then operating in the Marne sector, by which four American divisions were to be placed in the line with two in reserve. It was my hope that this would be the basis for the preliminary formation of an American army on this front. En route to Chaumont I stopped to call on Liggett and apprise him of the possibility of additional American divisions for his corps.

Expedition to Russia.

The supreme war council was prone to listen to suggestions for the use of allied troops at various places other than the western front. One of these, on which the British seemed to be especially insistent, was to send troops to help the so-called white army in Russia, to keep open the communications through Murmansk in the Archangel.

I was opposed to any such idea, as it would simply mean scattering our resources, all of which were needed on the western front. But President Wilson was prevailed upon to help and I was directed to send a regiment provided General Foch had no objections. As apparently he had already considered the question, he gave his approval and a regiment was accordingly sent. The Three Hundred Thirty-ninth infantry, Lieut. Col. George E. Stewart commanding, together with one battalion of engineer and one field hospital, were designated for this service.

First Field Army.

In view of the prospect for the early assembly of corps and divisions to form our army, it became urgent that the organization be hastened with all possible speed. The outlines had been determined and members of the First army staff were at work on the details.

My formal order creating the First field army was issued July 24, to take effect August 10, with headquarters at La Ferte-sous-Jouarre.

Immediate consideration was given the improvement of the general supply system. Although the recent reorganization had helped, it had been my purpose for some time to make changes in personnel in the S. O. S., particularly in the position of chief, which demanded great administrative ability. After much thought the choice fell to General Harbord. His knowledge of organization, his personality, his energy and his loyalty made him the outstanding choice. Reluctance to lose his services in command of troops, where he had shown himself a brilliant leader, caused me to delay until his division could be relieved from the active front.

CHAPTER LIII

Early in August, 1918, I made an inspection tour of the service of supply, to note the progress and acquaint myself, the chief of staff and General Harbord, by actual observations, with conditions.

The tour was made also with a view to such changes in personnel and improvements in methods as would insure complete fulfillment of the increased obligations imposed upon the service of supply by the tremendous task of receiving, storing and transporting the enlarged troop and supply shipments.

Our first stop was Tours, which, being the location of the headquarters of the S. O. S., with a huge American military garrison of 2,400 officers and 4,360 men, had become a beehive of activity.

We visited every activity at Tours, beginning with the central records office, a branch of the adjutant general's office of large proportions, where the personal records of every man in the A. E. F. were kept. We found that the railway operators, numbering thousands, comfortably situated in portable barracks at Camp de Grasse, were putting every energy into the service. Certain engineer troops were kept at this central point for railway work, ready to respond to calls from any direction. The well-managed camp of German prisoners, under Colonel Groome of the military police, contained several hundred men used as laborers.

A number of British women, known as the Women's Auxiliary Aid corps, were lent to us by their government to assist in clerical work. The 250 women located at Tours occupied neat and comfortable temporary barracks and presented a very military appearance on parade. Some fifty of them were ill in quarters at the time and I gave instructions that they should be transferred to our hospital. Besides officially, these fine women, under the proper restrictions that prevailed, became a valued addition to the social side of life where they were stationed. This force with us eventually numbered about 5,000.

Speaks to Men in Hospital.

The base hospital at Tours was then filled with men wounded in the recent engagements. They were receiving the best of care under Col. A. M. Smith and his efficient group of medical officers and nurses.

Passing through the various wards of this hospital I spoke to a fine-looking young soldier who was sitting up in bed, and asked him where he was wounded, meaning to inquire the nature of his wound. In reply he said: "Do you remember, sir, just where the road skirts a small grove and turns to the left across a wheatfield and then leads up over the brow of the hill? Well, right there, sir."

He was clearly describing the advance south of Soissons which pierced the Chateau Thierry salient. Of course, I was not there at the time, but it touched me that he should feel that I must have been very close to him.

At the base hospital in Bordeaux, then under the efficient supervision of Col. H. A. Shaw, chief surgeon of the base section, we found about 500 of our wounded, most of them soon to be sent home. No matter how severely wounded they were I never heard a word of complaint from any of our men. There could not have been found in the hospitals of any army a more cheerful lot. It was a lesson in fortitude, an inspiration, to see their fine courage. Some would never again see, others would never be able to walk again, but they all seemed proud of their sacrifice, which many of their countrymen are often prone to forget all too soon.

We arrived at Brest August 2 and found the commanding general, G. H. Harries, and staff at the station to meet us. Base section No. 5 was built around Brest, our leading port of debarkation. The section included four French territorial departments. Another landing port for troops was Cherbourg. A large locomotive terminal and repair shop were located at Rennes and a coal port at Granville.

Major O'Neil's Secret.

After an inspection of the storehouses and the construction for additional storage on the piers, I asked for the chief stevedore, Major O'Neil, who came up apparently quite embarrassed. To put him at ease I took him by the arm and we walked together to where some lighters were being unloaded. As the port had made the record of handling 42,000 arriving troops and their baggage in one day, May 24, entirely with lighters, I asked him to tell me about it.

By this time he had overcome his fright, and pointing to two officers, each down in the bottom of a lighter directing the work, he said:

"Sir, do you see those two captains down there in their shirt sleeves? Well, that's the secret. I say to them: 'Don't stand off somewhere and puff yourselves up in your uniforms, but take off Sam Brownes and your coats and get down close to your men.'

"Of course, those captains have now become experts. I did the same thing when I started, but since they are trained I manage things generally and they carry out my orders. I can wear my uniform now that I have won the right to wear it."

"Well," I said, "O'Neil, you're just the man I have been looking for, and I am going to send you to every port we use to show them your secret."

CHILTON SUNDAY SCHOOLS HOLD GOOD CONVENTION

Eighteen Schools Represented At Convention at New Salem Sunday

The first Sunday School Convention of the schools of the Chilton County Association since its division from the Unity Association was held at New Salem church last Sunday. The meeting was well attended and was a decided success from start to finish. The committee promised an interesting meeting, different from the ordinary beaten path of such conventions, and this promise was made good. Prof. W. M. Devaughn was there with his quartet and presented several sacred numbers between the different items on the program. These numbers were very greatly enjoyed by the delegates and all others present.

The meeting was opened shortly after ten o'clock by the county superintendent, Mr. Howard R. Oden of Mulberry. After a few introductory remarks by Mr. Oden, Rev. B. Lawrence of the Chilton County Association was called upon to make a short talk. At this time Mr. Davis Cooper, head of the Sunday School work at Montgomery, came in, and Rev. Lawrence turned the platform over to Mr. Cooper, who was on the program to speak in the morning. Mr. Cooper spoke for twenty or thirty minutes on the general needs and plans of Sunday School work. Rev. Zac Y. Appleton, pastor at New Salem and Collins Chapel, then took charge and preached a very interesting sermon, which brought the meeting up to the noon hour.

At 1:15 the house was called to order again with a song, and Mr. Johnnie E. Miner led the devotional. The roll of the churches was called and delegates reported their schools. The following Sunday schools were represented: Bethsalem, Cane Creek, Chestnut Creek, Collins Chapel, Friendship, Highland, Liberty Hill, Maple Springs, Mineral Springs, Mulberry, New Salem, Pates Chapel, Pleasant Grove, Jemison, Poplar Springs, Refuge, Sardis, Thorsby, and Mt. Pleasant. All delegates reported their schools on the upward trend.

It was then decided that the different schools be grouped and that a group superintendent be appointed for each group. A committee was appointed to do this grouping, and the result was as follows: No. 1, Donald Merchant—Cane Creek, Center Hill, Collins Chapel, Jemison, Macedonia No. 2, Mineral Springs, New Salem, Oak Grove, Providence, Thorsby, Union Grove and Pleasant Hill. No. 2, S. J. M. Webb—Free Springs, Macedonia No. 1, Mars Hill, Mulberry, New Cedron, Pates Chapel, Pilgrims Rest, Pleasant Grove No. 1, Pleasant Grove No. 2, Sardis and Union Springs. No. 3, J. E. Miner—Bethsalem, Chestnut Creek, Corinth, Friendship, Highland, Liberty Hill, Maple Springs, Poplar Springs, Refuge, Shiloh and Mt. Pleasant.

It was decided that, according to the state plan, a county-wide convention be held annually, and that a monthly meeting be held in each district by the superintendents, teachers and other leaders of the schools of each district. A more complete program will be worked out by Mr. Oden and the other officers in the near future.

A round table discussion of the plans and needs of the Sunday Schools was opened with a fine talk by Rev. Lawrence and followed with remarks by Prof. Earl Thomas, Mr. Charlie Wilkins and Mr. Davis Cooper. Mrs. Davis Cooper was called upon to speak, and she came forward with a short but very pointed and interesting talk. This brought the program to a close, and the dismission prayer was offered by Prof. I. J. Quinn.

How to train BABY'S BOWELS

Babies, bottle-fed or breast-fed, with any tendency to be constipated, would thrive if they received daily, half a teaspoonful of this old family doctor's prescription for the bowels.

That is one sure way to train tiny bowels to healthy regularity. To avoid the fretfulness, vomiting, crying, failure to gain, and other ills of constipated babies.

Dr. Caldwells' Syrup Pepsin is good for any baby. For this, you have the word of a famous doctor. Forty-seven years of practice taught him just what babies need to keep their little bowels active, regular; keep little bodies plump and healthy. For Dr. Caldwell specialized in the treatment of women and little ones. He attended over 3500 births without loss of one mother or baby.

Home Coming Day

Next Sunday, October 11th, is "Home Coming Day" at the Methodist church in Clanton. We urge that every Methodist in the city, make no other plans, but to be in your place at 11 A. M. We have a membership of 380 members and for one time in the year, let's all be at church at the same time. The subject for the day will be one that should appeal to old and young, "The Art of Growing Older." We want the young people present, we want the older people present. If you have a car, phone some one who has none, and offer to help bring the family to church. Let's make next Sunday a great day in our church life. Sunday school meets at 9:45 A. M. There will be no preaching Sunday night. Our people are urged to worship with the Baptists. They begin a ten days meeting Sunday and we want to cooperate with them for a great revival for Clanton.

We want our friends to worship with us on "Home Coming Day." We will have special music, a special message and a warm welcome.

Death came unexpectedly last Tuesday morning to H. Thomas Simms, age 60, while he was at his home here. Mr. Simms has not been in good health for several weeks.

The deceased had for a number of years been employed with the Alabama Power Company, and has made his home in Clanton for a number of years where he won the respect of those who knew him. Recently he went into the drug business in Clanton and was engaged in that when death came.

Mr. Simms was born in Newman, Ga., where he resided for a number of years. Funeral services are to be held this morning at eleven o'clock at the home. Interment will follow at Mt. Hebron, near Spiegener, Ala., with Spigener Funeral Home of Clanton in charge.

Surviving, one sister, Mrs. Prickett, of Lukesville; two brothers of Montgomery, Washington, D. C.; four daughters, Mrs. Loren Smith, Mrs. Joe Higgins, Miss Edith Simms and Imogene Simms, of Clanton; three sons, Thomas, Benson and Rucker Simms, of Clanton. Mrs. Simms preceded her husband to the grave by fifteen years.

Board Has Power To Reduce Bond

Under provisions of an act of the present Legislature, approved July 23, county governing bodies have the exclusive right to fix the amount of the official bond of all county officers, this power including authority to fix the amount of the official bonds of all county officers elected at the general election in 1930, and to reduce the amount of such bonds if they so desire.

Answering a letter from John F. Williams, tax collector of Calhoun County, the office of Atty. Gen. Knight rendered an opinion yesterday to this effect. In this letter Mr. Williams said that he was reelected to succeed himself, at the last general election, and qualified by filing bond in the sum of $100,000, which amount was fixed by the State Auditor. Since Sept. 1 this year, he said, the County Board of Revenue, under authority of the act of the present Legislature already referred to, reduced his bond to $50,000.

The Tax Collector asked to be advised whether the act authorizes the board to make this reduction, stating that if it does he will file a new bond. Opinion of the Attorney General rules that the board did act within its authority in reducing the amount of the bond, inasmuch as the Legislature has given county governing bodies the right, exclusively, to fix the amount of the official bond of all county officers. Prior to the passage of the act by the present Legislature, conferring this power upon boards of revenue and courts of county commissioners, the amount of official bonds of county officers was fixed by the State Auditor.

ELECTRIC INDUSTRY'S HUNDREDTH BIRTHDAY

On the twenty-ninth of August the electric industry was exactly one hundred years of age. It was on August 29, 1831, that Michael Faraday wound two coils of wire around an iron ring, attached the end of one coil to an electric battery, the other end to a galvometer, and caused the needle on the indicator to move. The theory of electro-magnetic induction—on which the entire scientific side of the electric industry depends—had been conceived and proven.

In that hundred years the industry has reached the point where it is one of the most necessary and vital elements in modern life, whether of home or industry. It has, in the absolute sense of the word, revolutionized the living and working conditions of the entire world.

It is interesting that at about the time the industry was celebrating its anniversary, it assured President Hoover that it would spend $600,000,000 this year on new construction, and the newspapers of the nation rang with approval of the declaration. The industry has become so important a factor in our economic life that we are looking to it to do much of the work in bringing prosperity out of depression Its achievement, in the brief space of a hundred years, has never before been equaled.

EXPRESSION OF SYMPATHY TO DANIEL FAMILY

We, the teachers of Chilton County, take this method of expressing our deepest sympathy to our co-workers and friends, Messrs. J. E. and Harlem Daniel, and W. T. Bean, in this hour of gloom, caused by the home-going of their mother and sister, Mrs. Daniel

We recognize the absence of these teachers during our Institute and wish to make this known to them. As a group, we have the deepest feeling with the bereaved ones in this their great loss of this loved one.

Signed: Chilton County Teachers.

A Pound of Butter Takes a Ride!

Often a pound of butter takes a ride of a thousand miles to find its dinner table!

In more than a hundred produce plants, Swift & Company is taking the butterfat, eggs and poultry of its 200,000 farm patrons daily, paying cash for them and sending them into national channels of distribution.

Thousands of miles of leased telegraph wires keep Swift & Company executives informed where these products command the best prices. To the best markets are rushed the surpluses of over-supplied districts. Lacking a national market like this one, many a pound of butter—and many an egg, too—would grow useless right at home, or else be sold at much less than present prices.

To distribute produce as well as quality meats, Swift & Company uses all the facilities of its over 400 branch houses and its 600 refrigerator car routes. Its great organization has 55,000 employees living in hundreds of towns where their pay checks help support community interests and trade. They are local men doing a national job, relieving producers of all selling worries and minimizing local gluts and shortages.

A nation-wide marketing system for poultry, eggs and butterfat must render a complete service, covering purchasing, grading, refrigeration, transportation, selling and delivery. The system functions smoothly when one concern undertakes all these steps. Swift & Company performs all these services at the lowest possible cost. Swift & Company profits from all sources, over a long term of years, have averaged less than a half cent a pound.

MORAL ECHOES

I am not a mind reader, but the other day I saw a lady looking at a new bonnett that was being worn on the head of a neighbor, and I could read her mind. She was filled with criticism and curiosity concerning the new hat, but she was thinking more about its cost than anything else. She wanted to know what it cost without having to ask. So far as I know the hat might have cost three dollars and then it might have cost ten. I was not so much concerned about the worth of the hat as I was about the worth of the head on which it rested. I saw a young man who thought himself to be somewhat. He was wearing an $85.00 overcoat, a $74.00 suit, a $10.00 pair of shoes, an $8.00 hat and a $2.00 tie. He boasted that his wearing apparel cost him around $200.00. I knew the young fellow well, and I knew that the man on the inside of those clothes was not worth twenty-five cents. It is not what you wear on your head that makes the woman, it is what you have on the inside of that head. It is not what you wear on your body that makes the man, it is what you have on the inside of those clothes.

While walking along I heard a roaring noise in the air, and on turning my gaze into the sky I discovered a tiny speck far above the world, and it was coming down with terrific speed. I wondered if it were a meteor falling to the ground. No it was no meteor. It was a plain turkey buzzard coming down to earth where he was sure that he had found something that was full of decay. When he was within fifty feet of the earth, he checked his darting speed, and sailed out on even wings and started a search for what he wanted. I was standing by the highway, and I heard a tremendous roaring. I looked up the road and saw something on wheels approaching like fury. It darted by with a crash and a roar, and it was gone. It was another buzzrd roaring his way through the world, in a terrible rush to get to the place where he could feed on the filth of the world. I never heard a car roaring its way to church, but I have heard them roaring their way to dances and away from dances, to ball gmes and away from ball games. When we hear a roaring car we always wonder what the buzzard has in mind, and what he is going after.

I was standing by the side of a tree watching a snail as it climbed upward. It was making about one foot per hour. While I was watching the snail climb upward, one of these speed fiends came by in his car making sixty miles per hour. There was quite a difference in the speed of the car and of the snail, but the car was going down hill, while the snail was climbing upward. It is not how fast a man can travel that determines his merits, but in what direction he is going. I had rather creep an inch a day toward righteousness and heaven than to run sixty miles per hour toward death and hell. It is true that the world of today has jerked on its shoes, and is many miles on its way before the church can get on her boots, but just look at the difference in the direction traveled by the world and that traveled by God's people. Things without life can make speed down hill, but it takes energy, strength and will power to climb up a hill. The trouble that we have in climbing upward to heaven is in keeping some of those high-powered "It's" going down hill, from running over us.

Forty years ago the association of young people centered about the church yard, or in the family room at home When they ventured out alone, they were in a buggy, or else they were walking along a public highway. They would no more think of being out after night than they would keep company with a rattle snake. When the daughters had company, the mother would bring in the brightest light in the home, and the light never grew dim until the girls were without company. That strict regulation looks "Prosy" to the present generation, but parents were trying to raise giants in those days. They thought that character was worth more than pleasure, and a correct ideal was more valuable than popularity. If parents today raise young men, and they are not Christian young men, if they raise girls and they are not Christian young women, they have failed, and their failure is full of tragedy for two worlds.

I was riding along a highway and saw a road that turned off into the woods. There was sign that the road was being put to constant use, and not knowing of any cause for a road to go in that direction, I turned off to see what it all meant. The road wound around a hill, and then disappeared. The road was within five miles of a city that had two thousand inhabitants. I am no fool, and I knew the purpose of the travel that went over that road. It was not day travel. In the night hours, mostly after midnight, the cars would travel that road. Sheriffs and law enforcement officers would do well to locate such roads, and stop such night travel. There is no good connected with a road that winds out behind a hill. People in these days do not go into such places to hold cottage prayer meetings. Woe be unto a mother's daughter, a mother's son when they patronize those roads.

BENEFITS OF ADVERSITY, MESSAGE OF INSURANCE OFFICIAL

"The foundations of fortune are laid in adversity" is the message brought to Birmingham and the South by Oliver Thurman, Vice-President and Superintendent of Agencies, Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, Newark, N.J.

"After the panic of 1837, the institution of life insurance developed in response to a need for financial independence and for protection against economic instability," Mr. Thurman declared. "Present adverse conditions will give rise in the coming months to a renewed appreciation of the certain protection and sound investment afforded by life insurance."

Friday night Mr. Thurman addressed the meeting of the J. Furniss Lee Agency, which directs 60 representatives throughout the state.

The Birmingham Agency is the first Mr. Thurman is visiting on an extended trip to observe field conditions. He will proceed next to Jackson, Miss.

Mr. Thurman has a deep sympathetic understanding of the South and its needs. He was born in McMinnville, Tenn., 53 years ago, and was educated in Texas, where he continued in educational work. Later he founded John B. Denton College in that state and was its first president.

Entering the life insurance field as a Mutual Benefit representative in Texas, Mr. Thurman was soon transferred to the Baltimore Agency. Twelve years ago he was called to the Home Office at Newark, N. J., as Superintendent of Agencies.

At the recent National Association of Life Underwriters' meeting in Pittsburgh, Mr. Thurman was appointed a director of the American College of Life Underwriters. He is a member of the Life Agency Officers' Association and was one of the founders of the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau.

Mr. John M. VanDerveer is local representative of the Mutual Benefit at Clanton and attended the Agency meeting in Birmingham.

No Score Game Played Here Fri.

The football eleven of the Chilton County High School played their third game of the season here last Friday afternoon. The Chilton eleven met a strong and fast team from the Marbury high school and both teams fought the entire four quarters without either managing to score a point on its opponents.

The game was a fast and hard fought one and neither team seemed to possess a decided advantage over the other. Marbury seemed to be able to gain thru the line and around the ends better than their opponents and a number of times they carried the ball into Chilton territory only to lack the final punch to carry the ball over the goal line.

The game was marred by frequent penalties inflicted by Referee Varnell on both sides. A number of Marbury fans seemed to resent the action of the referee in penalizing their team. This is the third game which Clanton has played this season. In their first game Isabella was defeated 18 to nothing. The second game was played with Selma High School and lost by a score of 13 to nothing. The third game which was against Marbury ended in a scoreless tie. The next game will be played Friday evening against the Prattville team. All the Chilton fans are urged to be out and to root for the local team.

Grounds for a divorce recently filed by Florence McFarland Hooser of Memphis were that her husband hit her fingers when angry.

The engagement of Dorothy May Clare and Sidney Burrell of Newport, Eng., was made unique by the exchange of golden beans, suitably engraved, instead of betrothal rings.

Heroes of War in Legion Want Wine and Beer Vote

plan of the department officials, but carried two clauses, one commending the action of the national convention of the American Legion at Detroit, calling for a national referendum, the other commending the Alabama delegation for voting with the majority.

Bert Fitzpatrick offered the resolution and thereby launched one of the stormiest debates to mark a session of the Montgomery post in years.

When, after numerous efforts to amend the resolution had failed, a vote was taken, there was a lusty chorus of ayes for adoption and a very few nays.

Col. V. M. Elmore led the attack on the resolution or that part of it calling for the Alabama referendum. He cautioned the post against dabbling into politics and moved to amend the resolution by striking out the clause calling for the referendum. His motion, however, was tabled by a substantial majority as was another motion to amend the resolution by limiting the referendum called for to members of the American Legion.

A full text of the resolution follows:

Text Of Resolution

"WHEREAS, the national convention of the American Legion, assembled in Detroit, did on September 24, by resolution, call for a national referendum on modification of the National Prohibition Act to permit manufacture and sale of light wines and beer, and

"WHEREAS, the delegation of the Department of Alabama voted with the enlightened majority at the Detroit convention when the question of the referendum was being considered, and

"WHEREAS, veterans of the World War, of whom there are nearly 60,000 in Alabama, either because of absence or nonage had no voice in the adoption and ratification of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, therefore

"BE IT RESOLVED BY MONTGOMERY POST NO. 2, AMERICAN LEGION:

"1. That the action of the national convention in this matter be commended.

"2. That the action of the Alabama Department delegation be commended.

"3. That the executive committee of the Department of Alabama, American Legion, is hereby requested to take a referendum of Legionnaires and all other World War veterans eligible to membership in the American Legion in Alabama, on the question: Shall the National Prohibition Act be amended to permit the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer?"

Grand Jury Returns 28 True Bills Last Week

your Honor's able and instructive charge entered upon its investigations of the matters that came before it and herewith submits the following report:

During its investigation 33 cases and 50 witnesses have been examined, and 28 true bills are herewith returned.

We have examined the fee book of the Probate Judge and find it neatly kept and correct in so far as we are able to ascertain. We have examined the bonds of the various county officials and find that they are ample for the protection of the public, and on our examination of the sheriff's account with the state for feeding prisoners we find it being kept in accordance with the law. We find on our examination of the office of the County Superintendent of Education that his books, records and papers are being kept neatly and in accordance with the law in so far as we were able to ascertain.

The Grand Jury inspected the County jail and find that it is being repaired and that it is not being used during the progress of the repairs for keeping prisoners—the prisoners of the County are being kept in the Montgomery County jail. On our inspection of the almshouse we found 21 inmates, of which 10 were women and 11 men, all of them being cared for as well as the present arrangements will permit.

We recommend to the proper authorities that provision be made to lock the doors to the auditorium of the Court House and that it be kept locked at night.

Sheriff Gillespie and his deputies were most courteous to us during our investigation and rendered us valuable assistance in the dispatch of the business before us, all of which we greatly appreciate.

The Grand Jury wishes especially to thank your Honor for the very able charge given us when we were first empaneled. It has been most helpful to us throughout all our investigations.

Now having complied to the best of our ability with your Honor's charge we respectfully ask that we be dismissed until such time as your Honor may see fit and think proper to have us again convene.

This September 30th, 1931.

ALABAMA MILLS STOCKHOLDERS TO PUSH SUIT

Meeting Here Last Saturday Organizes To Employ Lawyer For Suit

A number of stockholders of Alabama Mills Company met at the court house in Clanton last Saturday afternoon and laid the initial plans for starting a suit to either get dividends on their investments or try to recover of the Alabama Power Company the money that was paid in for Alabama Mills stock. The stockholders claim that they would not have invested their money in this stock had the proposition not been fostered by the Alabama Power Company.

The meeting Saturday afternoon was presided over by W. A. Reynolds, and a committee was appointed to collect funds from stockholders in order that a suit might be instigated. This committee is composed of G. O. Foshee, W. A. Reynolds, Mrs. Gertrude Calloway and T. E. Wyatt. The latter was chosen as secretary-treasurer.

A number have already signed the petitions and some have already paid in the amount pledged. Stockholders are asked to pay into this fund fifty cents on every share of the stock which they hold. Any stockholder wishing to take part in the suit is asked to see one of this committee at an early date.

Work Done By Local County Agent Shown

Letter From Man Now Holding Office Tells Of His Personal Efforts To Aid This County In Making Its Forward Steps

Due to the coming election to be held on November 3rd, 1931, in Chilton County, at which time the voters of the county will voice their approval or disapproval of the office and work of the County Farm Demonstration Agent in this county, C. E. Stapp, who now holds the office, and the first agent of this kind secured for the county, makes a full report of the activities of his office during the years maintained here, which is published below.

Following also is a letter from Mr. Stapp, in regard to his personal efforts while acting as farm demonstration agent and citizen of Chilton County:

To The People of Chilton County:

On November the 3rd, the voters of the county will be asked to cast their vote for or against the continuation of county agency work in the county. This is not a political question, but a civic question in which every citizen should take a part.

Chilton County is purely an agricultural county. Anything that affects agricultural interests in the county either directly or indirectly affects every citizen of the county.

In this week's issue of both county papers you will find a brief summary of part of my activities since coming to this county four years ago. If you believe the work has been of value, I will appreciate it if you will pass this issue of the papers on to some one who may not be taking either of the county papers.

If you are against the continuance of the work, I will appreciate it if you will be fair enough to take time to find the referred to summary of my work as well as what many of our good progressive people say and read same carefully. I haven't the least doubt that if you will give thirty minutes' conscientious thought to the value of the work, but that you will say that the work I have done is worth many times what I may have been paid for same. Surely you must admit that the farmers of the county are in greater need of help now than they have been in the past.

I have worked hard for the progress and development of Chilton County and at all times tried to make a desirable citizen.

In addition to the above thoughts and what you find elsewhere in this issue of the papers, I ask that you refer to the study of Paul in your Sunday School lessons for the past month.

C. E. STAPP,
County Agent.

Some Activities of Co. Agt., C. E. Stapp, Since Coming To Chilton County Four Years Ago

1. Opened up office headquarters for farmers of the county with radio market service.
2. Daily report shows office activities as follows:
   566 days spent in office.
   A total of 24,697 callers at the office seeking various information.
   4,187 telephone calls seeking information.
   6,640 individual letters written from the office.
   133 circular letters of current information have been written and 110,621 copies mailed out.
   686 days spent in field work.
   2,645 requested farm visits made.
   1,320 meetings held at which timely subjects were discussed and recommendations of the Experiment Station given.
   A total of 24,603 farmers and farm boys attended the above meetings.
   204 school and other miscellaneous meetings with an attendance of 21,655 men, women and children, have been attended, assisted and addressed.
3. Advised with farmers in setting up the third largest and most active county farm bureau in the State.
4. Arranged for the installment of a cream station at the Farm Bureau Office at Clanton, where farmers who do not have enough cream to ship can bring their small amounts of cream and get cash for same.
5. Arranged for and assisted in running poultry cars regularly during the shipping seasons, enabling farmers to get highest market price for their poultry. With better market for poultry has come noticeable growth in poultry industry in the county. With the growth in poultry industry has come many calls on the agent for information about brooding, housing, treatment of and against diseases, feeding, culling for best results. 188 meetings pertaining to better methods of handling poultry have been held by the county agent.
6. The Agent has worked annually with about 300 of our farm boys in their club work. He has arranged annual club camps for these boys at which most inspiring programs were participated in by the boys. The expenses of the last camp being borne entirely by Mr. Stapp.
7. Mr. Stapp's work with the purebred Jersey Club has been outstanding. This was demonstrated at the Jersey Show held in Clanton the 19th of September. A total of 97 meetings have been held in interest of better cattle.
8. Mr. Stapp has assisted the Boy and Girl Scouts in their program.
9. One terracing school has been held and 143 meetings held at each one of which several farmers have learned to operate the terracing level, also obtained latest information on terrace building for the prevention of soil washing.
10. 170 meetings pertaining to soil building, reduction of fertilizer and more economical use of fertilizers have been held. The estimated value of this work alone the past four years amounts to more than $20,000.
11. Mr. Stapp has worked closely with the Thorsby, Clanton and Jemison Strawberry Associations in their educational and marketing work. Mr. L. G Posey of Jemison, gives an interesting example of the value of this work with the strawberry growers, while he was a member of the Thorsby Association. At the request of the farmers in Clanton, Jemison and Maplesville territories, Mr. Stapp aided in the setting up of the Berry Growers' Association. $70,445 worth of strawberries were shipped through the Clanton and Jemison Associations this year.
12. At the request of Mr. Stapp, the Alabama Experiment Station sent Mr. Taylor to the county to do experimental work on fertilizing berries. The data obtained here by Mr. Taylor the past two years indicates that with one more year's work he will be able to make definite fertilizer recommendations for fertilizer that will mean a saving of thousands of dollars to the berry growers, and at the same time more and better berries.
13. Mr. Stapp is now sponsoring a move that will result in carlot shipments from the county of dewberries, sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes and possibly other crops as is done in case of strawberries.
14. Orchards. Mr. Stapp has stressed the "Live at Home" program, including good home orchard on every farm. He has given 101 demonstrations in pruning, spraying and general care of fruit trees.

Mr. Stapp states:

> "During my stay in Chilton County I have tried to make a desirable citizen. What money I have received for work here has either been spent or donated to worthy causes in the county."

H. R. Franks, a progressive farmer who resides south of Clanton on the Birmingham highway, was a visitor to Clanton Saturday. While in town Mr. Franks was a caller at the News office.

Mr. and Mrs. Crit Jones of Lay Dam were visitors to Clanton Saturday. While in town Mr. Jones had his name added to the subscription list of the News.

MASS MEETING ON ALA SCHOOLS IS CALLED OFF

Extra Session Legislature To Relieve Situation Seen As Assured, $417,000 Nov.1

With state schools promised more than $1,000,000 soon and with practical assurance the Legislature will be called in extra session to care for future needs, according to Dr. J. B. Mills, the president of Alabama School Boards Association, Saturday said he had cancelled the mass meeting called for Oct. 15 at Montgomery

At the same time Dr. Mills made public a letter in reply to Gov. Miller's criticism of school forces in his refusal to address the meeting. He said in the letter the school forces had expected the governor to keep his campaign pledges of full support for the schools.

Dr. Mills said he had a conference Friday with C. C. Moseley, president, Education Association, and the latter told him Gov. Miller had been able to promise the schools $417,000 by Nov. 1 and $850,000 about Dec. 1, and the Legislature would care for future needs.

Announcement of cancellation of the meeting followed refusal of Gov. Miller to address the gathering because he did not think it "expedient," and a statement by A. F. Harman, superintendent of education, who discouraged the meeting.

The governor's refusal was accompanied by criticism of Dr. Mills' organization when the executive said very few members of it or teachers of the state had helped to get the Legislature to adopt recommendations made for school relief.

Commenting on the proposed mass meeting, Dr. Harman had asked that it be dropped by saying "I believe that unwholesome publicity and extravagance of assertion ultimately will result unfavorably to our various interests as a state, including particularly the public schools.

"I have consulted persons representing every possible variety of opinion concerning the school situation in Alabama. I have not obtained from any one interview the opinion that such a gathering as that proposed at Cramton Bowl will result in material good for the schools. I am, therefore, publicly expressing this opinion and the sincere hope that wise counselors and school officials throughout the state will discourage the gathering."

DeMABEL'S REDUCES PRICE ON LADIES HAIR CUTTING

In an ad appearing in the News for several weeks of the DeMabel's Beauty Shoppe, the price on hair cutting was quoted at thirty-five cents. This should have been twenty-five cents as Miss Howard has been charging this reduced price for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Conway and John R. Lodge, residents of the Mulberry Community, were in Clanton yesterday.

TRANSFER IS ASKED FOR IN FRIDGE CASE

Arthur Chilton To Defend U. S. Agent Indicted For Shooting On Raid

A petition requesting that the case of the State of Alabama against C. F. Fridge, Federal prohibition agent, in the Coosa Circuit Court, which alleges that Agent Fridge fired with murderous intent on Frank Calloway during a still raid about two weeks ago, be transferred to the United States District Court, was drawn Friday by J. O. Middleton, assistant United States District Attorney.

The petition probably would be filed in the Federal court in Montgomery Saturday, Mr. Middleton said, and upon the filing of the request the case would automatically be transferred to the Federal Court for the trial of Fridge. The petition sets forth the circumstances surrounding the shooting and asks that Judge Charles B. Kennamer, of the United States District Court, issue an appropriate order to the Coosa Circuit Court, commanding that court to certify the record of the case in that court to the Federal

General Principles Adopted By Muscle Shoals Commission Relating to Muscle Shoals, Cove Creek And Development of Tennesse R. Valley

The Muscle Shoals Commission in executive session in Birmingham makes the following general findings and conclusions, subject to such modification as subsequent consideration may warrant:

A. It is economically feasible and desirable to use and operate the Muscle Shoals properties for the following purposes:

1. Quantity production and manufacture of types of commercial fertilizer of greater concentration than those which are now sold to the farmer.

2. Cooperative scientific research and experimental practices by agricultural agencies, natural, state and county, for the development of scientific methods of improvement of soil fertility and for introduction of methods so developed among fertilizer users.

3. Establishments of industrial chemical operations as an essential adjunct to fertilizer production

B. It is the definite conclusion of the Commission that the foregoing public benefits can best be obtained by private operation under lease contracts through competitive negotiations.

C. In addition to usual and necessary covenants, a lease contract covering the properties should contain provisions giving effect to the following:

1. Such power as may be necessary, and such lands, buildings, fixtures and other equipment belonging to the nitrate plants as may be servicable, will be used for production of fertilizer and—or fertilizer ingredients in form suitable for home mixing and—or for direct application to the soil.

2. Products so produced will be sold to farmers or their authorized purchasing agents under conditions providing for equitable distribution and reasonable profit limitations.

3. Capacity for production of a required initial amount of fertilizer or fertilizer ingredients will be increased imum in response to reasonable market from time to time to a stipulated max-demands.

Tennessee River and Cove Creek—Improvement for Navigation, Control of Floods, and Development of Power

Construction of Cove Creek is justified and is recommended for the benefits to accrue to navigation, flood control and incidental power development at Cove Creek and at points downstream. The United States should provide necessary funds for construction of the dam when a responsible licensee, under the Federal Water Power Act, shall agree to install the power house and other equipment for generation and distribution of power and shall also agree to pay the United States reasonable annual compensation for the service value of the dam for power purposes.

Cooperative construction of three high dams in the vicinity of Chickamauga, White Creek and Coulter Shoals between Chattanooga and Knoxville appears to be economically sound. It is recommended that legislation be enacted offering proper and reasonable inducement, under the general plan recommended by the Chief of Engineers and in accordance with the report of Col. Max Tyler submitted to this Commission, to responsible prospective permittees and licensees under the Federal Water Power Act for their cooperative construction in a progressive program. From these reports they appear to be more attractive to private capital at this time than proposed high dams at other points on the main stem of the Tennessee River. A progressive program for their construction would justify contemporaneous construction of Cove Creek and would likewise create power values sufficient to justify subsequent construction of high dams along the Tennessee River below Chattanooga in response to industrial market demands.

It is understood that the foregoing is merely tentative and is subject to change and amendments as may become necessary.

"More genuine satisfaction than any car I ever owned"

THE FORD is good-looking. It is safe. Comfortable. Speedy. Reliable. Long-lived. Economical. Everything a good car should be.

There is, too, an added something about it that brings enthusiastic comments from every one who has ever driven a Ford . . . the joy it puts in motoring.

"I have been a car owner continuously for nearly 20 years," writes a motorist connected with a leading university. "During this period I have bought eleven new automobiles. Eight of the eleven were in the middle-price field, one cost three thousand dollars, and the last is a Ford I purchased thirteen months ago.

"In the light of this experience I can say in all sincerity that I have derived more genuine satisfaction from the Ford than any car I ever owned. In saying this, I am thinking in terms of comfort, safety, driving pleasure, ease of control and economy. My next car will also be a Ford because it will give me what I want at a price I can afford to pay."

When you get behind the wheel of the Ford and drive it yourself you will know it is a truly remarkable car at a low price. You will like it when you first buy it. You will become more and more enthusiastic the longer you drive it.

After thousands of miles of driving you will say "it's a great car." Its economy will save you many dollars.

"A Fool Thinketh"

Being views and opinions of one who has time to think things over while leisurely confined at home. Some good thoughts here this week.

I am happy to observe a spirit of devotion spreading rapidly over our great country. More and more of that spirit is what it will take to put us all on our feet here and hereafter.

Millions and millions of dollars have been paid out by Mr. Hoover and the various governors of the states, the mayors of the cities and towns all over this great land and many other organizations, to "Committees" and "Commissions" with instructions to solve the terrible financial and labor troubles we are experiencing now. No information, nor one penny's worth of relief has resulted from this vast outlay. If that money had been honestly and intelligently spent for the relief of the hungry, think of the good that would have been done. So far as the depression is concerned, that is a matter that will have to be taken to God for settlement. That statement may not be popular, but it is true.

October is handing us some lovely weather this year, nicely flavored with dust.

No wonder the Lord was so bitter in His denunciation of the hypocrites. We have quite a delegation of them in these days and the more you are thrown with them the more fervently you can say amen to all He said and think a whole lot more.

I am certainly glad that Chilton and Coosa Counties have demanded a show down in the bold and high-handed ruling of the Tax Commission in behalf of the pauperized power company. But they have hardly a chance. The Gang is too well organized.

Hoover, Mellon & Co., have handed out another "plan" to cure the depression. They are certainly experts in handing out plans. Evidently they are only sparring for time.

Do you know of anything more pitiful and contemptible than the swell headed thing who struts his way about, empty head high in the air, not even with sufficient brains to see and appreciate the beautiful things in God's world?

Passing a law to control the planting of cotton would be another expensixe arce like the 18th amendment. Lots of money out and not a darn thing in.

Looks like it won't be long before you will have to buy 5 gallons of tax instead of gas.

The Constitution of our country says the states are al lto be self-governed. Congress has authority only on National questions, and each state is an autonomy and is endowed with the sole power of enacting and enforcing such laws as are required by the conditions and environment of that particular state. The Federal Government has no right nor authority to even bear arms in any one of the states without securing the permission of that state first. Our Federal Government now seems to have entirely forgotten the constitutional prerogatives of the state, but is now invading the states with numberless laws, both general and personal. This state of affairs will inevitably lead to an Empire or a bloody revolution in the years to come. Take your choice.

The Lord gave the farmers a wonderful season for growing their crops and the harvest time has been excellent beyond compare, still, hunger and want prevail. God can do His part, but man is a greedy failure.

Hoover arranged to pay the "frozen" debts owing to the millionaire bankers. Why don't he come down the line and pay some "frozen" debts for the farmer?

A Mr. Shouse, a kind of vice-chairman of the National Democratic Executive Committee, delivered a radio address the other day that was a peach. He went back to real democratic principles and outlined what he intends to put before the convention next June as a platform for the party. If the party adopts his ideas and then, after all of these deceptive years, can induce the people to believe they mean what they say, it will sweep the country in the election to follow. Convincing the people they mean what they say will be the job. There has been so much lying done in the past the people have become skeptical.

The breath of winter whispers to us now and then to get our coal pile ready.

Brief News Notes

Recent prices of cotton on the New York Exchange are the lowest recorded on the New York market since 1898 when a quotation of 5.31 was registered. In 1914 the outbreak of the World War paralyzed cotton to the extent of causing exchanges to close and spot prices in the South dropped to a very low price, causing the "buy-a-bale" movement to be launched.

Consumption of American cotton during the year ending August 31 totaled 425,819 bales against a five-year average of 514,499 bales. The latest figure, however, was a substantial improvement over a year ago when 352,626 bales were consumed. These are official figures.

October 1 marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of Federal meat-inspection service in the United States. During these 25 years Federal inspectors have examined annually from 42 to 78 million food animals and their carcasses, a grand total of approximately 1,600,000,000 animals.

QUARTER BILLION IN REVENUE FROM GAS TAXES FOR 6 MONTHS

Gasoline taxes rovided, in the first six months of 1931, a net revenue of $246,373,000 which is to be used principally for road purposes according to information collected from State au- Roads of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Nearly 7,118,000,000 gallons thorities by the Bureau of Public were taxed, an increase of 4½ per cent over the same period last year.

Consumption of gasoline increased in 36 states and decreased in 12 states. On the basis of the figures for the half year it is estimated that the gasoline tax will yield a revenue exceeding a half-billion dollars for the full year.

The tax is now imposed in every state. Only 7 states increased the rate of tax within the six months period. Two others made increases effective in July and August.

The total revenue derived was allocated as follows: Construction and maintenance of State highways, $158,332,000 or 64 per cent; for local roads, $48,417,000 or 20 er cent; State and county bond payments, $18,860,000 or 7½ per cent; city streets, $10,157,000 or 4 per cent and the remainder of $10,607,000 or 4½ per cent for collection costs and miscellaneous items.

Car Can't Be Sold By Tax Collector

There is no provision of law whereby a tax collector may levy on and sell under the tax assessment, an automobile or other property, for failure to pay the ad valorem tax assessed on the automobile by the tax assessor, the office of Atty. Gen. Knight has ruled in an opinion rendered Friday at the request of State Auditor Brandon.

The opinion holds further on this subject that the tax assessor has no authority of law to include the assessment of an automobile in the assessment of other property of a taxpayer. Enforcement by the license inspector of payment of the license tax due, it is stated, always enforces payment of the ad valorem tax due on the automobile, and no other remedy is provided by law in such a case except by suit.

No ad valorem tax is due on an automobile until the license tax on the car is due, it is pointed out, and no license is due on an automobile each beginning Oct. 1, until such automobile is used on the public highway. When it is so used, then the license tax does become due.

Attention is further directed to the fact that the judge of probate is not authorized to issue a license for operating an automobile until the ad valorem tax due on the car for the preceding tax assessment year has been paid, as evidenced by the receipt of the tax collector, delivered to the probate judge by the person applying for the license, which receipt the probate judge is required to file.

When a license tax on operating an automobile on the public highways becomes delinquent, it is added, it is the duty of the license inspector to proceed as required by law to enforce payment and he may bring suit for payment of the license, taxes and penalties, also fees and costs.

Put On The Simultaneous Campaign In Your Church Nov. 30-Dec. 6 Our Biggest, Best Task

By L. E. BARTON, State Mission Secretary

It is reported from Baptist Headquarters in Montgomery that plans for the new Promotion work and Every-Member Canvass are going forward steadily. State, District, Association, and Church Committees have been or are being appointed so as to complete the organization for the distribution of literature among the church members and the forming and training of committees to be ready for the Every-Member Canvass, November 30-December 6.

Dr. W. P. Wilks is Chairman or Director of the Eastern District, in which this county is located. At the district meeting in Alexander City various reasons and arguments for accomplishing this big task were offered and discussed. The magnitude of the undertaking was duly emphasized. It was said by one speaker that he could not favor a proposition that was impossible, nor could he favor an undertaking that was unreasonable; neither could he be enthusiastic for a task that is not difficult. He urged that this is not impossible because it is God's work. God can bring it to pass through his servants. Also that it is not unreasonable because the Baptist people, with purpose of heart and sacrificial service, can do it. Third, that it is challenging and glorious because of its difficulty. It will take our full strength and cooperation. Another reason assigned was that it is scriptural. It is accordding to I Cor. 16:2, which says: "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." That describes weekly, systematic, adequate, and universal giving by the people of God Baptists must fight out their financial battles as all other battles according to the Scripture, if it takes a thousand years. Nobody needs to apologize for this undertaking. The Word of the Lord is back of it. The plan will care for the home work of the churches and for the missionary and benevolent causes which the denomination supports. This is intensely scriptural. The Apostle Pail said, "They that preach the gospel shall live of the gospel."

Also there seems to be a surplus of plans for restoring prosperity, none of which will work.

A CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to our many friends who were so faithfully good to us during the illness and death of our dear wife and mother. To Drs. Mastin and Wood for their faithful service, and words of kindness. To Mr. Spigener, the undertaker, and his efficient forces, for their prompt service and sympathy. Also to the teachers of the county and all others for their floral offerings and kind expressions.

May the good Lord abundantly bless everyone who had part in this, our sad affliction.

WHEREAS, as provided by Section 287 of the Constitution of Alabama, the Act proposing the amendment was not submitted for the approval of the Governor but was valid upon its adoption by the Legislature without his approval, and

WHEREAS, the Legislat ure adjourned on Saturday the 25th day of July, 1931, and Tuesday, the 3rd day of November, 1931, is the second Tuesday after the expiration of three months from and after the final adjournment of the said Legislature at which the amendment was proposed, and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, B. M. Miller, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that on Tuesday the 3rd day of November, 1931, an election will be held at the several polling places within the State of Alabama for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama in the manner and form as required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz:—

Provided, that in counties which are divided into two or more judicial divisions in each of which regular terms of the circuit court are held, the places where said terms of court are held, shall likewise be connected with each other.

Section 3. The proceeds of said bonds shall be used for constructing and/or surfacing of roads and constructing and/or repairing bridges, but not for maintenance or discharging of contract debts, liability or obligations existing prior to the adoption of this amendment.

Be Sure You Understand The County Agent Question

On November 3rd, 1931, qualified voters of Chilton County will go to the polls to vote for, or against, a proposed road bond issue of the State. At this same time, small ballots will be given each voter, on which he or she will vote approval or disapproval on the office and work of the County Farm Demonstration Agent in Chilton County, the office now held by C. E. Stapp.

There seems to be an inclination on the part of the voters to vote against the proposed bond issue. But be sure you understand what the road bond issue is. There is a proclamation from the Governor in this paper in regard to the issue. And by all means be sure you understand why, if possible, the people are asked to vote yes or no, in regard to the county agent work in Chilton County.

This newspaper endorses the work of the County Farm Demonstration Agent in Chilton County because it believes this county has shown considerable improvement agriculturally speaking since the securing of such an agent a few years ago, and after a study of the results from the work. Believing at the same time that every progressive farmer is in favor of it also.

There seems to be some argument as to whether to get rid of the agent would reduce an individual's taxes or not. That is simple. A person who is paying, say, $25.00 in taxes here, one cent from each twenty-five dollars goes to the county agent work, as it is understood by this newspaper. If the office is discontinued, it will not mean a reduction in taxes. Those paying taxes will continue to pay the same amount as usual.

This newspaper is giving generously of its page space this week to publicity on this matter. Activities of C. E. Stapp as County Agent of Chilton County during the past few years are published. We ask that each person read this carefully now

As far as the present holder of the office is concerned, we think Mr. Stapp is helping materially in boosting and aiding the upbuilding of the county, being public and progressive spirited. We have reason to believe that he has given liberally of the salary he receives from the county each month to church and charitable purposes whenever called upon. We suggest that all voters be sure they understand the whys and wherefores before voicing their approval or disapproval of the County Agent work in Chilton County on November 3rd.

Chilton's Loyal School Teachers

The financial conditions of schools over the state have occupied front page space on many newspapers, caused to be the subject of conversations in business offices, across dinner tables, solutions have been offered, solutions have been searched for, but little has been said of the school teachers.

Our hats are off to the school teachers of Chilton County, those persons who are so unselfishly going on with their work, showing a most loyal spirit, giving of their learning and efforts, so that the children of Chilton County will not be deprived of that which is rightfully theirs—an education.

These teachers of the county are not allowing a monetary consideration to cause them to stop their work, and are teaching as usual with no sincerely stated complaint, that they are not being paid, and will not be paid until sometime off. It means a sacrifice on their part, as well as other employees of the educational system of our county, but such a loyal spirit of sacrifice for the benefit of others too young to help themselves will surely be rewarded

Shoals Commission Report Sounds Good

Several days ago the joint Muscle Shoals Commission met in Birmingham to discuss the Muscle Shoals situation. The report of this Commission is carried in this issue of the News. The report states that the Commission had agreed on a three-fold plan for operation of the $150,000,000 development of the government.

There is no doubt about it, the Commission working on this certainly showed some splendid judgment when it recommended that the Government not operate Muscle Shoals, but it be operated by private interests.

The report states, "It is the definite conclusion of the Commission that public benefits can best be obtained by private operation under lease contract through competetive negotiations." The recommendation of the Commission in its report states that the lessee pay a reasonable rental, and that the time of the lease be fifty years.

With this gigantic project on the Tennessee River having been a political football for years and costing the Government many a dollar to keep up, we hope that some immediate steps will be taken by Congress or whoever does it, in following the recommendations from the investigating Commission. A full report of the Commission is published in this issue.

IN CHILTON COUNTY

The county papers are saying something of the election to be held to determine whether we shall continue or discontinue the work of a county farm demonstration agent in this county. The election will be held on November 3rd along with the election on the proposed road bond issue of the state.

General concensus of opinion seems to show that the majority will vote against the bond issue. Ballots for the county agent work will be given out with the other ballots. I hope that the people who vote against the bond issue will not also vote against the county agent work here.

There is a lot to be considered in regard to the work of the county agent in this county. The people should go into this now while they have time before the time to cast their ballot, for or against. To discontinue the work does not mean a saving in taxes to the individual, nor does the continuing of the work mean an increase in taxes.

Was glad to be able to shake the hand of Broadus Connatser the other day when he arrived in Clanton to spend several months. Broadus is one of those fellows you like to know.

Another fellow I would like to see the next time he is in town, is this Sam Edwards, one of our prominent citizens in the county. I hope he'll drop in.

The school teachers in Chilton County deserve the cooperation of every individual in the county is my opinion, due to their unselfishness in giving of their time and efforts that this county may have its school term regardless of whether salaries are paid promptly or not.

It is not such an easy matter for the teachers, whether man or woman, to teach school for several months and not receive their pay when due. It simply means a sacrifice on their part, and they are to be commended.

We are glad to see the Robinson Department Store reopen its doors. This store has just recently been repainted inside and outside, shelves have been refilled with goods and the doors are open for business. The reopening of this store fills a gap in the business section of Clanton that did not look so well.

The offices of the County Tax Collector and the Tax Assessor are under their new boss now. The assistants to W. G. Culp and Aikens Collins are two congenial, likable persons, Miss Cleo Broadhead and Mrs. Walter Robinson. It is somewhat difficult to refer to the latter as Mrs. Robinson, we have known her as Miss Genie Collins, and to us she will remain that for sometime.

We note last Saturday that DeWitt's Cafe has reopened its doors for business after having been closed for several days. This adds another business, again, to Clanton.

Speaking of adding new business houses to Clanton, we wonder how many of our public-spirited citizens are really encouraging the locating of new business firms in Clanton. Seems to us that there is a wide field for new businesses here, however, we do realize at the time would be rather difficult for a new business house to get a foothold. Peanuts ought to be raised in this county without any trouble, according to County Agent Stapp, and if the product is pushed, what would be wrong in bringing an oil mill here?

Before very long, the voters of the country will have another opportunity to express their wishes for another president, or the same one they have now. General concensus of opinion, however, in my opinion, shows the result will without a doubt be a new one. Our present President has been a pretty good one, but seems to me that he has fallen down on some promises that were made during his campaign for office. An office seeker should be careful of the promises he makes during a campaign because he might be elected, then he has those promises to face. Such campaign cries as "A Full Dinner Pail," and "Hoover and Prosperity" didn't seem to materialize, at least that is what seems the opinion of the people of this county.

Seems to me that the Republicans have so long told themselves and everybody else that a Republican administration meant prosperity regardless of which way the water ran, until they have let something slip and the past few years has clearly shown that Republican administrations do not mean Prosperity.

Tom Rockett says he has a filling station ordered and will put it on the lot across the street from the Ford Building. This new station when completed, will dispense the Shell gasoline and oil products, according to Mr. Rockett, and simply means another business house for Clanton, and another tax payer, license payer, etc.

The cost of living in a small town is being cut considerably lower than ever, judging from prices on necessary articles for the home, farm, etc., to be found in the stores in Clanton. Take such things as automobile tires, batteries, etc., these are necessary to some people, and several years ago an automobile tire that would cost twelve dollars, is now being sold at approximately one-half that cost.

Clothing, groceries, etc., have also dropped. A talk with the merchants of Clanton will show one that they can make a dollar go farther now. However, that means that the merchant must sell more goods now in order to make his business appear as good as it was three or four years ago. To sell more goods, more people must spend more money. So after all, I really don't know where it ends, or starts.

But it is true that a person can live in a town the size of Clanton much cheaper and be much better off than living in a large town, or city. Friends are more apt to be present when needed.

In Paris the people cheered for peace when Briand and Laval departed for Berlin; in the German capital the people cheered for peace when the French officials arrived. The moral seems to be that the people of these nations want no more war.

Letters To The Editor

CHILTON COUNTY NOT BOTHERED WITH RED PROPAGANDA

Editor Chilton County News:—

I am writing this article to you, in behalf of the Colored people of Chilton County, in order that it may be read by our many White friends thruout the county. We wish to inform you of the fact that there are no dissenters among our group in this county. We realize the fact that to make Chilton County the best County in the State as far as racial attitude is concerned we must at all times discourage such efforts as would tend to destroy the friendship and harmony between races. The best element of Colored people is bitterly against any such antagonism and we are sure that the Colored people living in this enlightened age will not be influenced by such trifling institutions as will cause discord and strife between the two peoples of this County.

The writer has traveled extensively in the County attending conventions, associations, lodges, school meetings, farm groups and the like. Certainly, if there was such a spirit existing it would be brooding in some of these places.

Finally, we are hoping that you, our White friends and neighbors, will no longer entertain the idea of a spirit of rivalry emanating from any person of our group in Chilton County.

Yours for better relationship—is the voice of the Chilton County Negroes.

Prin. Chilton Co. Training School.

Two Wrecks Occurred On B'ingham Detour

Four motor vehicles figured in accidents occurring on a detour road near Birmingham Tuesday afternoon, late, in which Percy M. Pitts, attorney of Clanton figured also.

Due to repair work being done on a bridge on the main highway into Birmingham, traffic is being directed around towards Edgewood. A small truck said to have been driven by Dan Grover of Autaugaville, swerved to the left of the road and struck a large sedan said to have been driven by T. M. Butler of Kentucky, who was going south at the time, accompanied by his wife, the information states.

Grover is said to have ran from the scene, but a negro who was on the truck with him, remained. Neither were apparently injured, while Mr. and Mrs. Butler were rushed to a hospital in a police car, it was stated. While the wreckage was being removed from the road, on a stiff curve, two other cars collided at the spot. One car was said to have been occupied by Percy M. Pitts of Clanton and Rep. Lancaster of Elmore County, neither were injured.

No arrests were made, according to Officer Cunnynham of Homewood, who was on the scene directing traffic while the damaged cars were being removed. Grover is being sought, it was stated.

Losing Where It Hurts
By the Gentleman at the Keyhole

The following is a clipping from Collier's Weekly, of October 17, 1931.

The other day a Republican active in party affairs and well informed about political conditions and I wrote down, independently of each other, the list of states that the President might carry in the next national election. We agreed in listing the same eight states as all in which Republican prospects were good.

Of course it is early to predict 1932 results. The extent of the revolt against the Republican party may be exaggerated in reports coming in now. And Mr. Hoover's prospects may improve in the next year; they can hardly grow worse. But as it seems today the President is likely to carry only about the same number of states that Governor Smith carried in 1928, though with a slightly larger total of electoral votes, since he will probably have two or three states more populous than any which his 1928 rival carried.

If these two guesses prove to be anywhere near right, then the greatest political overturn that has ever taken place in four years has occurred since the last national election. What is the reason? Perhaps the following letter will throw some light on the conditions which are affecting the Republican party so adversely:

Trouble Among the Regulars

"We are in a most distressing condition out in this section of the United States. While we harvested an unusual crop of wheat and oats and have the best corn prospect in many years, our banks continue to tumble over, credit facilities are practically nil, farms are being foreclosed, mercantile establishments are failing on every hand and a cloud of gloom envelops the country. Many of our most substantial farmers have gone broke, and their farms are now held by the insurance companies holding the mortgages. What I have said of this community is duplicated and in many instances exceeded in every part of our state."

The writer of the letter is an important Republican official in a Middle-Western state, not a wheat state, but one of those theoretically favored regions where diversified farming is practiced.

Where, then, is the Republican party going to get its votes in 1932, provided there is not a great improvement in economic conditions between now and the next election? The Republican party depends generally upon the farmers to carry national elections.

Without upstate New York the Republicans haven't a look-in in the Empire State. It is rural Massachusetts that usually overcomes the Democratic majority of Boston. It is rural New Jersey that is Republican. It is in the rural sections of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan that the die-hard Republicans are to be found.

But the city vote is more mercurial than the country vote, and the cities this time have their own reasons for being politically disaffected. For example, persons familiar with conditions in Detroit predict that that usually Republican city will be likely in 1932 to go 300,000 Democratic. If that guess is anywhere near accurate then Michigan will have to be stricken off the list of eight states assigned to Mr. Hoover.

Enough Prohibition, Too

Also the dry vote on which the Republicans count heavily to win the next election is largely on the farms. Will the farmers be so firm for prohibition that they will forego the satisfaction of expressing their resentment of their economic condition at the polls?

Human nature being what it is, it is a safe guess that a good many of them won't, especially with faith in prohibition somewhat shaken by the results of a ten years' test of its practicability. Most judges of politics familiar with the state predict that dry Kansas will vote for a wet Democratic candidate for President next year.

It is generally admitted that the record low prices made for wheat this year will have profound political effects in the other wheat states as well as in Kansas. But in the North and East, where diversified farming prevails, many farmers raise wheat—not a great deal of wheat but still enough to feel unhappy over the return.

Corn is a more popular crop—most farmers raise some of it. A bumper crop of corn is in sight at this writing, to bring a very low price. Low-priced corn is always promptly followed by a great production of hogs, with demoralized prices for pork.

The advice to diversify farming has borne its fruit this year in a pretty general overproduction. The crisis in wheat has been dramatic. Less attention has been attracted to the prices of other farm products. At no time in a generation has there been such general reason for dissatisfaction among farmers. Republican remedies for agricultural ills, their Farm Board and their tariff, have failed. And voters are not reasonable.

CHILTON CO. HI SCHOOL HOLDS PRATTVILLE HI TO 0-0 DRAW

The blue and gold warriors of Chilton County High School held the strong Prattville aggregation to a draw on the local gridiron to repeat the feat of last Friday with Marbury High.

Under a beautiful October sun with the colors of Chilton flying in a truly football atmosphere the inexperienced and light aggregation of Coach Walker's Tigers fought a battle that deserves credit in the realm of gridiron lore.

Not once did Prattville threaten to pierce the impenetrable wall formed by the plebe warriors in the heart of the Chilton line, while the wingmen, Littlejohn and Miller, time after time spilled the interference and threw the determined Prattville backs for losses of from three to eight yards.

Turning the pages of defensive football we found the offensive highlights Arnold, J. Tiffin and Burdette, driving, digging and smashing right into the heart of Prattville's line for gain after gain of three to twelve yards.

The outstanding players for Prattville on defense were the left tackle and center, on offense Stewart, quarterback.

FIRE DEPT. ISSUES RULE TO SPECTATORS AT FIRES

Due to much trouble and inconvenience on the part of members of the Clanton volunteer fire department, caused by persons who go to fires as spectators, the department calls attention to on ardnance recently passed by the city government, regulating traffic during the time of a fire in Clanton. The department requests that persons who are spectators at fires in Clanton remain outside the block in which the fire is located, and by all means stay away from the truck and hose. Members of the fire department are not responsible should some spectator be injured while the former is engaged in his duties at a fire, and the people of Clanton are being asked for their cooperation in this, as well as their attention being called to the recently adopted ordnance on this which makes it a violation of a city law to interfere.

PAUL IN THESSALONICA

Acts 17:1, 5-11 I Thessalonians 2:7-12

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Paul and Silas were escorted to the boundary of Philippi by the very magistrates who sentenced them. That part of the country was also familiar ground during the recent world war. Thessalonica is the modern Salonica. The usual approach was made through the Jewish synagogue. Soon, jealousy arose because the success of the evangelists meant the giving up of many of the ancient national traditions and customs. A group of roughnecks was stirred up to attack Paul and they sought him in the house of Jason. Fortunately the soul winners were elsewhere, and poor Jason had to bear the brunt of the attack. Meanwhile high praise was paid to the work of the gospel in the charge that was made: "These that have turned the world upside down have come hither also."

Since the messengers could no longer be heard in Thessalonica they were sent forward to Beroea, where the same method was pursued. The people showed just plain common sense when they took the words of Paul and sought out confirming references in their Scripture rolls, our Old Testament. Therein they found the prophecies concerning the Messiah and it held their complete fulfillment in the life and works of Jesus Christ. We do not need to believe everything we are told, but many a great truth is lost because we refuse to give attention to the supporting evidence. The rest was that many believed and among the number we find a group of Greek women of distinction.

In passing, attention should be given to the various letters that Paul write to the churches that he established en route. Two epistles were sent to the church at Thessalonica after Paul reached Corinth. The Golden Text is a good verse to commit to memory: "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law,"

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT ON DEATH OF E. J. HARRELL

To The Worshipful Master, Wardens And Brethren, Century Lodge No. 567 A F & A M:

We, the undersigned committee, respectfully beg leave to submit for your approval and adoption the following preambles and resolutions:

Our departed friend and brother, Evans J. Harrell, was born Oct. 6th, 1853, and departed from this life Sept. 12th, 1931. He married Miss Alice Faulkner and there was born to this happy marriage the following children: Miss Ethel Harrell and Mr. Neal H. Harrell of Billingsley, Ala., and Clifford L. Harrell of Rayburn Gap, Ga. All of whom together with his widow and host of friends mourn the loss of our esteemed Friend and Brother.

Brother Harrell was made a Mason Feb. 12th, 1901. He was a true and tried Mason and a loyal citizen.

Brother Harrell was laid to rest with Masonic Honors at Billingsley Cemetery, Billingsley, Ala., September 13th, 1931 with Century Lodge No. 567 officiating together with a large number of visiting Masons where the last funeral rites were paid to this worthy brother.

Therefore, Be It Resolved by this Lodge that in the death of Brother Harrell his family has lost a kind and affectionate husband and father and that in this their great loss, and in this hour of bereavement, may their pangs of sorrow be ameliorated by the divine thought that he lived a life on this earth that was acceptable in the sight of God, and now resides in those heights above where all is gladness. We extend to the bereaved widow and family our heartfelt sympathy and commend them to the heavenly father above who alone can console us.

Be It Lastly Resolved that in the death of this Brother that Century Lodge No. 567 has lost one of its most devout members an honest man and brother, a valuable citizen whose life and character stands forth a paragon of truth and goodness and whose precepts we can all follow with assurance that we shall meet in that bourne from which no traveller returns and in that land where all good Masons hope at last to mee.

Respectfully submitted,

—G. T. Dickinson, Urvin Golson, E. B. Mills, Committee.

FACTS NOT POPULAR

It is strange trait of most humans would increase their store of real knowledge. We spend many sours reading trashy fiction, which, if devoted to the acquiring of useful information would make us really cultured.

With the greatest wonders of the universe overhead every night, few persons know the names of half a dozen stars. Few know or can distinguish the difference between a fixed star and a planet.

This is merely one illustration of how little interest is taken in the great facts of nature. Even with regard to current events, small attention is paid to new developments which mean so much to mankind. The greatest discoveries of science are hardly ever discussed, while details of the latest murder are on every tongue.

While a relatively few people in the world are giving thought to the marvelous developments of our wonderful age, the vast majority confine their reading and conversation to a narrow range of he most trivial subjects. Facts worth knowing are not popular.

CHAPTER LIV

The French government had expressed a desire to bestow their decorations on American officers and men, and asked if I would accept an appointment in the Legion of Honor with the grade of grand officer.

As congress had recently granted permission for members of our forces to receive foreign decorations, the French government was advised accordingly, and it was to confer this honor upon me that President Poincare paid his brief visit to Chaumont August 6, 1918.

I met him at the station with a military escort and conducted him to my headquarters, where the senior officers of the staff were presented. After that formality we repaired to the small area of barracks, where the headquarters troop and band were drawn up in line for the ceremony.

I was not insensible to the high personal honor, but regarded it mainly as an appreciation on the part of the French government of the assistance America had already given to the cause.

Pershing Takes Command.

As the American army was now an accomplished fact, it seemed advisable to begin preparations immediately to carry out the plan of campaign adopted July 24, providing for a distinctive American operation against the St. Mihiel salient.

I motored to Sarcus August 9, and after discussing with Marshal Foch the changed situation in the Marne sector and the practical stabilization of the front on the Vesle, I suggested the transfer of the First army headquarters to the St. Mihiel region, where it could begin immediate preparations for the proposed offensive. We considered the outline of my plans and without hesitation Marshal Foch acquiesced in the transfer.

Returning to Paris the same afternoon I went to Provins to talk the matter over further with General Petain. We took stock of available divisions for the St. Mihiel operation, and he said I could count on him definitely to do everything in his power to furnish whatever we might require.

Having thus reached a general understanding regarding the preliminary details of the move, I drove the following morning to La Ferte-sous-Jouarre to take formal command of the First army and to give instructions to my staff regarding the movement of headquarters to Neufchateau.

Bell's Division in Action.

The Thirty-third division (Bell) was still with the British when the combined attack of the British Fourth and the French First armies in the Montdidier-Albert sector began August 8. The division was in front line training with the British Fourth army and was attached to the British Third corps for the operation, the One Hundred and Thirty-first regiment of infantry being assigned to the British Fifty-eighth division. This regiment joined in the attack August 9 against the Morlancourt-Chipilly spur north of the Somme. It reached its objectives in splendid fashion and occupied a line on the western edge of Gressaire wood, extending southward along the river.

August 10, it continued to progress against decided opposition, gaining the eastern edge of the forests of Fosse and Marcon. During the following three days, the command having been shifted, the One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry under the Australian Fourth division attained a line just west of Bray-sur-Somme. The three other regiments were in reserve during the operations. The One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry was relieved August 20, having advanced over three miles and suffered heavy casualties.

I motored to the British front Sunday to be present at Thirty-third division headquarters, near Molliens-aux-Bois, on the occasion of the visit of King George, who was then visiting his armies. General Bliss had preceded me and we both spent the night there. That evening General Bell, relating the details of the participation of his troops with the British, said their services had been urgently requested and that they had acquitted themselves well.

King George Bestows Decorations.

The king arrived August 12, to present decorations to selected men of the Thirty-third division, who had participated in the recent attacks of the British army. Soon after his arrival the king invited General Bliss and me to his room, where he presented me with the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath and bestowed the Order of St. Michael and St. George on General Bliss. The presentations were informal, as the king simply handed the decorations to us in turn, at the same time expressing his appreciation of American assistance.

We then accompanied the king to the place where the men were assembled for the ceremony. He was gracious in his compliments as he pinned the decorations on our men, and the recipients were extremely proud.

CHAPTER LV

The final decision that the First American army would undertake the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient as its first operation was transmitted to Army headquarters August 10 and the army staff immediately began the development of plans for the concentration of the necessary troops for its execution.

It was certain the psychological effect on the enemy of our success in this first operation by the American army as well as on the allies, our own troops and our people at home would be of great importance. The attack must, therefore, not only succeed, but a serious hostile reaction must be made impossible.

The headquarters of the First army were removed to Neufchateau between August 11 and 16. The special army troops assembled north of Chateau Thierry were moved eastward during the same period.

Composition of First Army.

The following corps and divisions were placed at the disposal of the First army for the St. Mihiel operation and their condition may be summarized as follows:

The First and Second divisions were excellent as to training, equipment and morale. They had attacked July 18 in the Soissons drive.

The Third, Fourth, Twenty-sixth and Forty-second divisions were of fine morale and considerable experience, as they had fought in the defense about Chateau Thierry and in the advance toward the Vesle river.

Serving a Field Gun.

The Eighty-ninth and Ninetieth divisions were going through their sector training on the front between Toul and the Moselle river and the Fifth and Thirty-fifth divisions were taking their sector training in the Vosges.

The Thirty-third, Seventy-eighth, Eightieth and Eighty-second divisions had been training behind the British front, one brigade of the Thirty-third having had front-line service with the British, and the Ninety-first division had never been in the front line and had received less than four weeks' training in France.

Misleading the Germans.

The considerable circulation of troops in the St. Mihiel area naturally attracted the attention of the people and of the officers and soldiers. Although cautioned against such discussion, the probability of an American attack on the salient was discussed here and there.

To divert the enemy's attention from our real objective it was necessary first to create some uncertainty in the minds of our own troops. The rumor was therefore started around headquarters that our first offensive might be in the direction of Mulhouse, in the Rhine valley, beyond the Vosges mountains, northeast of Belfort.

It was also decided to make a diversion in that direction, and as a preliminary step an officer was sent to lease buildings in Belfort. At the same time confidential instructions were sent Major-General Bundy, commanding the Sixth corps, to proceed to Belfort with a limited staff and prepare detailed plans for an offensive with the object of seizing Mulhouse and the heights to the southeast and eventually establishing our line along the Rhine.

In the letter of instructions seven divisions were mentioned as having been designated for the attack, and three officers from each of these units were detailed to report to General Bundy to assist in the reconnaissance. He was directed to expedite the work of preparation, as the movement would probably begin September 8, under my personal command.

An attack by the French Tenth army, begun August 29, 1918, was undertaken to force the retirement of the enemy from the Vesle and Aisne rivers. On its relief from the Vesle August 7 the Thirty-second division (Haan) was assigned to the Tenth army and entered the line August 28, immediately undertaking a series of local operations in which gains were made in the face of very heavy fire. Ravines and numerous caves in the region provided ideal cover for the defending troops.

The general attack of the army the following day met but slight success, the enemy resisting desperately along his entire front, but on the 30th, by a flank attack from the south, the Thirty-second division captured Juvigny, pushing a small salient into the German lines.

Hard fighting continued August 31, but by the end of the day the Thirty-second had reached the important Soissons-St. Quentin road, where it was relieved September 2. The Thirty-second division had advanced nearly three miles and its success contributed greatly to the forced withdrawal of the German line to the Aisne river.

Pershing Takes Over Sector.

As prearranged between General Petain and myself, the sector from Port-sur-Seille (east of the Moselle river) to Watronville (north of Les Esparges), forty-two miles in extent, then occupied by the entire French Eighth army and a part of the French Second army, was transferred to my command on August 30.

The front included the St. Mihiel salient, which was between these points, and embraced the permanent fortresses around Toul. We had three divisions in line on the south face of the sector, but the mass of our battle troops would not take over the trenches until the night before the attack.

Foch Springs Surprise.

August 30, the day I assumed command of the sector, Marshal Foch, accompanied by General Weygand, his chief of staff, came to my residence at Ligny-en-Barrois and after the usual cordial exchange of greetings presented an entirely new plan for the use of the American army.

The marshal began by saying that the German armies were in more or less disorder from recent attacks by the allies and that we must not allow them to reorganize, and that the British would continue their attack in the direction of Cambrai and St. Quentin and the French toward Mesnil.

Then, much to my surprise, he proposed that the objectives in the St. Mihiel operation be restricted and the attack made on the southern face only, and that upon its completion two other operations be undertaken by combined American and French, a number of our divisions going under French command.

Pershing Insists on U. S. Army.

I repeated what I had often said, that the American government and people expected the army to act as a unit and not be dispersed in this way. I pointed out that each time we were about to complete the organization of our army, some proposition like this was presented to prevent it.

The discussion was somewhat heated and much of it was carried on so rapidly that it could not be translated. He continued to reiterate his demands for the adoption of his plan, but I had learned that it was necessary to be very firm in dealing with him, and I finally said, in effect:

"Marshal Foch, you have no authority as allied commander in chief to call upon me to yield up my command of the American army to have it scattered among the allied forces, where it will not be an American army at all."

He was apparently surprised at my resentment of his attempt to confine American effort to subordinate roles, and said, "I must insist upon the arrangement," to which I replied, as we both rose:

"You may insist all you please, but I decline absolutely to agree to your plan. While our army will fight wherever you may decide, it will not fight except as an independent American army."

He said he was disposed to do what he could toward forming an American army. He then picked up his maps and papers and left, very pale and apparently exhausted, saying at the door as he handed me the memorandum of his proposal that he thought that after careful study I should arrive at the same conclusion he had.

Agreement Is Reached.

My chief of staff, General McAndrew, and chief of operations, Fox Conner, were sent to confer with Weygand September 1 and returned to Ligny-en-Barrois with word that Marshal Foch desired to see General Petain and me the following day. Motoring to Petain's headquarters with Boyd and De Marcenches, we found McAndrew and Conner had preceded us and after lunch we went to Bombon.

Opening the conference Foch referred to the note he had handed me August 30 and to my reply and asked my observations. Stating my attitude on the desirability of carrying out vigorous offensives to the fullest possible extent, I explained that if it should be deemed necessary to abandon the St. Mihiel project in order to begin the larger offensive, which was understood to be west of the Meuse, I would abide by his decision.

In the ensuing discussion, while there was considerable sparring, it was agreed the American army should operate as a unit under its own commander on the Meuse-Argonne front.

Marshal Foch concluded that the date for the operation should be postponed so we could first carry out the limited attack at St. Mihiel. We finally reached the definite understanding that after St. Mihiel our First army should prepare to begin this second offensive not later than September 25.

CHAPTER LVI.

"The First army attacked yesterday and the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient is complete," reads my diary of September 13, written at Ligny-en-Barrois.

"Our troops behaved splendidly. The secretary of war visited two corps headquarters; returned to Ligny much delighted at our success.

"Petain and I went to the town of St. Mihiel today and were warmly greeted by the people. This is my birthday and a very happy one."

The attack of the infantry on the southern face of the St. Mihiel salient started at five in the morning and before that I went with several staff officers to old Fort Gironville, situated on a commanding height overlooking the battlefield from the south. The secondary attack on the west was launched at 8 a. m. as an element of surprise for artillery preparation there.

Weather Gives Advantage.

A drizzling rain and mist prevented us from getting a clear view, but the progress of our troops could be followed by the barrage which preceded them. Notwithstanding a heavy rainfall the night of September 11-12, the weather gave us an advantage, as the mist partly screened our advance from the enemy.

Overcome Entanglements.

Thanks to the thorough preparation beforehand, the wire entanglements were more easily overcome than we had expected.

Trained teams of pioneers and engineers, with bangalore torpedoes, wire cutters and axes, assisted in opening gaps in the masses of barbed wire covering the German positions. The leading troops themselves carried along rolls of chicken wire, which was thrown across entanglements here and there, forming a kind of bridge for the infantry.

In all their offensives the allies had spent days destroying entanglements with artillery fire or had used a large number of heavy tanks, but we had only a few light tanks, ineffective for such work. The fact that we had smothered the enemy artillery was an advantage, as it enabled the leading waves deliberately to do their work without serious loss.

The quick passage through these entanglements by our troops excited no little surprise among the French, who sent a large number of officers and noncommissioned officers to St. Mihiel several days later to see how it had been done. One of these officers, after his reconnaissance, remarked in all seriousness that the Americans had the advantage over Frenchmen because of their long legs and large feet.

Troops Overrun Objectives.

In making our dispositions for battle our older divisions, the First, Second and Forty-second, had received positions on the southern face opposite the open spaces, to enable them to flank the wooded areas quickly, thus aiding the advance of less experienced units assigned to these areas.

The whole line, pivoting as planned on the Eighty-second division on the right, advanced resolutely to the attack. The entire operation was carried through with dash and precision.

By afternoon the troops had pushed beyond their scheduled objectives and by evening had reached the second day's objective on most of the southern front.

The division of the Fourth corps (Dickman) and those on the left of the First corps (Liggett) overwhelmed the hostile garrisons, and quickly overran their positions, carrying the fighting into the open. The German resistance on this part of the front was disorganized by the rapidity of our advance and was soon overcome. Although the enemy was expecting an attack, he did not think it would take place so soon and it therefore came as a surprise.

When the First division, on the marching flank of the southern attack, had broken through the hostile forward positions, the squadron of cavalry attached to the Fourth corps was passed through the breach. At 1:45 p. m. it pushed forward to reconnoiter the roads toward Vigneulles, but encountering machine guns in position was forced to retire.

Western Attack Slower.

On the western face of the salient progress was not so satisfactory. The Twenty-sixth division, in its attempt to make a deep advance toward Vigneulles, met considerable resistance, and except for a battalion of the division reserve had not reached the day's objective.

The French at the tip of the salient had attempted to follow up the flanks of our successful penetrations, but made only small advances. Upon the request of Gen. E. J. Blondlat, commanding the French Second Colonial corps, a regiment of the Eightieth division (Cronkhite), in reserve, was sent to his assistance.

On the afternoon of the Twelfth, learning that the roads leading out of the salient between the two attacks were filled with retreating enemy troops, with their trains and artillery, I gave orders to the commanders of the Fourth and Fifth corps to push forward without delay.

Using the telephone myself, I directed the commander of the Fifth corps to send at least one regiment of the Twenty-sixth division toward Vigneulles with all possible speed.

That evening a strong force from the Fifty-first brigade pushed boldly forward and reached Vigneulles at 2:15 a. m. the 13th. It immediately made dispositions that effectively closed the roads leading out of the salient west of that point. In the Fourth corps the Second brigade of the First division advanced in force about dawn of the 13th, its leading elements reaching Vigneulles by 6 a. m. The salient was closed and our troops were masters of the field.

Could Have Passed Hindenburg Line.

The troops continued to advance on the 13th, when the line was established approximately along the final objectives set for this offensive. In view of the favorable situation created just west of the Moselle river by our successes farther to the left, a limited attack was made on that part of the front by elements of the Eighty-second and Ninetieth divisions, with good results.

During the night our troops all along the line were engaged in organizing their new positions for defense, preparatory to the withdrawal of divisions and corps troops for participation in the Meuse-Argonne battle. September 14, 15 and 16 local operations continued, consisting of strong reconnaissances and occupation of better ground for defensive purposes. Beginning the 13th, several counterattacks were repulsed. The line as finally established was: Haudiomont, Fresnes-en-Woevre, Doncourt, Jaulny, Vandieres.

Reports received the 13th and 14th indicated that the enemy was retreating in considerable disorder. Without doubt an immediate continuation of the advance would have carried us well beyond the Hindenburg line and possibly into Metz, and the temptation to press on was very great. But we would probably have become deeply involved and delayed the greater Meuse-Argonne operation, to which we were wholly committed.

During the fighting from September 12 to 16 the German One Hundred and Twenty-fifth, Eighth landwehr, Eighty-eighth and Twenty-eighth divisions, reenforced the enemy's line and several other divisions arrived in reserve positions. September 16, in front of the First army, there were ten German divisions and two brigades in line and seven divisions in reserve.

French Overjoyed by Release.

Nearly 16,000 prisoners were taken and some 450 enemy guns had fallen into our hands. Our casualties numbered about 7,000. As the enemy retreated he set fire to many large supply dumps and several villages. The few remaining French inhabitants who found themselves within our lines were overjoyed to be released from the domination of the enemy, but many were left destitute by the burning of their homes at the very moment of deliverance.

On the 13th General Petain came by my headquarters and we went together to St. Mihiel, where the people, including children carrying French flags, gave us a welcome which may well be imagined when one realizes that they had been held as prisoners, entirely out of touch with their own countrymen, for four years, though always within sight of the French lines.

On my visit to several corps and division headquarters the following day I found all jubilant over the victory and overflowing with incidents of the fighting, reciting many cases of individual heroism among the troops.

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

We had a splendid service last Sunday morning. Three people joined the church, J. G. Newton, Mrs. J. G. Newton and Virgil Newton. With pleasure we welcome this excellent family into our church life.

Next Sunday our Sunday school meets at 9:45 and preaching at 11 A.M. The Leagues meet at 6:45 P. M., but we will have no night service. Our people are urged to attend the meeting in progress at the Baptist church.

The pastor leaves next Monday morning to attend the Ecumenical conference in Atlanta, but will be back on the following Friday.

What about being in your place at your church next Sunday? Break that bad habit of yours that keeps you away. You need the church more than the church needs you.

We read of a young woman who shot her susband the day after their marriage, probably having in mind the slogan: "Eventually, why not now?"

POISON
in Your bowels!

Poisons absorbed into the system from souring waste in the bowels, cause that headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied constipation for forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to people of all ages. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstores sell.

S. M. EDWARDS ENDORSES WORK OF THE COUNTY FARM AGENT

Tells The Speculators To Go To Farming If They Have Any Doubts Or Don't Believe The County Agent Is Worthwhile

Editor: Chilton County News:

I notice that the Commissioners Court again wants to know what the people think of the County Farm Demonstration Agent. I think that should be a question for the farmers to settle, for it is purely a farm question. The farmer is better qualified to say whether Mr. Stapp is of valuable service to him or not.

This question came up twelve months ago in one of those famous mass meetings. Mr. Stapp received the endorsement of every farmer present in the meeting. Of course we did not expect the chicken feed and seed dealers to endorse Mr. Stapp, simply because he helps the farmer to sell his surplus chickens at a much better price than the speculator will give him. He also helps them to get their seed, and sees that they get the best. He helps with our terrace problems.

The County Agent is doing a great deal for the youth of our county, by instilling in their young minds the value of pure bred stock, soil building, and many other valuable things. Of course, Mr. Stapp can not help us unless we will give him a chance to help us. I have not used him to the extent that I should have, but that is my fault when I have not called on him. He has offered his services to me, and that is as far as he can go. I see him giving valuable assistance to others, and whether I ever call on him or not, he is worth many times what the county puts out on him to the farmers of Chilton County.

And now a few words to the speculator who lives from the labor of the farmers. If you are not satisfied with Mr. Stapp helping the farmers, and you feel that you are not getting what you would if you could get him out of the way, you just quit the speculating game and go to farming, and I will guarantee you that you will welcome any assistance you can get under this "Hoover Prosperity."

And now here comes Miller with that stiff handled broom asking us to vote another twenty-five million dollars of bonds on our shoulders, notwithstanding we are already crushed to the ground and in bankruptcy. I hope to see this bond issue beaten the worst of anything that has ever been offered to the voters.

Let Governor Miller get hold of the right end of that stiff handled broom and cut his own salary, and then cut the salary of every other officer down to the constable. The officers are getting too much of our tax money in salaries. They are the only set of people who are expecting their same salaries, fees, per cent, etc. Whether the old farmers can get it for them this time is very doubtful. He has carried his burdens about to the end of his ability.

History tells us that depression has been the cause of all revolutions. If these times continue, God only knows what will be next.

Farmers, go to the polls and vote for your own interests. Don't listen to some fellow who is interested only in his own behalf.

"Some Railroad Facts"

(An Editorial Reprinted by Permission From The South Bend News-Times.)

TAXES PAID BY HIGHWAY FREIGHT CARRIERS—Go Where?
TAXES PAID BY RAILROADS—
Where Do They Go?
The Railroads Must Earn To Spend

"Taxes paid by highway freight carriers in the form of gasoline excises and license fees are expended chiefly for what?

For maintaining the highways over which these freight carriers pass and for constructing new ones.

Taxes paid by the railroads—they average nearly $1,600 yearly for every mile of track—go for what? Maintenance of the railroad lines? Not at all. Maintenance of the governments that maintain highway freight lines for competition with the railroads.

Maintaining a mile of railroad for a year costs about $3,500. Who pays that? The taxpayers? Oh, no; the taxpayers pay for maintaining the roadbed for the motor trucks; the railroads pay for their own maintenance and also for a share of the maintenance of their competitors.

Part of the revenue of the railroads comes from hauling the mails. The Federal Government is subsidizing a competitive form of mail transport, the airmail, by paying 105 times as much per pound as it pays the railroads.

Why should anybody care whether the people kill the railroads by supporting fine highways for freight transport and restricting the railroads in their operations, preventing them from operating on the highways?

Because it is not good for the people to have railroads in a perilous financial position and likely to default on their bonds. But some one answers, few people own railroad bonds. Quite true; but the life insurance companies own them, and many people have bought life insurance policies and expect the companies to be ready to pay death claims in full and to meet cash surrender and loan demands.

Many savings banks, especially the large eastern mutuals, are heavy investors in railroad securities.

Federal state aid for roads at the rate of $125,000,000 a year comes out of the pockets of the taxpayers, much of it from the railroads; and is used for building up a competitor to the railroad—the highway freight and passenger line.

Is the whole thing unfair and dangerous? It is unfair and economically perilous. It is suicidal. Let it alone a few years, and the railroads will be whipped.

Can anything be done? Certainly something can be done. That is what we have a Congress for, and a President to advise and suggest."

The Management of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad has been impressed with the clear statements contained in the above reproduced editorial concerning the operation of American Railroads. It hopes that every reader of this newspaper, every law maker, and every newspaper editor will read this editorial carefully and digest the facts contained therein.

Mitchell Dam News

Mrs. J. L. Hollis is spending the week in Clanton with friends.

A few of the people here are attending the revival in Clanton, and report they are hearing some good sermons.

Mrs. Reuben Miller and son, Chester, from Clanton spent a while Monday with Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Miller.

Mrs. McGraw has as her guest this week her sister, Miss Daniels.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hendrix observed their wedding anniversary Sunday and with a few friends and relatives dined at the Club.

Fishing seems to be the leading sport here yet, with both the camp and visitors. They are catching lots of trout bass and drum.

Mitchell Dam is progressing nicely in an educational way. The literary school with Mrs. J. S. Ogletree as teacher, is going on the second month in a fine way, and the employees educational program has created great enthusiasm under the leadership of Mr. A. B. Stanley and J. G. O'Brien.

Many times during the day or week or month, in the ordinary affairs of life and in emergencies you see evidence of the value of the telephone and realize the indispensable part it plays in every business and social activity.

Men transact a great part of their business over it. Women use it constantly to save steps and time in social and household duties. In an increasing number of ways, it adds to the comfort and security of family life.

Subscribers who look back over the month and consider what the telephone has meant to them are quick to appreciate its unequalled value and low price.

WHEN DANGER LOOMS

It is a sad commentary on present day intelligence that we are killing human beings at the rate of 35,000 a year and wounding 900,000 more in automobile accidents in the United States. Most of these deaths and injuries could be presvented by the exercise of reasonable caution by drivers on our streets and highways.

While many accidents are due to sheer recklessness, a large percentage are caused by defective car equipment. This is especially true with respect to brakes. Even the most careful driver is helpless if his brakes fail to function in an emergency.

Some pertinent observations on this subject are made by W. T. Palmer, an official of the company making Rusco brake linings, who has been making a nationwide survey of the automobile accident situation. He says:

"Driving instinct forces your foot down on the brake pedal when a car, truck, traffic light or other obstacle looms ahead, and this automatic action on your part usually takes place before your brain has had time to analyze the impulse puts on your brakes the burden of saving your life by acting more quickly than your deliberate thought could direct your hands and legs to act. If your brakes are out of adjustment or worn they can not possibly give you the protection they are designed to give. The intelligent motorist, therefore, "gives his brakes a break" by keeping them in perfect adjustment and hav-

GOVERNMENT SALARIES

Some interesting facts respecting the salaries of high governmentofficials are given in a recent publication by the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, which notes that Washington's salary of $25,000 a year was the pay of all Presidents until 1873, when an increase to $50,000 was made. In 1909 the present salary of $75,000 was authorized by Congress.

Cabinet officers in the early days received what would be considered very meager pay today. Thomas Jefferson drew only $3,500 a year as secretary of state; Alexander Hamilton drew the same as secretary of the treasury; General Knox, the first secretary of war, received but $3,000, and the attorney-general had a part-time job with little pay. These four were the only cabinet officers from 1789 to 1799.

Members of Congress received no regular yearly salary in the early days, but were paid $6 a day when actually attending sessions. In 1816 a salary of $1,500 a year was provided, but this was repealed the following year and $8 a day for actual service was established as their compensation. In 1856 the pay of members of Congress was fixed at $3,000; in 1866 at $5,000; in 1875 at $7,500, and in 1925 at $10,000.

Leading movie stars, prizefighters, baseball sluggers and columnists would sniff at all these salaries, except that of the President, and many of them make, even if they do not earn, much more than is paid the nation's chief executive.

FIRE LOSSES TOTAL $500,000,000 IN 1930

President Herbert Hoover has joined the ranks of those who are fighting the monster fire demon that laid waste to $500,000,000 worth of property in 1930. He designated the week of October 5 to 10 as a period in which a concerted attack was made upon fire prevention.

The 1930 loss of $500,000,000 was an increase of $40,000,000 over 1929. "Consequently," said Lyle Brown, extension forester at Auburn, "the friends of the movement must put forth greater effort to hold it in check and they must exert a much greater effort to make a substantial reduction."

Farm fire losses totaled fully $100,000,000 or about one-fifth of the annual total, said Mr. Brown. This included buildings and other farm fires. Losses due to burning woods represented an enormous total.

This loss of $100,000,000 represented more than $30,000 per county for farm fires only. It represented more than five times this amount for all fires.

"Precaution with fires," continued Mr. Brown, "will prevent many destructive fires. Buildings need to be arranged with a view to fire prevention and control. Matches should be handled carefully and every precaution exercised with a view to preventing fires. Once they are started they are difficult to stop. It is the little fire that grows into a big fire."

The United States Department of Agriculture has published a bulletin entitled "Fire Safeguards for the Farm." It is No. 1643 and copies will be mailed upon request.

Transfer Is Asked For In Fridge Case, Montg.

Court.

The order will also enjoin the State Court from proceeding further in the case.

Thus Agent Fridge will be tried in the United States Court for an offense committed against the State. He will be defended by the United States District Attorney and will be prosecuted by Solicitor Hardagree, of the Coosa Circuit Court, and a jury composed of citizens from the several counties in the Montgomery Division of the United States Court will hear the testimony.

Calloway, on the other hand, charged with a felony in connection with the operation of a still, is subject to trial in both the Coosa Circuit Court and the United States District Court.

In other words if the Coosa Court failed to convict Calloway he might be tried in the Federal Court for the same offense. The United States supreme Court has held that in committing one offense against the prohibition law the offender has offended both the State and Federal Government and is liable for trial in both courts.

Agent Fridge, however, can be tried only in the Federal Court if the Federal Court orders transfer of the case, for under the Federal Statutes an employe of the Government must answer to a Federal Court when he is charged with an offense committed in the discharge of his duties as an agent of the Federal Government. However, in the case of Agent Fridge, only one law, that of the State of Alabama, has been violated for there is no Federal law against shooting a man unless such act occurs on property under the exclusive control of the United States Government.

So Agent Fridge, if and when the case comes to trial, will be prosecuted by the State of Alabama, in a court of the United States, defended by the United States Attorney and subject to the penalty, upon conviction, which the United States has prescribed.

Calloway is still in a hospital at Clanton and is believed to be recovering from a gunshot wound fired into the lumbar region of the spine. Calloway said that he was shot down as he fled and after having been shot he struggled with the officer and wrested himself free, when the officer struck him on the head with the shotgun, inflicting a severe scalp wound. He said the officer admitted shooting him but refused to say why he shot him.

Fridge has not made any statement. The shooting was investigated by a special agent of the United States Prohibition Bureau and a report on the case has been filed with the bureau.

Fridge was indicted Thursday by a Grand Jury of Coosa County. He is at liberty under bond of $1,000.

Fridge Declares Shot Accidental

Agent Fridge, in a sworn statement filed in the United States District Court Saturday as a part of a petition for removing the case against him from the Coosa Circuit Court into the Federal court, declared he was not guilty of the charge of assault with intent to murder and that the shooting was accidental.

The sworn statement sets forth that while attempting to arrest the said Frank Calloway for unlawful manufacture of intoxicating liquor, to wit, whisky, the said Frank Calloway was shot by the accidental discharge of a gun then being held in the right hand of the petitioner (Fridge) just as he had fallen upon the ground through no fault of the petitioner and without any effort or intent whatever of petitioner to injure the said Calloway."

County Farm Agent Endorsed By Kiwanis Club Here

ed upon to express yourselves by ballot on November 3 as to whether or not the County Farm Demonstration Agent shall be continued, we ask the privilege of expressing our opinion on this important question.

This Club has always maintained as one of its major objectives to help the farmers of the county to understand their farm problems and to reach a satisfactory solution of the same. In carrying out this program we have always had the faithful co-operation of the County Agent. We feel that without him we could not have approached our purposes in this respect with effectiveness. And we believe the farmers of the county can not hope to fully and effectively carry on their program of improved farm methods without the aid that can come to them only through the County Farm Agent.

We are proud of the advances that have been made in the business of farming in Chilton County in the past three years. We believe that the Farm Demonstration Agent has been the source of much of the information and inspiration that has enabled our farmers to make such progress.

Every farmer who has used the advice and help of the County Agent knows of his value, and we do not feel that they will need any urging to vote for the continuation of the work. We urge those who have not availed themselves of the help of the County Agent to vote for his continuation in our county, then get busy and use him, thereby taking advantage of the best thing available to you in shaping your business policies towards a profitable basis in the future.

We therefore give the County Farm Demonstration Agent our full endorsement, and urge the voters of Chilton County to go to the polls on the third day of November and vote in favor of continuing his services.

This resolution adopted by the Kiwanis Club of Clanton at its meeting Thursday, October 8, 1931, and ordered printed in the newspapers of Chilton County.

Among the visitors to Clanton Friday were G. W. Sansom and J. T. Minor of the Sardis Community, one of the communities represented in the News column each week by a correspondent.

THOMAS EDISON IS DEAD AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Noted Inventor Passes Peacefully Before Dawn Last Sunday Morning

After eleven weeks of illness, Thomas Alva Edison, age 84, died just before dawn last Sunday morning, at the hilltop estate, West Orange, N. J., where he has labored, endeavoring to give light, work and recreation to millions.

For these eleven weeks, Edison gradually became weaker, and soon lapsed into a coma, lasting for several days. He soon realized it was impossible to live, and stated he did not wish to live, telling his family that his work was finished, assuring those dear to him that he would rather leave the world than keep the burden and disabilities of age and illness on his devoted wife and his children. There was no doubt that he had prepared for death.

For more than fifty years, Edison conceived ideas and then turned out devices founded from them. The Edison brain gave birth to an invention at the average rate of about one every two weeks, and his registration of approximately 1,200 patents at Washington made him the most prolific inventor of his time and perhaps, of all time.

Edison was born at Milan, Eric County, Ohio, on February 11, 1847, and in the year 1873 married Miss Mary G. Stillwell, by whom he had three children. She died in 1884. He was mar-

PEOPLES TELE. MEETING TO BE HELD OCT. 31

Directors Say only One Meeting To Be Held; All Urged To Attend October 31

The annual meeting of the Peoples Telephone Company will be held at the courthouse in Clanton on Saturday afternoon, October 31st at 2:30 o'clock. Everybody interested in the company is urged to attend this meeting, as it will determine what will be done the coming year. If you want the central office to operate, be at this meeting. If the prospects are sufficient to justify it, the operation of the central will be continued; if not it will be stopped.

For the benefit of the phoneholders, we will state that there have been quite a few applications for the job as operator. There are, in our estimation, some good reliable men who have applied for the job, and their offers are very reasonable, considering the hard times. We believe that it can be operated on the same revenue as was collected last year and as good or better service given.

Remember, that we are going to do our "do" at this one meeting. If you have any suggestions to offer, do not wait, for this is the only chance that will be given. We are not going to call another meeting.

—O. R. Robinson, Chm., J. M. Robinson, Lee Popwell, E. H. Mims, T. E. Wyatt, Directors.

ARMSTRONG HAS NEW DEVICE FOR RE-SOLING SHOES HERE

A new device for resoling shoes has just recently been installed by the Clanton Shoe Shop, which is operated by I. D. Armstrong. This new device eliminates the use of stitches in putting on new soles on shoes.

A strong cement is used in glueing the new sole to the shoe and is apparently gaining in favor over the country. It enables Mr. Armstrong to turn out a neat job, eliminating tacks and machine work on the shoe. Mr. Armstrong will be glad to demonstrate the little device to anyone.

Ask the Man Behind the Plow

(AN EDITORIAL)

Chilton County may have progressive business men, smart lawyers, trained doctors, religious preachers, and wise teachers, but these are a result and not the cause of our economic structure. Chilton County is a farming county, and upon this basic foundation our stores, our churches, our schools, hospitals, newspapers, our institutions and our government are planted. And a structure that is built upon a foundation of sand cannot stand the fury of the storms. We are proud of Chilton County's hydro-electric plants, its lumber mills, and all the industries it has. We cheer for our fellows who have won fame and honor in other fields of endeavor, but we are all aware of the fact that most of our citizens are farmers. And we also know, if we think about the matter, that they in large measure make Chilton County what it is. They are the ones who give businesses and professions, and county officials the opportunity to exist and follow their callings in this county.

Chilton County, socially, economically and officially, owes its unstinted cooperation to its farmers. On November 3, 1931, all the voters of this county will be called on to pass judgment as to whether or not our County Agent will keep his job. His job is to help the farmers. He has been trained in this work by the best teachers along this line, our state affords. He has been further trained by the school of experience. Not only is it his job to know and understand what the latest developments science has wrought for the farmers' benefit, and bring this knowledge to those he serves, but he also knows, by actual contact, the particular conditions, which confront the people of this county. Knowing these things, he is able to serve the farmers of Chilton County by bringing to them the ideas and the helps which they individually cannot go out and hunt up.

Figures can be quoted to show that year by year the county agent's work is one that pays dividends. But that is just a partial picture of what he is accomplishing. Who can measure in dollars and cents, the value of the idea of soil improvement, terracing and planting winter cover crops, will be worth to Chilton County in the next twenty years. Or the introduction of purebred cattle over this county. Or of the 4-H Clubs which are organized in so many communities? And the farmers' organizations we have functioning now? Who can write the figures that tell what these things will be worth to the next generation?

Yet they are things which generations before us didn't do. More, the ones who follow will do still more progressive things, which have not yet been thought of—and we need now, and will need for a long, long time, men like our county agent to lead us forward, to grasp new ideas and situations, to interpret them and lead the way.

True, our county agent, nor any one man could do these things alone. He must have the help and cooperation of business men, bankers, farmers and other citizens to realize these accomplishments.

We don't fully understand why an election has been called on this matter, because, not very long ago a mass meeting was called to decide this question, which was unanimous in its decision for the continuation of the county agent work. According to the Commissioners Court, "some citizens and tax payers" have requested the Court to give the voters an opportunity to say whether or not the work shall be continued. We don't understand why these citizens, in so short a time, have decided a vote was necessary. They must surely have had an opportunity to present any objections to the work, if that was their motive, at this mass meeting. If it's a matter of cutting down expenses, it seems to us a bad state of affairs when the farmers must bear the brunt of such economy; when other items of county expense must go on. That looks like, "From him who hath not, shall be taken that which he has."

Chilton County owes a debt to its farmers. They pay taxes and do their full share in supporting its government. Let some of the tax money be spent for their benefit. We believe that one of the most profitable ways to do this is to keep the county agent. We believe that there is no doubt about the voters deciding in favor of continuing this work. But let the farmers decide the matter. Talk the thing over with the man behind the plow. Find out how the men who are trying to solve the farmers' problems feel, and then decide if our county agent is meeting with the approval of those whom it is his job to serve.

Pay Your Subscription With Eggs at 30c, Chickens at 25c Per Pound

All day next Friday and Saturday, October 23 and 24, the News will accept chickens and eggs as payment for subscriptions, and will allow 30 cents per dozen for fresh eggs, and 25 cents per pound for fryers on these two days.

Look at the label with your name and subscription expiration date on it, on your paper. If your subscription is out please call at the News office and make arrangements to have the paper continued. The subscription price of the News is $1.50 per year, 75 cents for six months.

This offer will be good for the above named two days only. These prices are far above the prices allowed elsewhere for chickens and eggs. If you have potatoes, peas, syrup, or other farm produce, bring it in and pay up your subscription with it. Stove wood, pine knots, or pine kindling will be accepted also on subscriptions, and the News is ready to take any of the above except the offer on chickens and eggs, until further notice. This applies to renewals only.

WARNING!

Chief of the Fire Department Loren Smith has issued another and perhaps the final notice and warning to people, asking that they please stay out of the way when the fire department is answering a call and by all means of driving a car and the truck is coming your way, pull to the side as quickly as possible.

A car came very near being demolished last Sunday morning when the fire truck was turning a corner, merely because the driver of the car failed to heed the sound of the siren on the truck.

Spectators at fires in Clanton are also asked not to crowd in the block where a fire is located and the firemen working. Ignoring the above requests is a direct violation of a recent Ordnance of the Town of Clanton.

Don't Forget About Your Poll Tax

Of course there is plenty of time yet in which to pay your poll tax but nevertheless, it will not be saying too much now to remind the people that we have only a little over three months in which to pay Poll Tax. So lay by a little and be one of the "boys" when the voting time comes around.

Burn Wood and Help The Farmers

There are some farmers in the county who would like to get hold of a little cash money this winter, and who are willing to give full value for the money.

The people residing in the towns can aid these fellows some by burning as much pine and wood as possible and buying it from the farmers. Good pine knots will make a good fire and will last. There are farmers who will be glad to furnish pine and other fire wood to residents in towns at a small cost during the winter months that are on the way.

Mr. Rockett stated that it is hoped to have the station ready for business by November 1st. Just who will operate this newest addition to Clanton is not yet known. Shell Petroleum Products will be dispensed from this modern little station.

Two Fires Call Out Volunteers Recently

The boys on the volunteer fire department here answered two calls within the past few days. Neither case was serious.

The first call came Saturday night about seven-thirty o'clock, when flames did small damage to the home of Mrs. Clyde Jones. Short work was made of the flames there by the firemen

The second call came in Sunday morning about nine-thirty o'clock when the garage of Tommie Patterson, in South Clanton became ignited and had a good start toward destruction. The well trained volunteers showed some splendid work at the latter call, as no water was available in South Clanton, and chemicals had to be used, along with buckets of water. But the flames were soon extinguished with small damage done, however, other larger buildings were much endangered, including the warehouse of the Gulf Refining Company. The blaze is said to have started from a chicken brooder in the garage.

DR. R. J. EILAND WINS NITRATE OF SODA GUESSING CONTEST

Dr. Eiland's guess of 1250 pounds of seed cotton per acre where nitrate of soda was used and 1000 pounds per acre where no nitrate was used was the nearest correct of any of the 32 guesses made. The actual yield was 1640 pounds where nitrate was used and 1024 pounds where no nitrate was used. Dr. Eiland advises that he was mighty glad to get the five dollar gold piece.

Statistics show that 40 per cent of the corn produced in the United States is fed to hogs on farms. Twenty per cent is fed to horses and mules, and 15 per cent to cattle. Poultry and sheep, plus the amount consumed as human food, extends the total to about 85 per cent of the corn produced in America consumed on the farms.

THERE ARE WAYS TO PREVENT DISEASE

By Dr. Christmas Seal

When Uncle Abner took the smallpox he was a greatly disgusted man. "Here I've been taking the best of care and you doctors been telling me that people in good health had what you called 'resistance'., And here I taken this smallpox and Abbie, weak as a chicken, never gets a pimple!"

It looks like a good case for Uncle Abner's argument so that the Alabama Tuberculosis Association has to make this explanation. There is such a thing as vital resistance. It does help stave off disease. It is, for example, a splendid protection against that terrible disease, tuberculosis, and makes true the slogan "Radiant Health Protects Against Tuberculosis". But it gives no protection against diseases of marked contagion such as scarlet fever, diptheria, smallpox. There are other lines of defense against those diseases. Abbie had used one such—she had been vaccinated.

Mrs. E. H. Gower of Chicago is so fat that it was found impossible to take X-ray photographs of her interior.

WOMEN: watch your BOWELS

What should women do to keep their bowels moving freely? A doctor should know the answer. That is why pure Syrup Pepsin is so good for women. It just suits their delicate organism. It is the prescription of an old family doctor who has treated thousands of women patients, and who made a special study of bowel troubles.

It is fine for children, too. They love its taste. Let them have it every time their tongues are coated or their skin is sallow. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients.

When you've a sick headache, can't eat, are bilious or sluggish; and at the times when you are most apt to be constipated, take a little of this famous prescription (all drug stores keep it ready in big bottles), and you'll know why Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite laxative of over a million women!

Monster of the Air—

New Yorkers by the thousands have visited the Do-X, the giant flying boat which is now hauled ashore just across from the Bronx on Long Island. It is being refitted at the Curtiss flying field.

It is a sight that stirs even thrill-hardened city people. Standing beneath it, the huge airship towers as tall as an ordinary three-story house, and it will "sleep and eat" three times as many people.

Had it never flown, it would seem impossible that such a huge structure could ever be lifted by its own power. But it has flown across four continents. It is not an experiment any longer.

Souvenir Collectors—

The Do-X has not been immune from the depredations of souvenir collectors, its owners complaining loudly that all the gadgets on its instrument board have been pried loose and stolen. Rungs from chairs, pots and pans, and everything removable has been carted off by the insatiable mob.

Perhaps the owners have a legitimate complaint, but to those who have seen the thousands who have streamed daily through the giant ship—at fifty cents a head—it seems as though they have no great kick.

If it was our boat we would buy up a lot of knick-knacks, strew them around, and let the public do its worst, knowing every prize would stimulate more visitors into showing up.

The owners must have taken in enough to more than half pay for the craft and certainly enough to pay for the costly repairs rendered necessary by its epoch-making flight.

A costly Farm—

Iowa and Kansas farmers who complain they cannot make a living on land at $400 an acre won't want some 200 school children harvested a crop on three acres. On this land the children grew sweet corn, maize, carrots, sweet potatoes and beets.

Some of the children went further and grew cotton, tobacco and peanuts, surprising even adult agriculturists who had not looked upon this region as a good growing place for such crops.

The land on which these crops were grown is worth exactly half a million dollars, or $166, 666 an acre. The explanation is that the city owns the land and donated its use to the young farmers and farmerettes.

Anomalies—

New York is a crazy town to get around in, unless you stick to paths you are well acquainted with. For instance, West Fourth Street crosses West Twelfth Street. There are two Empire State Buildings, the original one being at Broadway and Bleecker Streets. There is no chance of mistaking the two, however.

Another thing—the shortest distance between two points here is often the longest way around, if you take the subway. To go to the Bronx from Astoria—about one mile—you have to travel six miles to get there quickest. That's the way everybody here travels Some day, short cuts will be built between these hundreds of points but it won't be for ten years or more.

"A Fool Thinketh"

Being views and opinions of one who has time to think things over while leisurely confined at home.

I met a mighty clever farmer from the western part of the county the other day. After our greetings I asked him how the panic was serving him. He laughed and said, "Well, it's pretty rough." I said, well you don't look very thin and you still seem to have the old time smile. "Yes," he said, "there is no use to lose your smile, don't do any good. God rules, you know. I have plenty of corn, potatoes, pretty turnip patch, hay for all my stock and plenty of meat to do me over next year." Good. Did you make no cotton? I asked. "Yes, 16 bales, but that all went to pay my debts, taxes, and the like. I had $69 left." Has that man any cause to quit smiling? I hope there are plenty more in his fix.

I judge all this scare about the schools is about over and the boys and girls will begin to lose their grin pretty soon now.

Great crowds were attending services at the Baptist church. That sounds good and it will take something of that kind all over the country to dispell this terrible depression.

Looks like China and Japan (mainly Japan) are determined to put on another World War. Now I tell you what let's us do. Stay strictly at home and board at the same place. Let them fight and scratch all they want to, but let's keep our men and money out of it all. We don't need a man nor a dime in that fracas. Got plenty to eat at home.

From what I can hear there are quite a lot of "frozen credits" in this section. Please call the attention of Mr. Hoover to that fact and perhaps he will go into a "conference" with Mr. Page and Mr. Callen and induce a thaw to take place.

I feel like it will be quite a mistake if the voters let Mr. Stapp go. I think I can see an improvement that is very noticeable in the farming methods of our section in the last three or four years. The yield is better and the fertilizer bill is greatly reduced.

Sugar cane and sweet potatoes show very plainly the effects of the dry weather, but while they could not do their best just look what a splendid fall we have for harvesting all our other crops.

Mr. Edison, the wonderful electrical wizard, has "crossed over the river and rests under the shade of the trees," as typified by the illustrous Stonewall Jackson as he bade this world adieu. Who will rise up to take the place of the great Edison? I fear many years will come and go before the world will have his equal at the great electric switchboard.

Men are born free and equal, but the worldly journey seems to put them in vastly different spheres of life, but death comes to all and in the silence of the grave all are equal again. God sends them all in equal and when He calls them out they go out the same way.

"Better bear the ills you have than to fly to others you know not of." Shakepeare never wrote a truer line than that. From reading newspapers here of late I have been shocked at the frequent recurrence of the sorrowful stories of those who have given up the fight here and have gone uncalled into the presence of the great beyond. Sometimes, when the load becomes so burdensome that I feel like any change would be a relief, I wonder if the merciful Ruler is not granting me the blessed privilege of paying here for some of my past sins to give me a chance to pass safely through the pearly gates when the end comes. Then I can smile in my sorrow and press bravely on. Try that plan. It can do you no harm.

I can sit on my porch and see, quite frequently, my ideal Christian gentleman pass by. You all know him and, I judge, many of you will agree with me. He is old Bro. Gibson. Always smiling and ever ready with a cheerful word for all.

The State School Superintendent did not mince words the other day in stating that something over two million dollars of the State School Fund had been used by other departments of the ponderous state machine. Now, as I understand the law specifically says that no part of this fund must ever be paid out for any purpose but for the schools. Evidently somebody has flagrantly and willfully violated that law and is subject to criminal prosecution. If it was the business of any private corporation somebody would be "doing time" in Kilby. How do State officials contrive to do such lawless deeds and escape?

The policies of the present state administration seems, either through gross ignorance or flagrant intent, to have been founded on a basis of misrepresentation. The school crisis was brought about by a cry of utter bankruptcy of the State. Even a large number of teachers were paid off in script so worthless that it would not even buy bootleg liquor. Now, lo and behold, they have "found" $1,267,000 and the schools can go ahead for November and December. If they will do a little more "looking" they will doubtless "find" enough more to carry on the schools for the full term.

Be certain to watch your calendar and do not even shoot at a squirrel until November 1. I heard a fellow say they "were mighty good and tender this year." Guess he was talking about eating some last January.

It seems that Gov. Miller has finally let it leak out that he can let the schools have $417,000 November the first and $850,000 December first. The public mass meeting that was to have been assembled at Cramton Bowl on October 15, seems to have bluffed the Mighty Miller into this action. He allowed his spite at the legislature to influence him into allowing all of this trouble over the school question, knowing this money would be forthcoming to carry on the schools, for well all know it did not just happen to turn up What a wonderful, wonderful Governor we have!

Cotton still rolls in to the gin but the line of haulers grows thinner and thinner as the days go by. Soon the season wil lbe over and then, what?

Nothing less than a six can give you built-in smoothness

The whole question was settled long ago—as to how many cylinders it takes in a motor car engine to give satisfactory smoothness. Science definitely established the fact that at least six are necessary. And today, the public accepts the multi-cylinder engine in the same way that it accepts 4-wheel brakes, parallel-mounted springs and every other principle of proved and acknowledged superiority. Everybody knows that nothing less than a six can give you built-in smoothness.

Today, six-cylinder smoothness is within reach of every new car buyer. For Chevrolet has produced a quality car, powered it with a firmly-mounted six-cylinder motor—engineered it to run with unsurpassed economy—and priced it down among the very lowest-priced cars in the market.

Twenty models ranging from $475 to $675

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

Next Sunday should be a great day with us. The Pastor is going to speak from one of the most important subject used during the year. I had a letter this week from a good woman in South Alabama who had lost her husband, and in speaking of him she said; "He paid his debts and his word was his bond". If you want to hear a sermon on the all important question of strict "Honesty" you be present at 11 a.m. I believe in "Honesty" and I want Clanton to hear this message

Sunday school at 9:45. Miss Della Williams has organized a "Home Department" in connection with the school and also a "Cradle roll Department". More than fifty have been listed in these two departments. A splendid work.

The Leagues meet at 6:45 and preaching by the pastor at 7:30. We are looking for you to be in your place at every service.

Hail Christopher Columbus

Just about 439 years ago, on October 12th, a voyager from Spain, seeking a new route to India, set foot on a then unknown continent—America.

Christopher Columbus was paid $320 for his trip and each sailor received the sum of $29. The whole expedition cost Spain $7,250, about what the rich pay for an automobile today.

News comes from Spain that a crew of young Spainards plan to start a voyage across the Atlantic this fall, in a ship like the Santa Maria, Columbus's flgship. It is a splendid gesture that should win them a tumultuous reception in this country when they arrive.

It would be interesting to know what Christopher Columbus would think of the world if he arrived today, finding that the land that he discovered and the country from which he sailed had undergone many changes. It would startle the old man and his sailors worse than the storms and superstitious of their day.

With Governor Roosevelt of New York, aspiring to be nominated to the Presidency by the Democrats, and Governor Roosevelt of Porto Rico, angling for the Republican Vice-Presidential nomination, the impression seems to be gaining that these gentlemen have a surname that has been somewhat over-capitalized.

Good Time Religion

A devout old lady recently wrote Bruce Barton: "How can you go to church and still go to prize fights?" He gives his answer in the American Magazine: "Maybe I'm wrong, but I believe one can be a good Christian and still have a grand time. Religion as I understand it consists in liking people, helping them, being considerate and grateful and happy. It doesn't consist of wearing a long face or making others uncomfortable."

Errors Of Justice Rare

Another tragedy of blind justice is revealed with the announcement that Jesse Lucas, 50-year-old inmate of an Illinois prison has been freed because another man, on his deathbed, confessed that he killed the man for whose slaying Lucas was sent to the penitentiary.

Press dispatches tell us that Lucas had served 23 years for the crime that he did not commit, yet he is quoted as "bearing no grudge against society" for its fearful mistake. Let us all be thankful that this man has been freed, and that the latter part of his life will not be spent behind the bars that encompassed him unjustly.

However, there is no use for the sob sisters, male or female, to get worked up about it. There are not many instances of this kind. Occasionally, one discovers that an innocent man has suffered through the error of the jury and the law, but these cases are rare and infrequent.

The Deacon And The Frog

A great many people we know remind us of the frog that Charles F. Kettering, chief research engineer of General Motors, told about the other day.

A deacon was on his way to church one Sunday morning, dressed in his best and with his shoes nicely polished, when he heard his name called from a mudhole near the roadside. Down in the hole was a big bullfrog.

"I have been in here three days," said the frog, "without anything to eat, and I wish you would help me out."

The deacon looked at the mud and looked at his shiny shoes and remembered that he had to pass the collection plate in church, so he replied: "I'm sorry old man, I can't help you now, but on my way back I'll give you a lift out of the hole."

As he came back from church the deacon was surprised to find the frog sitting in the middle of the road, contentedly snapping at flies.

"I thought you said you couldn't get out of that hole," said the deacon.

"I thought I couldn't either, until a snake came along and I just had to get out," replied the frog.

Lots of people are discovering these days that they can do things they didn't think they could do. Under the pressure of necessity every one of us can accomplish the impossible. In good times nobody uses more than a fraction of his ability and resourcefulness. But when the snake of hard times comes along we just have to get out of a hole, and like the frog in Mr. Kettering's story, we find some way to do what we didn't believe we could do.

It is a good thing for humanity that life is not always pleasant and easy. Intelligence, ability and character are only developed to their best in the face of adversity. And the harder the struggle, the more fun there is in looking back on it after the peak has been passed.

PAST-PRESENT-FUTURE
IN CHILTON COUNTY

Thinking of the many stores of the same types of businesses in Clanton, and that they are undoubtedly receiving enough patronage to exist, the thought has occurred to me—how much money, cash money, is spent in Clanton in one month? How much money is paid out to clerks, etc., in one month in Clanton? I have an idea that if known, the figures replying to the above questions would be surprising due to their large size.

Was talking to J. J. Stanley, cotton buyer, who is located at J. R. Broadhead & Son's store on Main Street, the other day. Mr. Stanley lived in Thorsby for a number of years before going to Birmingham and is well and favorably known throughout this county. Having been a resident of this county for a number of years myself, and being acquainted with Mr. Stanley and his family, does me good to see him again.

Clanton is ideally situated to invite new industries to its surroundings. It is my prediction that within the next few years, there will be several new industries coming to the front, and Clanton should begin to get in a position to make a strong pull for anything worthwhile.

My above prediction is based on the general belief that soon the country will have readjusted itself, and be running in a normal way again, and when that is done, those enterprises in the way of manufacturers are going to start out again to increase production, earnings, etc., and by doing so will spread out to new locations.

So far, Clanton has not been so fortunate in securing new industries. With the exception of the locating here of a unit of the ten Alabama Mills, we are without industries, in the manufacturing line, and pay rolls.

Who can tell, our unit of the cotton mills may amount to something when business is better on the upgrade. So many people are prone to throw up their hands and be ready to quit in times that are trying to body and mind, but that is the very time when everyone should stick together. In future years, nay, months, it is my belief that those who are backing off now and quitting will regret the day they THOUGHT they could not go on. There is always some way to do that which is for the good.

The revival meeting just closed at the Baptist church here was a blessing to the town, and in my opinion has done a great work, thanks to Sam Ezell, John Milford and Fred Bond. The sermons were no doubt enjoyed by those hearing them as well as being highly seasoned with inspirational thoughts.

One would think that with the numerous gasoline stations and wholesale dealers in this vicinity, gasoline would take a tremendous drop in prices. But after all, it is possibly the best that the gasoline dealers in the city stick together on prices. Price cutting in a time like this will prove disastrous to those envolved.

The slogan of The Standard Oil Company, "Better Stick To The Standard" means a whole lot at this time. Not in the gasoline business so much, but in every walk of business. There have been some business places that have gone to the wall, while others have been plodding through by the skin of their teeth. The latter are the ones that will shine like a bright star within the next year. Better stick to them and not go flitting around to something new that has just sprung up because it looks good. It's the long-run, that counts.

Was delighted to see James Oakley, the high mogul of The Centreville Press, in Clanton Friday afternoon. Mr. Oakley is a fine young fellow, and knowing something of the business in a country weekly newspaper, I know the men who are shooting square in it. Mr. Oakley paid Clanton some nice compliments while in town.

This question about the continuance of the county agent work in this county has reached a point that the voters of the county should give some serious thought to. It would not be thical for me to express my sincere belief of this question in this column, but I will state that Chilton County, agriculturally speaking, has made some mighty long forward steps under the direction of the present County Farm Agent, and there can be found no reason whatever for the work to be discontinued.

I understand that the county is paying the holder of this office one hundred dollars per month. There is no question that he is worth that amount, when I think over the times I have seen him and heard of him paying his money out to push things along. It is very seldom that he has ever been called upon for a financial donation for charitable purposes, that he did not respond, and responded liberally, and cheerfully. He is at all times ready to do his bit in any effort for the betterment of the town and the county as a whole. The loss of a citizen like that would mean more than the meager salary of one hundred dollars per month, saying nothing of his splendid work with our farmers.

The voters of the county should vote to keep the County Farm Agent in this county. Maybe some day, some person will tell the people who those persons are who have so insisted that the people vote on the work.

Heifers owned by J. P. Culp, Howard Martin, and Chester Messer won fourth, fifth and sixth places in their respective classes.

The boys returned home very enthusiastic and more determined to do better next year, said Mr. Stapp, as he concluded his report of the trip.

He also had a diabetic condition which had been present to a greater or less extent for 25 or 40 years.

Funeral services strictly private for the noted inventor, who affected life in general over the entire world, were held yesterday at Glenmont, the Edison estate, with simple ceremonies, as was his request. He is survived by his widow, and six children, Thomas A. Edison, Jr., William L. Edison, and Marion Edison Oser, children by his first marriage; and Charles Edison, Madeline Edison Sloane, and Theodore Edison, children by his second marriage.

Educational Fund Figures Of State Are Transmitted

tional activities during the year ending September 30th, 1931 (not including payments on prior years warrants) amounted to $7,992,058.01.

The amount paid in excess of actual receipts of funds received for educational purposes during the fiscal year ending September 30th, 1931, was $2,276,932.53.

Statement For Past Five Years

The following schedule shows in summary form the amount received by the State from taxes and other revenues for Educational Purposes, and the amount actually paid to Public Schools, Educational Institutions, and for Departmental Expenses and other Educational Activities, during the period from October 1st 1926 to September 30, 1931.

Oct. 1, 1926 to Sept. 30, 1927, Received $3,495,518.62; Paid $6,870,218.78; Excess Payments Over Receipts, $3,372,700.16.

Oct. 1, 1927 to Sept. 30, 1928, Received $6,860,187.95; Paid $10,510,320,89; Excess Payments Over Receipts $3,650,132.94.

Oct. 1, 1928 to Sept. 30, 1929, Received $7,221,309.43; Paid $11,687,542.24; Excess Payments Overe Receipts, $4,466,232.81.

Oct. 1, 1929 to Sept. 30, 1930, Received $7,377,873.64; Paid $11,508,095.75; Excess Payments Over Receipts, $4,130,222.11.

Total for this Period, Received $24,954,889.64; Paid $40,576,177.66; Excess Payments Over Receipts $15,621,288.02.

Oct. 1, 1930 to Sept. 30, 1931, Received $5,715,125.48; Paid $7,992,058.01; Excess Payments Over Receipts, $2,276,932.53.

Total from Oct. 1, 1926 to Sept. 30, 1931, Received $30,670,015.12; Paid $48,568,235.67; Excess Payments Over Receipts, $17,898,220.55.

In addition to the above figures there have been issued warrants for the year 1929-1930 in the sum of $425,923.57. Also for the year 1930-1931 the sum $3,372,187.53. These warrants are now held by various educational institutions, public school treasurers and city school treasurers, and the same will be paid as soon as funds are available.

When these outstanding warrants are paid, the total expenditures for the year 1929-1930 will amount to $11,934,019.32. For the year 1930-31, the total expendtiures, when the above warrants are paid, will amount to $11,364,245.54.

Please bear in mind also that during the fiscal year 1929-1930, taxes amounting to $793,739.27 for the 1930-1931 educational funds were collected in advance of due date and applied toward the payment of warrants issued during the year 1929-1930. In addition to this 1929-1930 warrants aggregating $1,000,669.32 were paid after Oct. 1, 1930 from 1930-1931 funds. These two amounts totaling $1,794,408.59 represent 1930-1931 educational funds which have been applied to the payment of warrants issued for educational appropriations for the preceding year, and this largely accounts for the greater part of unpaid warrants for 1930-1931 as compared with the warrants unpaid for 1929-1930.

This practice of collecting taxes in advance before maturity and especially of applying current collections toward the payment of prior year warrants has been followed, I understand, for a number of years, but no advance collections before maturity for 1931-1932 were made.

Respectfully submitted,
S. H. BLAN,
State Treasurer

H. R. Oden, Progressive Farmer Urges Voters To Support Agent

Letter From Well Known Farmer Also Gives Some Information Regarding The Operation Of County Farm Bureau Office Here

HOWARD R. ODEN

Howard R. Oden, one of the progressive and prominent farmers of Chilton County, residing in the well-to-do Isabella Community writes in this week in regard to the question concerning the office and work of the County Farm Demonstration Agent in Chilton County.

Mr. Oden is fully qualified to know just what the work of the County Agent and his office has done for Chilton County, having given careful study to the developments made in recent years by this work among the farms and farmers in this county, and himself being a successful farmer. Following is the letter from Mr. Oden:

Editor Chilton County News:

Do you realize a question of vital importance to the people of Chilton County is to be voted upon the 3rd of November? Should Chilton County's Agriculture pass from her map we would have no assets left worth the price of anyone staying here for. Every village or town in Chilton County is an established fact because they are surrounded by a producing district. The only thing produced worth consideration is its agricultural products. If its towns and villages are here because of its agriculture then it behooves every business and professional man and woman in Chilton County to support the County Agency work.

It has been my privilege to observe County Agency work for twenty years. I am convinced that any person knocking the work of county agents are really knocking to their own hurt. If those who have been knocking the efforts of our county agent stop and get behind him and convince the farmers of this county you are their friend you would observe an improvement in your business soon.

It appears to me that there is a certain element of people who are becoming uneasy because the farmer is beginning to think for himself. This is one thing you might do well to remember. As time comes and goes he is going to think more and more.

Of all times past and present the business man as well as the farmer needs a man on the job twelve months a year right now to aid in every possible way in solving our problems. Surely we will continue to be in need of such facts as our experiment station sends out. How are we to be fully informed without a county agent?

I was approached a few days ago with this question, "Do those working in Farm Bureau office sell that stuff for Stapp or Farm Bureau?" Being one of the directors of the Farm Bureau I want to assure you that every feature of that office has been added by unanimous consent of the directors and executive committee. The executive committee having charge of the management of same.

Have heard also of complaints of the price paid for cream. For information to those who do not know will say that this feature of Bureau is operated at cost. Really it was not established for those who produced cream in sufficient quantities to ship and get full market price, but for those who had only small quantities and which would otherwise go to waste. This feature alone has saved the farmers several hundred dollars.

Folks, you had better go to the polls on the 3rd of November and give this opposition such a crushing blow that they will never dare stick their heads up again. I am your friend if you will let me be. Come along with us on November 3rd, or else you may regret being on the losing side. Come, not for the sake of being on the winning side, but for the sake of a bigger and better county in which to live.

Trusting that every farmer and business man in the county will take a forward step for its agriculture by voting to maintain County Agency work, I am

Yours for a progressive county,

H. R. ODEN.

Baptists Are Different

By L. E. Barton

Of the various leading denominations in east Alabama the Baptists are unique in their theory and practice of the independence of the local church. No Association nor Convention can dictate the policy of any church nor command its performance of any certain task.

But Baptists frequently demonstrate the finest spirit of cooperation among their independent bodies to be found anywhere. Such is apparent in the present movement to promote the whole of their work through an Every Member Canvass for local expenses and denominational causes to be made November 29 to December 6 this year. An organization is being rapidly perfected to reach every church in the Southern Baptist Convention.

It is being planned to hold a conference in every Association in the District where the committees and other workers of every church will be invited to come together to study, plan and pray. Instead of a few big speeches by individuals and all the others listening, these meetings will be real conferences. Then it is hoped all will go back to their churches to inform and inspire others.

The meeting of the Baptist State Convention in Opelika will bring into this District a group of fine leaders and workers. All features of the plan will be presented. Baptists of east Alabama will thus be afforded an excellent opportunity to secure full information. At an early date, the program of the Convention will be published in the Alabama Baptist. It is hoped that those who can attend the Convention only one day will select the date on which this important matter is to be discussed.

The real and final test will come in the doing of it on November 29th to December 6th. The issue rests with the local churches.

Practical Suggestions

1. Place all literature sent you into the hands of your church members.
2. Have special speakers talk on the every member canvass in the Sunday School, B. Y. P. U. and W. M. S.
3. Conduct study classes in the "Handbook" which will be sent free to you (as many copies as needed) upon request by the State Department, 147 South Court Street, Montgomery, Ala.
4. Get your local church committee organized. Make a thorough study of your church needs. Present a budget to your church for action.
5. Preach and teach missions—let's inform our people of the great need as well as successes in our mission enterprise.

"Preach the gospel to every creature."

THE SEVEN WONDERS

Nearly everyone has heard of the seven wonders of the world, but probably few could name them and fewer could tell what became of them. Those interested in such things might clip this out for their scrap book.

The seven wonders of the world were so named by Antipater, a writer of Palestine, about 200 B. C., as follows:

The Hanging Gardens of Babylon, destroyed in 484 B. C., more than 100 years before they were listed among the wonders.

The Temple of Diana at Ephesus, burned in 262 A. D.

The Statue of Zeus at Olympus, destroyed in 408.

The Collossus of Rhodes, sold for junk in 653.

The Lighthouse of Pharos at Alexandria, fell in an earthquake in 1375.

The Mausoleum of Artemisia destroyed in 1402.

The Pyramid of Cheops the only one of the "Seven Wonders" still in existence.

Such were the seven wonders of the ancient world. Many lists of modern wonders have been made, but a recent writer selects not the perishable works of man, but the discoveries and inventions which have revolutionized civilization.

He names the radio, the telephone, the airplane, the antiseptics, spectrum analysis and radium. Whether his list is the best that might be made or not, the wonders mentioned will survive as long as humanity exists, bestowing untold benefits upon mankind.

NEW ADVERTISING MANAGER FOR CHEVROLET COMPANY

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 21.—Appointment of R. H. Crooker as Advertising Manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company, succeeding R. K. White, who has been transferred to the Oakland division of General Motors in a sales capacity, was announced here by H. J. Klingler, vice-president and general sales manager of Chevrolet.

Promotion of Mr. Crooker, who was formerly assistant advertising manager, places the administration of Chevrolet's large annual advertising budget in the hands of a man eminently qualified by previous experience for the post.

Starting on the Detroit News during school vacations, his entire career has been spent in various phases of advertising or sales promotional work, with such well-known national organizations as the Burroughs Adding Machine Company; the old Chalmers Motor Car Company, where as advertising manager he administered the first million dollar budget in the automobile industry; the Federal Motor Truck Company, and the Campbell-Ewald advertising agency, from which post he joined Chevrolet as assistant advertising manager little more than a year ago.

His successor as assistant is W. C. Byers, formerly sales promotion manager of Chevrolet's region at Cincinnati. Both posts were filled according to Chevrolet's established policy of promoting men within the organization.

Too Much ACID

MANY people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief. Get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind that physicians have prescribed for over 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

D. W. Haskew

I went into a book store and found book that had Morocco binding, and t was good to look upon. I bought he book from its outside appearance, hinking that I had a wonderful treaure. When I took my place in my tudy to read that book, I discovered hat I had nothing. It was "Bunk" rom start to finish. On an other ocasion I bought a book with a paper inding. It did not look like very much hen I bought it, but when I had gone hrough it's pages I had been lifted into the Third heaven. Many a woman as selected a husband because he lookd well before the public, to find that he had less than nothing. The same hing is true in the case of a man who elects a wife. There are lots of people ho look mighty nice in their silk and oolen goods, but they are "Bunk" hrough and through. You do not find orthwhile people making a show of hemselves.

For five years a large boat rested n the sand bottom of St. Andrews bay. t came across the ocean with a happy rew and a loaded hull. While anchord at the warf near Millville, it caught n fire. The flame smouldered and urned for many hours. Then the hull f the boat gave way, and it settled o the bottom, with its rim just above he water. There it remained for five ears. It was an old burned out hull f what was once a proud ship of ocean ravel. It was salvaged last year by ompany who wanted some of its arts. I have seen many a man who once happy and proud of his business and plans but he allowed the flame of passion, the flame of intemperance, to take hold of his being. These fires burned and smouldered in his heart, until one day he went down. His constitution gave way, his health was gone. He lingered for a few years as a burned out wreck of a life. Men and women, you had better keep the fires of intemperance and unholy living out of your soul.

I am giving you ten reasons why a christian can not take part in the dance hall. 1. He can not dance with clean thoughts and a clean heart. 2. He can not dance to the glory of God in the forms of modern society. 3. He can not ask God to bless the dance hall, and help all of its inmates to dance at their best. 4. It throws him with the most vile surroundings, and destroys his influence as a christian. 5. It dissipates the mind, corrupts the heart and sears the conscience. 6. The liberties indulged in on the dance floors are no where else allowed in decent society. A like attitude discovered in the home would produce bullets, or a divorce. 7. The dance hall is the close up companion of whiskey, drinking and sex liberties. 8. The dance hall is where virtue comes into close contact with vice and virtue dies and vice flourshes. The police courts show that a large per cent of ruined women found their starting place in the dance hall. 9. No christian can be an effective witness bearer for Christ when he is seen on the dancing floor. He may sing in the choir, he may be an official in the church but he is without weight in the work of the kingdom. Church members who attend the dance halls are without influence in soul life. 10. It is not the place where a true child of God would be willing to die. As Christ looks down upon many a church member today he cries out; "Surely, they do not know what they are doing". Well folks, I am against those dances in Chilton county and if you will study those ten reasons you will know why.

I saw a man in his garden. He was working dilligently to rid his vegetables fo bugs and beetles. Farming is nothing more than a battle against vegitation and insects. I saw a doctor as he measured out his medicine, and as as he fumigated. The practice of medicine is a battle against germs. This life is a constant battle against small things. They come upon our growing crops, our bodies, our souls. You may think that a small thing is without power to injure, but you are mistaken. A cinder is a small thing, but when it is in the eye, you suffer untold agony. One grain of sand in a watch will stop its cogs and wheels. The time to kill an evil is when it is small. It takes less effort to kill a little sin than it does to weed out a big sin. Battle hard against the little things and keep them from hindering the growth of the soul.

Not many afternoons ago I went out to my garage in a great hurry to get my car. I had an urgent call to visit a sick person. The night befor I ran my car into its place and all the tires were all right. I must have run over a tack the day before. To my chargin I found that I had a flat tire. During the night a slow leak had let the wheel down. I could not make the trip until the tire was changed. Delayed on the account of a slow leak and a flat tire. Since I have been in the ministry I have found many christian workers who were like that flat tire. They were all right the last time they were asked to serve, but now they have run over a tack of indifference, and they have gradually gone down. Before the preacher is able to turn a wheel he must spend his energy, his time and his tears, in order to get the fellow all "Pumped Up" and ready for travel. It seems to me that I spend the most of my time trying to inflate the hearts of men. If it is not one flat tire in the kingdom, it is two. If it is not two, it is four. The kings business calls for haste and why should we waste precious time on "Flat Tires?"

CHAPTER LVII

In accordance with the understanding of September 2 we were now moving rapidly toward our second great offensive. Questions concerning the concentration and supply of the elements of the First army in the battle areas were being worked out by the staff of that army, who were given every possible assistance by the staff at G. H. Q.

The general plan of action of the allied armies, as agreed upon at the conference of commanders in chief July 24, was, to state it simply and briefly, that the offensive should continue, each army driving forward as rapidly as possible. The allied and American operations during the summer had resulted in the reduction of the Chateau Thierry, Amiens and St. Mihiel salients and the great offensive was now under way. Immediately west of the Meuse river the battle line had remained practically unchanged since 1917. It was on this front the American army was to play its great part.

The disposition of the Belgian, British, French and American armies on the wide front between the North sea and Verdun was such that they would naturally converge as they advanced. So long as the enemy could hold his ground on the east of this battle line frontal attacks farther west might drive him back on his successive positions, yet a decision would be long delayed.

Yanks Face Strong Position.

His main line of communication and supply ran through Carignan, Sedan and Mezieres. If that should be interrupted before he could withdraw his armies from France and Belgium the communications in the narrow avenue which lay between the Ardennes forest and the Dutch frontier were so limited that he would be unable adequately to supply his forces or to evacuate them before his ruin would be accomplished. As our objective was the Sedan-Carignan railroad, it was evident that the sector assigned to the American army was opposite the most sensitive part of the German front then being attacked.

The danger confronting the enemy made it imperative that he should hold on in front of the American army to the limit of his resources.

Germans Strongly Fortified.

The area between the Meuse river and the Argonne forest was ideal for defensive fighting. On the east the heights of the Meuse commanded that river valley and on the west the rugged, high hills of the Argonne forest dominated the valley of the Aire river. In the center the watershed between the Aire and the Meuse rivers commanded both valleys, with the heights of Montfaucon, Cunel, Romange and of the Bois de Barricourt standing out as natural strong points. From these heights observation points completely covered the entire German front.

The terrain over which the attack was to be made formed a defile blocked by three successive barriers, the heights of Montfaucon, then those of Cunel and Romange and farther back the ridges of the Bois de Barricourt and of the Bois de Bourgoyne. The Meuse river was unfordable; the Aire river fordable only in places. In addition to the heavy forest of the Argonne there were numerous woods with heavy undergrowth which were serious obstacles.

These natural defenses were strengthened by every artificial means imaginable.

A dense network of wire entanglements covered every position. It was small wonder the enemy had rested four years on this front without being molested.

Hindenburg Position Is Objective.

In accordance with the principal mission, which remained the same throughout this great offensive, the main attack of the First army was to be launched west of the Meuse river, its right to be covered by the river and by the operations of the French Seventeenth corps on the east of the river, that corps being a part of our army.

Our left was to be supported by a simultaneous attack by the French Fourth army. Our attack to include the Argonne forest was to be driven with all possible strength in the general direction of Mezieres.

The first operation of our army was to have for its objective the Hindenburg position on the front Brieulles-sur-Meuse-Romagne-sous - Montfaucon-Grandpre, with a following development in the direction of Busancy-Mezieres in order to force the enemy beyond the Meuse and outflank his positions on the Vouziers-Rethel line from the east.

In conjunction with our advance, which would outflank the enemy's position south of the Aisne, the French Fourth army, by attacking successively the positions between the Aisne and the Suippes rivers, would be able to occupy the line Vouziers-Rethel. After that it would operate in the direction of the plateau east of the Rethel-Signy-l'Abbaye road.

Aim at Tactical Surprise.

Our purpose was to effect a tactical surprise, if possible, overcome the enemy's first and second positions in the area of Montfaucon and (Cote Dame Marie) of his third position before the enemy could bring up strong re-enforcements. It was an ambitious plan and one that would require a rapid advance of ten miles through a densely fortified zone. From an estimate of the enemy's reserves and their location it was realized that we must capture Montfaucon and seize Cote Dame Marie by the end of the second day.

It was thought reasonable to count on the vigor and aggressive spirit of our troops to make up in a measure for their inexperience, but at the same time the fact was not overlooked that lack of technical skill might considerably reduce the chances of complete success against well-organized defenders.

General Petain had already given it as his opinion that we should not be able to get farther than Montfaucon before winter.

CHAPTER LVIII

The Meuse-Argonne offensive opened the morning of September 26. To call it a battle may be a misnomer, yet it was a battle, the greatest, most prolonged in American history. Through 47 days we were engaged in a persistent struggle with the enemy to smash through his defenses.

The attack started on a front of 24 miles, which gradually extended until the enemy was being actively assailed from the Argonne forest to the Moselle river, 90 miles.

In all more than 1,200,000 were employed and the attack was driven 32 miles to the north and 14 miles to the northeast before the armistice terminated hostilities.

The outstanding fact that I desire to emphasize is that, once started, the battle was maintained continuously, aggressively and relentlessly to the end.

All difficulties were overridden in one tremendous sustained effort to terminate the war then and there in a victorious manner.

Battle Opens Favorably.

After three hours' violent artillery preparation the attack began at 5:30 a. m. At the same time, to divert the enemy's attention elsewhere, local raids and demonstrations were made on the Meuse-Moselle front. The French Fourth army (Gouraud), to our left on the west of the Argonne forest, began its attack half an hour later.

The battle opened favorably. Our attack at that particular place and at that time evidently came as a surprise to the enemy, and our troops were enabled quickly to overrun his forward positions.

The vast network of undestroyed barbed wire, the deep ravines, dense woods and heavy fog made it difficult to co-ordinate the movements of the assaulting infantry, especially of some divisions in battle for the first time, yet the advance throughout was extremely vigorous.

Third Corps Reaches Second Line.

The Third corps (Bullard), nearest the Meuse, carried the enemy's second position before dark. The Thirty-third division (Bell), wheeling to the right as it advanced, occupied the west bank of the Meuse to protect the flank of the army. The Bois de Forges, with its difficult terrain and strong machine gun defenses, was carried in splendid fashion.

The right of the Eightieth division (Cronkite) had by noon cleared the Bois Jure in the face of heavy machine gun fire and established its line north of Dannevoux. On its left, after an all-day fight, the division forced its way through the strong positions on hill 262 and reached the northern slopes of that hill.

The Fourth division (Hines), on the left of the Eightieth, took Septarges and firmly established itself in the woods to the north. It was abreast of Nantillois and its left was more than a mile beyond Montfaucon, but through some misinterpretation of the orders by the Third corps the opportunity to capture Montfaucon that day was lost. Three counter-attacks against the division during the afternoon were broken up.

Fifth Corps Falls Short.

In the center the Fifth corps (Cameron), with the exception of the Ninety-first division (Johnston) on its left, fell short of its objectives.

The Seventy-ninth division (Kuhn), on the right of the corps, took Malancourt, but in the open ground beyond encountered considerable opposition, and the advanced elements were not in position before Montfaucon until late afternoon. The attack of the division launched against this strong point early in the evening was met by the fire of artillery and machine guns from the southern slopes of the hill, which held up further progress.

The Thirty-seventh division (Farnsworth), in the center of the Fifth corps, after overcoming heavy machine-gun fire, pushed through the Bois de Montfaucon, and its attacks in the afternoon carried the line up to and west of Montfaucon. The left of its line, facing stiff opposition, cleaned up the woods in its front and established itself just south of Ivoiry.

The Ninety-first division (Johnston) overcame strong initial resistance and advanced rapidly to Epinonville, which it entered but did not hold. Crossing into the sector of the Thirty-fifth division, during the day it occupied Very.

First Corps Makes Progress

On the left of the army the First corps (Liggett) made excellent progress. The Thirty-fifth division (Traub) cleverly captured the strong position of Vauquois and took Cheppy against stubborn opposition. Elements of the division reached the corps objective east of Charpentry, but were soon withdrawn to a line west of Very. On the left the division captured that part of Varennes east of the Aire river, but was held up between Varennes and Cheppy. At this time a fresh regiment took the lead, giving a new impetus to the attack, and pushed the line forward to the high ground south of Charpentry.

In the Twenty-eighth division (Muir) the right brigade captured the western half of Varennes and continued about a mile farther. The left brigade, facing the easters spurs of the Argonne, which constituted the enemy's chief defense of that forest, was unable to overcome the intense machine-gun fire from the vicinity of Champ Mahaut. The Seventy-seventh division (Alexander) in the difficult terrain of the Argonne made some progress.

Advances Continue

By the evening of September 27 the Fifth corps was abreast of the First and the Third on its flanks. The Seventy-ninth division captured Montfaucon the morning of September 27 and on the next day Nantillois and the Bois de Beuge were passed despite determined resistance.

In the Third corps the Eightieth division had taken the Bois de la Cote Lamont after hard fighting, but attack after attack made with dogged determination across the open space toward Brieulles-sur-Meuse was rolled back by the galling fire of the enemy from the town and its vicinity and by the artillery firing from east of the Meuse.

The Thirty-third division maintained its position September 27 and 28 and on September 29 relieved the Eightieth division by extending its left along the northeastern edge of Bois de la Cote Lamont, where it occupied difficult ground under the dominating heights east of the Meuse.

The Fourth division captured Nantillois September 27, but was forced by enemy counter-attacks to retire. The town was retaken and held on the following day by troops of the Fourth and Seventy-ninth divisions. After three days of almost continuous fighting the Fourth had taken the Bois de Brieulles and entered the Bois de Ogons, but could not hold the latter against counter-attacks and the deadly machine-gun and artillery fire of the enemy. The fortitude and courage of the Fourth division in these operations were inspiring.

Meet Strong Resistance

The Thirty-seventh division on September 27 attempted to advance beyond the Ivoiry-Montfaucon road, but each time it reached there was driven back by heavy shelling. On September 28, however, it pushed forward to a position north of the Cierges-Nantillois road. Cierges was entered, but not held. The following day the division again attacked Cierges, but the advance was abruptly halted by concentrated artillery fire.

The Ninety-first division on September 27 encountered strong opposition at Epinonville, which was reached, but could not be retained. Eclisfontaine was taken, but evacuated, as an artillery barrage was to be laid on the road through the town the following day.

Epinonville was finally captured September 28, and the Bois de Cierges was occupied after hard fighting. Two attacks of the division from the Bois de Cierges on September 29 crumbled under fierce artillery and enfilading machine-gun fire, but on the third attack, despite severe losses, Gesnes was taken.

The full advantage of this important gain was lost, however, through the inability of the Thirty-seventh division to advance its left. This placed the right flank on the Ninety-first in a dangerous position, and it had to be withdrawn. During the afternoon the Thirty-fifth division was subjected to a heavy counter-attack, which also involved the left of the Ninety-first, but made no progress against it.

Battle Grows More Intensive

Three new German divisions had appeared by September 30 on the front of the First corps, and the battle continued with increased intensity.

The Thirty-fifth division was stopped by heavy fire soon after its attack opened, September 27, but later in the day it captured Charpentry and advanced to the ridge northeast, though suffering severe casualties. Montrebeau wood was taken September 28, and early next morning a detachment reached Exermont valley, but, being nearly surrounded, withdrew to the starting point. Encountering very heavy artillery fire and an advance of the German Fifty-second and Fifth guard divisions, the Thirty-fifth withdrew from Montrebeau wood, which it had taken the day before. The Thirty-fifth suffered heavier casualties than any other division during these four days of continuous fighting.

The Twenty-eighth division, though subjected to strong artillery and machine-gun fire from the bluffs of the Argonne, captured Montblainville September 27. It could make slight headway against firm opposition from positions in the vicinity of Champ Mahaut, but carried them on September 28, and also captured Apremont. On September 29, after repulsing a German counter-attack, a slight advance was made against the defenses of Le Chene Tondu.

The Seventy-seventh encountered stiff resistnce in the Argonne September 27, and was held to a small gain, but moved forward about a mile on September 28. Next days its right was advanced with little opposition.

During the first four days of fighting the First army, west of the Meuse, had made a maximum advance of about eight miles, reaching the Bois de la Cote Lemont-Nantillois-Apremont. The enemy had been struck a blow so powerful that the extreme gravity of his situation in France was obvious to him.

Peach Tree Borers Should Be Killed

By W. A. Ruffin,
Entomologist at Auburn.

The peach tree borer is an insect which does much damage to peach trees in Alabama. This borer is a white worm which works in the living bark either at or just under the surface of the ground, causing wax to be secreted from the tree at this point. Eventually trees are killed by it.

This insect can be controlled in trees that are three years old or over with paradichlorobenzene. This chemical is sold under several trade names. "Paracide," "P.D.B.," and "Crystal Gas" are examples of its trade names.

Crystal gas should be applied in Alabama during October. In North Alabama, it should be applied as early in October as possible. In Central and South Alabama, applications later in the month are preferred. For three and four-year trees, apply one-half to three-fourths ounce per tree; for trees five years and older, apply one ounce per tree.

It should not be permitted to remain around trees five years and younger longer than four weeks if the weather is fairly warm and open. It may remain undisturbed around older trees till spring.

To apply crystal gas, remove all stones and litter, and level the ground around the trees. Apply the proper amount in a uniform circle about two inches from the base of the tree. Soil shoud be piled on and banked around the tree. Crystal gas vaporizes and, being heavier than air, it goes downward, killing the borers.

To remove crystal gas from trees five years and younger, remove the earth around the trees and replace it with soil without packing.

HOMEGROWN FEED AND GOOD COWS WILL PAY

A two-for-one proposition is now available to Alabama farmers having homegrown feed and good dairy cows to consume it. F. W. Burns, extension animal husbandman for the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, said that $14.00 worth of this homegrown feed will produce $28.00 worth of butterfat at present prices. In addition, it will leave $4.80 worth of skimmilk on the farm, to say nothing of the manure.

"The relation between the farm price of dairy feeds and butterfat is favorable now and bids fair to remain so through the coming winter," said Mr. Burns.

"Records kept on present market conditions show that if $14.00 worth of feed is fed to good, average cows it will produce 100 pounds of butterfat. When sold for butter making purposes it is worth $28.00. In addition there will be left on the farm about 1,600 pounds of skimmilk worth 30 cents a hundred pounds. This is excellent for feeding to poultry or hogs and when so fed has a value of $4.80.

"In addition to these values, 75 per cent of the plant food in the feed stuffs will go back to the farm in the form of manure and thus save buying so much fertilizer in a sack.

"For the man who loves livestock and is looking for a market for his surplus hay, corn, and cottonseed meal, cream dairying offers possibilities at the present time that are worthy of serious consideration by Alabama farmers."

The Birmingham News and Age-Herald are vitally interested in everything pertaining to the upbuilding of Alabama.

The New-Age-Herald realizes that people living out on a rural route cannot enjoy the conveniences and advantages that people living in towns do, in having a daily paper delivered on their porch a short time after it is printed; that the person living on a rural route must wait until the R. F. D. carrier makes his delivery. Until the past few years a good many R. F. D. box holders were satisfied to confine their reading to weekly papers, and while these papers are good, and should be in every home in their territory, no one can keep properly abreast with the times, and know what is going on throughout the world solely through these papers. The News and Age-Herald realized that in some cases at least, rural schools are not as far advanced as the schools in cities and larger towns, and that the children attending rural schools would benefit greatly in an educational way by having a daily newspaper in the home. These papers also realized that the income of the average person living on a rural route is not as fixed as that of the town subscriber.

Taking all of these things into consideration, particularly the educational angle, The News and Age-Herald, anxious to put a daily newspaper within the reach of every rural or star route box holder, have again this year made a SPECIAL BARGAIN PRICE, making it possible for every rural patron to read daily one of the South's Greatest Newspapers.

For this reason, this BARGAIN OFFER, either the daily Birmingham News or Age-Herald, one year for $2.19, or The News or Age-Herald daily and Sunday one year for $3.19, is made only to holders of R. F. D. and Star route boxes, and to people living in towns where newspaper delivery service is not maintained.

Subscriptions from persons living in Towns where The News or Age-Herald is Delivered by Carrier Positively will not be accepted at this Bargain Offer.

TIMBER DURABILITY IS INDEPENDENT OF SEASON

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 20.—The season of cutting does not affect the durability of timber, says Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester of Alabama. Most changes in the wood formerly attributed to the time of year during which it is cut have been found to be due instead to the rate of drying or seasoning.

The portion of the wood most affected is the sapwood, since this is the part that is really living and contains the greater amount of moisture. Timber felled during the winter dries much more slowly and evenly due to the cooler temperature prevailing during that time of the year. During the warm summer season, however, the drying out of the sapwood is apt to proceed at a rapid and irregular rate with the result that the shrinkage may not be uniform in all directions. This causes splitting and checking of the material.

Winter cutting is also accompanied by less danger of sap rot, since the causative fungus does not spread during the cooler times of the year. If logs cut in the summer, however, are seasoned under the same conditions as those cut in the winter there will be no discernible differences in the properties of the timber.

Glee Club Entertains In Chapel

The Glee Club, under the direction of Miss Mary Ellis, rendered some vocal selections at the chapel period last Friday morning. These young singers are a great help to the assembly program in that they sponsor the singing. The club is progressing well under Miss Ellis' supervision and it expects to do a great deal this year.

P.-T. A. Meets

The Parent-Teachers Association held its second meeting in the high school auditorium last Tuesday evening. Mrs. Ezell opened the meeting with devotional exercises. This was followed by a vocal selection rendered by the Glee Club. The association is going to promote an art exhibit from November 30-December 4. This is a rare chance to see some specimens of real pictures of art. Some very famous paintings will be on exhibit. Details of this exhibit will be worked out at their next meeting. The public is cordially invited to be at this exhibit.

Assembly Visitors

The school was delighted to have as its visitors Thursday morning, Dr. Ezell, Dr. John Milford, and Mr. Fred Bonn. Dr. Milford is conducting a revival at the Baptist church, and Mr. Bonn is leading the singing. Dr. Milford made a very interesting and instructive talk. He impressed upon his audience in a few well chosen words, the value of honesty with one's self. He emphasized that everyone should be honest. "That if you are dishonest, you can never get away from yourself. The streak is in you, and is your chief throughout your entire life," the speaker said. Your school life is a great test of your character in regard to honesty. Without a doubt every student was very favorably impressed with Dr. Milford's address.

Sesquicentennial Observed

The 150th Anniversary of the surrender of Cornwallis to General Washington at Yorktown, Va., occurring October 19, 1781, was fittingly observed Monday morning at the chapel period. Prof. Warr read the eighth chapter of Deuteronomy. After that the entire school sang America. Herman Harris read the proclamation by the President of the United States, and then told the school the purpose of this observance. Joe VanDerveer told of some very interesting events leading up to the surrender, and described the little town of Yorktown as it is today. He showed that America really has two birthdays: October 19, 1781, and July 4, 1776. Prof. Warr then explained the new way of pledging allegiance to our Flag since the World War as compared with the old way. The program closed with the salute to the Flag.

Bibb vs. Chilton As A Student Saw It

Chilton and Centerville played a hard fought game here Friday afternoon. The final score was Bibb 6, and Chilton 0. Foshee, left tackle for Chilton, played a wonderful game, stopping nearly every play. Centerville made their only score in the first quarter, but threatened several times in the last half.

Credit is due Littlejohn and Arnold on the defense. And on the offense the outstanding playing was made by Tiffin and Taylor. However, they were unable to pierce the wall of Centerville's powerful line for a very long gain, but nipped off eight yard dashes at different times in an effort to win the count in the last quarter. The teams were fairly evenly matched, Centerville having some heavier line.

The Blue and the Gold warriors of C. C. H. S. have in this game proven decided ability to overcome handicaps and should under normal pressure merit their weight in the last color of the two that so rightly represents their school.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT WILL USE DOMESTIC COTTON

Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M Hyde today cited the action of the Post Office Department in substituting cotton for jute in its specifications for large purchases of twine as an example of how government departments are cooperating to aid in the present emergency.

For the purpose of tying packages of letters the Post Office Department utilizes about 80 carloads or close to 3,000,000 pounds of twine a year.

For many years the postal service has been using jute twine. Jute is not a domestic product but is imported from India.

At the request of the Department of Agriculture the Post Office Department will specify cotton twine for use in the postal service, and an advertisement is about to be issued calling for bids for 1,300,000 pounds, covering the needs of the service for a six-months period beginning January 1, 1932. The cotton industry is cooperating also to overcome the higher price of cotton twine which has heretofore prevailed. The cotton industry has indicated that it is possible to manufacture a special cotton twine that will compete favorably with the jute as to price, quality and usefulness.

With the aid of the Bureau of Standards new specifications for cotton twine have been formulated and the Post Office Department believes that cotton twine furnished under these specifications will prove very satisfactory not only as to quality and usefulness, but also as to price.

CENTERVILLE DEFEATS THE LOCAL BOYS ON OWN FIELD

The Chilton County High School football eleven played one of the hardest games of their 1931 schedule last Friday afternoon when they met the strong Bibb County High School team from Centerville on the local gridiron. Chilton played a hard and fast game against a heavier team and after four periods of gruelling struggle Centerville had managed to cross the goal line of the local team only once. Clanton was never able to score on their opponents.

Early in the game the Centerville team carried the ball deep into Chilton territory and soon crossed the goal line. The try for the extra point fell short and the score stood Centerville six and Clanton nothing. During the rest of the game the Chilton boys fought hard but were never able to overcome the lead of the Bibb County boys.

Chilton's line was considerably outweighed by that of the visitors but the two teams were very evenly matched. In the line the work of Foshee on the defense and offense stood out. Foshee was in every play and consistently smeared Centerville plays.

In the backfield the work of Tiffin and Taylor stood out. The whole Chilton team played a clean hard game and put up one of the best fights they have made this season.

Tomorrow afternoon the Chilton team journeys to Plantersville and encounters the strong Dallas County team. This team has always given Chilton trouble and all those who accompany the Chilton team may expect a hard and well fought game.

LAWRENCE GIVES OUT STATEMENT ON EDUC. FUNDS

Cites Attention To Harman's Letter To The State Treasurer

In a letter from B. Lawrence, Superintendent of Education of Chilton County, for publication this week, he gives out information concerning the state funds for educational purposes in response to questions being raised about that item. Following is the letter:

In order that the public may understand the present school situation as far as possible, I am giving excerpts from a letter written by Dr. A. F. Harman, State Superintendent of Education, to Hon. S. H. Blan on October 21st:

Honorable S. H. Blan,
State Treasurer,
Montgomery, Alabama.
My dear Mr. Blan:

"In my opinion your statement to Governor B. M. Miller, in your letter of October 17 in regard to educational funds is misleading. Funds for public education are of such great importance and interest to the people of the State that, as State Superintendent of Education, I feel justified in requesting you to make without delay a more completely detailed statement in such understandable terms as will reveal to the public the true situation.

"For illustration, your statement leaves the impression that payments have been made by the State to the various county and city boards of education and other boards of control, in excess of the actual amounts due by the State to these boards for educational purposes. Have you not completely overlooked or disregarded the fact that the total appropriations for educational purposes for the year ending September 30, 1931 amounted to more than $12,250,000 and that any unpaid part of these appropriations is a just and legal charge against the general revenues of the State? Is it not true that the excess payments for each and every year shown in your statement to the Governor were made in every case in accordance with legislative appropriations and were a just and legal charge against the general revenues of the State? You are doubtless aware that legislative appropriations for various educational purposes made prior to 1927 amounting annually to more than $2,500,000 have never been a charge against any special educational trust fund or other revenues specifically raised for educational purposes. Contrary to the inference to be drawn from your statement, these appropriations according to legislative mandate have always been paid from the general revenues of the State. They are not excess payments as indicated by you and could not legally have been paid from other revenues specifically raised for educational purposes.

"Are not the outstanding unpaid warrants for the year ending September 30, 1931 amounting to $3,372,187.53 ac-

Rev. J. W. Jones of Thorsby was among the callers at the News office Tuesday.

Traffic Increasing On Rockford Road

Due to a recent reduction in fare to cross the Coosa River at Powell's ferry, traffic appears to be increasing to a certain extent. This also is due partially to the good condition of the new road which makes the distance to Rockford from Clanton only thirty miles, part paved.

The ferry rates were reduced Oct. 1st to 75 cents round trip during the week and only fifty cents round trip on Sundays, the latter making the fare exactly one-half of the former cost. J. P. Spain, operator of the ferry is giving excellent service day or night, using a safe, motorized ferry.

MORE STYLE IN A BETTER PRODUCT IS TODAY'S KEY TO GOOD BUSINESS

Trade Going To Keen Hustlers Who Observed Changing Conditions And Adopted Newer Methods Of Merchandising

"There is one characteristic of us Americans," says Mr. George H. Sheldon, Vice-President of Hommann, Tarcher and Sheldon, Inc., Advertising, New York, "and that is that we are consistent in only one thing, and that is our inconsistency. For example: Some of us may remember with mingled feelings the people, who back in 1928, foretold the business crash of 1929. We called them pessimists and tried our best to avoid their company. Many of these same people are today telling us that better business is definitely here and we now say they are optimists.

"But better business is here," continued Mr. Sheldon. It is here with this difference, that in few cases has it returned to the same houses.

"Business today is going to business men who have observed and adopted the newer methods. Men who have followed the indicated routes and as a result are making money. In virtually every industry there are outstanding performers who are actually showing improved balance sheets. In each case you will find that the directing heads of the business recognized changing conditions as they developed over the period of the last three years, and did not fail to adopte new methods for the old.

An Important Change

"The most important change which so many business men failed to note was that the day of easy business was past and that good, hard and consistent work of selling was again in order.

"Different communities may mean different standards in living but research disclosed that the per-capita spending power of small towns under 10,000 population is as great as in our big cities.

"Furthermore, that it is the American woman who spends or almost directly controls more than 80% of the nation's spending—or buying.

What does she want, this "purchasing agent" of the home? For what is she spending the family income? What influences or governs her selections of merchandise purchased or the store at which she trades?

"It is style. Style in merchandise and style in presentation. Style, in this instance, covers everything because it touches in on every phase of living.

"The woman wants style in her home, style in its furnishing, style in the apparel of the family, style in food, style in luxuries. She wants and will have as much style as she can get for the money she has to spend! The business which best meets her style requirements is the business which, even today, is getting her trade.

Not Changed—But Changing

"The changed business conditions are not fixed . . . but changing. New ways, . . . new wants. . . . new materials. As one great industrial leader so aptly put it, in explaining the development of new businesses, "Trade comes when the customer is made dissatisfied with what he has."

"Of first importance, of course, is a quality product. Something old, maybe but made in a new way, a new use, meeting new requirements. Then comes the task of introducing that product to the trade.

"Neither the manufacturer or the retailer can for one moment overlook the economic value of advertising in the task of introducing and keeping known the merits of their products. It is fundamental in the modern methods of trade. It is of special importance now when records disclose that these businesses which have gone ahead in the last fifteen months are those which put on steam in supply more style in a better product—and then went out to get the business.

71 CREAM CHECKS ISSUED TO FARMERS SATURDAY

The price of cream has picked up for the last two weeks. County Agent C. E. Stapp advises that 71 cream checks were issued to farmers last Saturday. He again asks us to call attention to the fact that the cream station was put in for the farmers who do not get enough cream to ship to advantage, and that the farmers who get as much as a five-gallon can of cream in a week realize more out of it to ship it to Montgomery or Birmingham than to sell it at the station at Clanton. Prior to the establishment of the station many farmers experienced trouble in selling their small amounts of surplus cream and butter.

ALABAMA IMPROVING POULTRY INDUSTRY

Alabama is improving her poultry industry, says R. B. Jones, State Poultry Inspector.

During the past year Alabama poultrymen had 51,937 birds in 567 flocks tested for Bacillary White Diarrhea. "This is an increase of 9,145 birds and 106 flocks over last year," Mr. Jones reports to Commissioner Storrs.

"Thirty-one accredited hatcheries had a capacity the past year of 342,610 eggs. This is an increase of 52,196 eggs in accredited matcheries capacity," he continued.

Within the past twelve months Mr. Jones and his two assistants have handled 77,372 birds, 51,937 of which were tested and 25.435 were classed as culls and sent to the market.

"In addition to out testing work in 43 counties we assisted county agents in vaccinating 13,100 birds against chicken

Prowler Gets It In The Legs When He Goes To Look Into Cabinet At Gragg's Camp

Some fellow got something he really didn't intend to get when he opened a cabinet in the cabin at the camp of Dr. V. J. Gragg, on Coosa River the other day, judging from pieces of overalls and blood stains on the floor of the cabin.

For sometime Dr. Gragg and other camp owners have been victims of burglars who have broken into their cabins and made away with supplies and other articles. A double-barrel shotgun was rigged up in Gragg's camp, and placed inside a cabinet, the cabinet locked and the door of the camp locked. The locks did not hinder the burglar, and when he removed the lock from the cabinet and opened the door, a full charge from both barrels of the shot gun struck him in the leg. It was not found until Thursday that the trap had been sprung.

It is hoped that this occurence will end the prowling and burglarizing in the privately owned camps along the river.

CHAPTER LIX

The second phase of the Meuse-Argonne operation, the period from October 1 to 11, involved the heaviest strain on me and the army.

There was little time to make readjustments among the troops, heavily engaged, without giving the enemy a respite in which to strengthen his defenses and bring up reserves.

The general attack was resumed at 5 a. m. on October 4, meeting desperate resistance by the enemy. In this attack, the Fourth division of the Third corps, in three days' bitter fighting, captured and held the Bois de Fays, making a gain of over a mile. Advances into the Bois le Peut de Faux were forced back by vicious counter-attacks. In similar hard fighting the Eighteenth division gained a foothold in the Bois des Ogons, against very heavy machine gun fire.

In the attack of the Fifth corps, the Third division pushed forward in the face of strong resistance. During the next two days this division extended its gains, but could make no headway against the Bois de Cunel. The Thirty-second division, which had taken Cierges October 1, advanced to just south of Gesnes on the fourth despite very severe hostile fire, and next day captured that town.

On the left of the army, the First corps was very successful. The First division in a fine display of power on October 4, drove a deep wedge into the enemy's line. This was of great value in affording space for the attack toward the Argonne to be launched later.

The fighting here was characterized by the stubborn nature of the German resistance and the offensive spirit of the division.

Case of the "Lost Battalion."

The right of the Twenty-eighth division fought its way down the Aire river in liaison with the First and captured Chehery. The left of the division encountered much opposition and made but slight gains, notwithstanding its repeated attacks. The division was now facing west for nearly three miles along the Aire river. The Seventy-seventh division between September 29 and October 4 continued its attacks in the Argonne, advancing about a mile over difficult terrain.

In the assault of October 2 a mixed battalion of the division moved forward more rapidly than the troops on its right and left, and became completely surrounded by the enemy. It became popularly known as the "Lost Battalion."

For four days every effort of the division to relieve this beleaguered force was unsuccessful, and every effort of the Germans to force its surrender was without avail.

French Call for Help.

In the meantime the French Fourth army on our left had been held up at Blanc Mont. As a consequence, Marshal Foch appealed to me for assistance. Although I was loath to spare any troops from our front, so serious was our own situation, I sent, in accordance with my promise, the Second division (Lejeune), which was followed later by the Thirty-sixth (W. R. Smith).

October 3 the Second division, accompanied by French tanks, in a brilliant maneuver against heavy machine gun resistance, stormed and captured the dominating German positions on the Medeah Farm-Blanc Mont Ridge, and continued on toward St. Etienne, which was taken on October 8 with the aid of one brigade of the Thirty-sixth division. This success carried forward the French divisions on its right and left and, as reported by General Gouraud, enabled the whole Fourth army to advance.

Our Second Army Organized.

The broadening of the front of attack to the east of the Meuse and the probability that we should soon become engaged along our whole line made it advisable to establish another army. Accordingly, the Second army was formed with its front extending from the Moselle to Fresnes-en-Woevre, and placed under the command of Major General Bullard on the twelfth. The remainder of our front from Fresnes-en-Woevre to the Argonne forest, inclusive, was left under the First army, to which Major General Liggett was assigned. Both commanders were recommended to me for promotion to lieutenant general.

My status now became that of commander of a group of armies. Major General Summerall was placed in command of the Fifth corps to relieve Major General Cameron, who was given command of the Fourth division. Major General Hines was promoted to the command of the Third corps in place of General Bullard. Major General Dickman, commanding the Fourth corps, was given the First corps and Major General Muir the Fourth.

These changes generally took effect October 12 but I retained direct command of the First army until the sixteenth.

CHAPTER LX

The Meuse-Argonne operations carried out between October 7 and 11 consisted of four specific attacks, as follows:

(1) October 7. The First corps, employing the Eighty-second division between the First and Twenty-eighth divisions, attacked the eastern edge of the Argonne forest.

(2) October 8. The French Seventeenth corps, re-enforced by the American Thirty-third and Twenty-ninth divisions, attacked east of the Meuse on the front Beaumont-Brabant-sur-Meuse, with the object of seizing the heights there.

(3) October 9. The Fifth corps, re-enforced by including within its front the First division, to which was attached a brigade from the Ninety-first division, attacked the heights of the Bois de Romagne.

(4) October 10-11. A general attack on the 20-mile front from Beaumont west to the Aire river.

The French Fourth army had not been able to keep abreast of the American First army, and it was evident that clearing the Argonne forest would materially aid its advance. The opportunity presented itself just at this time. Although on October 6 the enemy continued to hold the heights of Cunel and Romagne, nevertheless sufficient space had been secured along the Aire river to warrant an attack to the west with the object of striking the rear of the enemy's positions in the Argonne forest.

There was another important factor that entered into the decision to force the withdrawal of the enemy from the Argonne. This was the predicament of the "Lost Battalion," which under Maj. C. W. Whittlesey had been holding out near Binarville since October 2.

Efforts to relieve the battalion had so far been unsuccessful, and the men had consumed their rations and expended most of their ammunition, although our aviators had tried to drop small amounts to them. The battalion was resisting heroically against great odds, without any thought of surrender.

Pursuant to the plan an attack was made by the Twenty-eighth and Eighty-second divisions against the left and rear of the enemy's positions in the region of Chatel-Chehery and Cornay. After a night march of eight miles the Eighty-second division (Duncan) entered the line between the Twenty-eighth (Muir) and the First (Summerall). In a series of daring movements to the west by the Twenty-eighth and Eighty-second divisions, Cornay, Chatel-Chehery and the dominating hills northwest of Apremont were captured.

Although the continued operation of these two divisions was attended by severe fighting the results were immediate. The enemy was forced to withdraw from that region, the Argonne forest was cleared, and the Seventy-seventh division was enabled to advance to the relief of its "Lost Battalion." It then pushed on to the north in pursuit of the retreating enemy.

East of the Meuse.

General Claudel's French Seventeenth corps, east of the Meuse, attacked October 8 with the object of seizing the heights northwest of Beaumont. At that time it consisted of two French and two American divisions, the Thirty-third and Twenty-ninth, making the corps in numerical strength two-thirds American. Though opposed by strong German resistance the assault was successfully directed by General Claudel, and our lines were advanced during the next few days to the commanding ground between Beaumont and Richene Hill.

In a well-conducted operation the Thirty-third division (Bell) crossed the Meuse early October 8 by bridges constructed during the night, captured Consenvoye, and progressed up the neighboring slopes. The following day a further advance was made, but heavy fire from the Borne de Cornouiller and the failure of the troops on the right to keep up forced a retirement to the morning line. This ground was retaken despite strong resistance, and by night of the 10th the division had established itself on the west slopes of Richene Hill.

The Fifty-eighth brigade of the Twenty-ninth division (Morton), under command of the French Eighteenth division, against considerable opposition pushed forward into the woods south of Richene Hill on the 8th, and during the next two days completed the capture of those woods. On the 11th, the Twenty-ninth division took command of its Fifty-eighth brigade. Its Fifty-seventh brigade, still under the French Eighteenth division, on the 12th made important gains in the Bois d'Ormont.

In conjunction with the operations by the French Seventeenth corps, the Fifth corps (Cameron) attacked in force October 9 and continued its efforts the next two days. The Third division (Buck) progressed on the 9th, and after fierce fighting seized Madeleine farm, which had previously proved a stumbling block, and partly cleared the Bois de Cunel. The following day it completed the capture of that wood and on the 11th extended its gains to the northwest.

The Thirty-second division (Haan) reached Romagne October 9 and penetrated the enemy trenches on Cote Dame Marie on the 10th, but was driven from the latter and established its lines on the southern slopes of the hill.

Ninety-First Suffers Heavy Casualties.

The Ninety-first division (Johnston), on the left of the Thirty-second division, fought all day on the 9th for Hill 255, suffering heavy casualties, and the following day occupied the position. The advance then continued until stopped on Hill 288 and the Cote Dame Marie. The division was relieved the night of October 11.

The First division (Summerall), in a resolute attack, captured the difficult enemy positions on and near Hill 272 on the 9th, and established its line on the 10th north of the Cote de Maldah. It also was relieved on the 11th. During the operations of the 9th and 10th, the One Hundred and Eighty-first brigade (John B. McDonald) of the Ninety-first division was attached to the First division, being transferred to the Thirty-second division on the night of the 10th.

The advance of the Third corps (Bullard) was bitterly contested by the enemy, but October 10 the Fourth division (Hines) fought its way forward beyond the Cunel-Brieulles road. Two determined assaults against the Bois de Peut de Faux were broken up, but on the third attempt the northern edge of that wood was attained. The division gained the far side of the Bois de Foret on the 11th against severe opposition.

The Eightieth division (Cronkhite) on the 9th, in the face of very heavy fire, pushed forward to a short distance north of the Bois des Ogons. The division's attacks continued, and when relieved two days later it had reached a line slightly south and east of Cunel.

On the front of the First corps (Liggett) the opposition encountered on the 10th was less determined, and the Eighty-second division (Duncan) by midnight had established its line beyond Marcq, while the line of the Seventy-seventh division (Alexander) ran westward from there. On the 11th, however, the fighting was severe, yet the Eighty-second, regardless of heavy casualties, advanced to a position north of Sommerance. This town, though in the sector of the First division, was occupied by the Eighty-second to protect its own flank.

The night of October 11 our line ran from east to west roughly as follows: Molleville farm—Bois de la Cote Lemont—part of Bois de Foret—south of Cote Dame Marie—Sommerance—Grandpre.

While these operations on our First army front were in progress, the Thirtieth division of the Second corps (Read) attacked October 8 as part of the British Fourth army, aiding materially in the general advance of that army. The attack, although meeting considerable opposition, was successful, and the progress continued three days. When relieved the night of the 11th, the Thirtieth division had driven the enemy back seven miles and had reached the Selle river.

Third Phase of the Battle.

The third phase of the Meuse-Argonne operations began October 14. During the previous phase, important gains had been made along the whole front against increasing intensity of resistance. The retirement of the enemy in front of the allies to the west, which was being accelerated by our persistent gains in the east, indicated clearly that he was trying to save himself from complete disaster, which it was urgent that we should strive all the more vigorously to hasten.

The enemy's strong defenses in the Bois de Romagne and the Bois de Bantheville had to be reduced before further considerable progress could be made. To the west of Romagne heights we faced the strongly fortified position which included Cote de Chatillon-Landres-St. Georges-St. Juvin-Bois des Loges and Grandpre.

Our attacks on the 14th, 15th and 16th in conjunction with Gouraud's French Fourth army met violent opposition, especially at the beginning, and although ground was often taken and retaken several times, our lines were steadily pushed forward.

East of the Meuse, in the French Seventeenth corps the Sixty-fifth brigade (Edward L. King) of the Thirty-third division had made some progress, and the Twenty-ninth division, despite the difficult terrain and severe casualties, had entered woods north of Molleville farm.

The Fifth division, in the face of intense fire on its front and flanks, on the 14th reached the top of the slopes northeast of Romagne and cleared the wood north of Cunel. Elements of the division pushed through to the northern edge of the Bois des Rappes, but were withdrawn.

By dint of the superior determination of our troops, the enemy's lines were broken at a vital point by the Fifth corps.

Cote Dame Marie Taken.

Unstinted praise must be given the Thirty-second division, which, notwithstanding heavy losses, October 14 brilliantly captured Cote Dame Marie, perhaps the most important strong point of the Hindenburg line on the western front. The town of Romagne and the eastern half of Bois de Romagne were also taken by this division on that day, while on the following day its line was advanced about a mile to the southern edge of the Bois de Bantheville.

The Forty-second division fought aggressively against the most obstinate defense, forcing its way through the western half of Bois de Romagne, its Eighty-fourth brigade (Douglas MacArthur) scaling the precipitous heights of the Cote de Chatillon and carrying its line on beyond that position. The desperate resistance on the left of the division, south of St. George and Landres-et-St. Georges, however, could not be overcome.

The importance of these operations can hardly be overestimated. The capture of the Romagne heights, especially its dominating feature, Cote Dame Marie, was a decisive blow. We now occupied the enemy's strongest fortified position on that front and flanked his line on the Aisne and the heights of the Meuse. Unless he could recapture the positions we held, our successes would compel the enemy to retreat from his lines to the north, as we were within heavy artillery range of his railroad lines.

Editor, Chilton County News:

I am asking you for space for a few words about the fourth chapter of Ezk. He was commanded to lie on his left side 390 days and on his right side 40 days. Each day was for a year. The 390 days was for the 10 tribes, the 40 days was for Judah and Benjamin (House). In the year 999 B. C. the 10 tribes revolted against Judah. This was 393 years before the destruction of Jerusalem. We see that King Jeroboam failed to obey and get a sure house and that he initiated a false worship and set up two golden calves. Jeroboam was warned, but he continued his false worship, which was about three years after the revolt and by subtracting the days for a year that Ezekiel lay on his left side and the 3 years we have the date 606 B. C. (393 from 999 is 606) and 606 was the beginning of the Gentiles times. It would be intruding on valuable space to give Scriptural evidence that the Gentile times is to last 2520 years and of the many things that are to come to pass after 2520 years from 606 B. C.

A well known newspaper of February 10, 1931, representing the sentiment of Organized Christianity (in part) says: "Our world presents a strange and sorry spectacle. In the cities millions of people haven't enough to eat. In the country millions of farmers facing ruin. Too much corn, too much wheat because they have no market. There are hundreds of millions going almost naked while cotton planters are on the verge of starvation. Too much sugar, too much coffee, too much cotton, too much silver, too much oil and too much of almost everything. Three-quarters of the population of the globe half naked and half starved, are yearning for the barest necessities of life, but can't afford them. What a sickening indictment of our system. The remedy is only to be found in a new order of things founded upon world peace." I will close by saying we are facing something as bad or worse than the destruction of Jerusalem.

The Public's Interest In Busses And Trucks

October, 1931, issue of The L. & N. Employes' Magazine

The reprint below is an editorial that appeared in the Louisville Courier-Journal on October 1. The injury that is done to the railroads by the inequitable competition with busses and trucks is pretty well known, especially to railroad people. This editorial shows that in another, but important, respect the general public is also suffering from the serious damage that is being done everywhere to the highways, which were constructed for ordinary travel such as private automobiles and smaller trucks, but are being destroyed by the large motor vehicles which are engaged in the regular transportation business for hire. Every citizen and taxpayer should know that what happened in the South Carolina county described in this editorial is also happening to a greater or less extent practically everywhere throughout this country. Sooner or later the public will wake up to it, though in many cases it will be too late to save the roads. Kentucky has the chance to do it at the coming session of its Legislature, which meets in January. It is hoped and believed that the great injustice which is being done by these heavy motor vehicles, not only to the railroads but to the owners of private automobiles and to taxpayers of the State generally, will be stopped by appropriate legislation enacted at our next Legislature.

Where Motor Traffic Cost Is High

Senator Barkley may seem to be bearding the lion by demanding regulation of interstate motor transportation in an address before the National Association of Motor Bus Operators, but regulation is what the organized bus men are demanding. It is their cry for self-protection, for stabilization, for control of competition. The big bus lines have suffered, along with the railroads, because of the springing up here and there of small independents who, by cutting rates, cause the whole business to be unprofitable. The bus men want the Interstate Commerce Commission to set up certain standards of equipment and service and minimum fares, so that they may not be subjected from time to time to unfair and irresponsible competition. In other words, the bus operators are getting a dose of what they handed the railroads.

Interstate Commerce Commission regulation of bus and truck lines, besides enforcing a less unfair competition with the railroads, would improve the transportation situation considerably. The railroads are being hurt by inequitable truck competition, and the taxpayers are suffering because States permit common carrier truck lines to destroy public highways that were never intended to accommodate such traffic.

An authenticated instance of such destruction, with its tragic results, recently was revealed in a public hearing. A South Carolina county voted $360,000 in road bonds for the construction of modern concrete highways. The roads were built. Huge cotton trucks —common carriers operating for private profit over the public's roads—pounded these roads night and day for a year—and reduced them to a series of "shell holes" and dust. The county's roads were destroyed, but the taxpayers will be paying off the bonds for the next twenty years.

Charles Marvin, the engineer head of the United States Weather Bureau, recently wrote an article for the press in which he showed that the best modern roads will stand up indefinitely under a maximum of passenger car and light truck traffic; that they will be damaged within a certain number of years under use by medium weight trucks, and that within a comparatively short time they will be destroyed under the pounding of a certain percentage of heavy trucks.

Interstate Commerce Commission regulation of motor transportation may not put a stop to the destruction of the public's roads by common carrier truck lines, operating vehicles of a weight and capacity too great for the best highways made, but it is up to the States to call a halt on the improper use of State-built highways.

"Leeds Community Builder"

It is with pleasure we acknowledge receipt this week of a new weekly newspaper to our desk, the "Leeds Community Builder" which published its first issue October 15th. S. G. and R. M. Tucker are the publishers. These gentlemen need no introduction to newspaper folks of Alabama. They are widely and well known over the state, and their ability to do a good job of editing and managing a progressive newspaper goes without question. Congratulations are in order to them, to Leeds, and a hearty welcome is extended to them as they come into the weekly newspaper field in Alabama.

PAST-PRESENT-FUTURE
IN CHILTON COUNTY

Living costs in Clanton have been greatly reduced within the past three years, according to several of our leading merchants and business men. Groceries, clothing and other necessities are as reasonably priced in the stores in Clanton as has been in a great number of years.

Clanton, as has been said hundreds of times, is ideally situated, but—here is where some of the trouble is showing up. There appears to be little effort in this section to tell the outside world of the advantages to be found in Chilton County. In fact, I'd be almost willing to wager that there is a large number of the older citizens of the town and county who are still asleep to the fact that Clanton has advantages that are being looked for constantly by large manufacturing concerns. Yet, do we sleep on the job and wonder why?

To this writer, it seems nothing but foolishness, to put it frankly for the Commissioners Court to listen to those persons who have been nagging the Court about the uselessness of the work of a County Agent in this county.

Foolishness, because farming is the only means whereby the merchants, business and professional men of Clanton and every other town in the county, are existing, or that is, the chief factor in their existence at this time. There are no payrolls, no factories to bring income to the county—it's farming and farmers who send money into Clanton, Thorsby, Maplesville, Jemison, Coopers, Verbena, Pletcher and all other settlements in Chilton County.

The work of a County Agent is to aid the farmer in his work, showing him new ideas, helps, in order that he may be more able to farm, and live in a better manner. Now, do away with the work, and what do you get?

Frankly speaking, its seems queer to me that since the question has been up concerning the office of the County Agent here, the Commissioners Court has not divulged the names nor the source of the request they stated was received that an election be held. Neither has one word been put before the people in a public statement by anyone against the office. And who are those "some citizens and tax payers" who requested the Commissioners Court to call an election? Who has that influence over the Court. This election in my own personal opinion, seems to be an attempt to oust the work of the County Agent in this county. The mass meeting held for this purpose sometime ago failed to accomplish what "some citizens and tax payers" wanted. Why? Apparently perhaps, because "some citizens and tax payers" did not have nerve enough to get up before the meeting and say they were opposed to the work in the county. It would have called for some nerve.

Chilton County does not need to take any backward steps. This county needs to take as many forward steps and as often as possible. Certainly to do away with the County Agent work in this county, would be a very backward step. I rather like the letter in this issue from W. L. Sanders, a member of the County School Board, so far as the letter concerns the County Agent.

Lawrence Gives Statement On Educational Funds

cording to your statement, evidence of the fact that educational appropriations have not been paid according to the law?

"May I ask what part of the $7,992,058.01 reported in your statement as 'total payments to public schools and educational institutions and for Departmental expenses and other educational activities during the year ending September 30, 1931 (not including payments of prior years' warrants)' is represented by certificated warrants? Is it not true that a substantial part of the $7,992,058.01 reported by you as payments is, in effect, an outstanding loan which so far has not been paid from receipts for educational purposes reported by you as amounting to $5,715,125.48? If it is true that this loan has not been paid from the receipts as reported by you, then should you not inform the public as to what disposition has been made of the difference between the receipts shown and the amounts actually paid out from specific school funds? Will any part of the revenues for educational purposes for the year 1931-32 be devoted to liquidating the aforesaid loan as represented by certificated warrants or to meeting unpaid appropriations for the year ending September 20, 1931?

"You will recall, that you have not replied to my letter to you of September 28 requesting an itemized statement of the Alabama Educational Trust Fund for the year ending September 30, 1931, showing the amount derived from each source of receipts as set out in Section 2 of the Revenue Act of 1927 and the amount expended for each appropriated fund as set out in House Bill No. 318 of the 1927 Legislature. I hope that you may yet find time to supply this information as requested. The information is necessary to clarify the whole situation."

(Signed) A. F. HARMAN,
State Superintendent of Education.

Another interesting item appeared in the Alabama Journal under date of Tuesday, October 20, 1931. This article was headed: "Blan Admits Schools Paid Only One-Third of State Trust Fund." One paragraph of this article reads as follows:

"Although approximately $678,000 has been collected for the trust fund since the new fiscal year began October 1, State Treasurer S. H. Blan estimated that not more than $288,000 of this money has been disbursed for school purposes and that the rest has been used in paying warrants of other departments of the state government."

I hope that the patrons and citizens of the county are keeping up with the situation as is found in the daily press. The Alabama Journal has given daily about all the information available in so far as I have been able to ascertain. The County Board of Education can make no promise as to how long we shall be able to operate our schools unless the money due us from the State of Alabama is paid.

I remind you again of the fact that we have about $17,000 due us from last year's appropriations. If this amount is added to the appropriations for this year we will have upwards of $90,000 due us from the State of Alabama. If this money is not forthcoming we cannot operate over one-half year and in fact it will be necessary for us to have some of the state money in order to operate a full half-year but it is the intention of the Board to continue the schools for one-half year in order that the pupils may be able to receive full credit for that part of the work they do. It is a deplorable situation. Our state superintendent is doing all that he can to secure the needed funds but for some reason or other the money is not available from the state treasury.

I assure you that it will be a pleasure to answer all inquiries or give such information as will enable the county to understand the situation as it is.

Trusting that something may yet happen by which we may be able to get a full term, I am,

Respectfully yours,
B. LAWRENCE,
County Supt. Education.

FROM MULBERRY

Dear Editor:

Please allow me to say a few words about some very important work which is being forwarded by our Mulberry people. It is relative to our Every-member canvass. All of the committees have been secured and training courses arranged so that we can go immediately, into the work. We believe and trust that our people will respond in this worthy cause.

Depression does not excuse us from doing what we can to carry the Gospel of Christ into all parts of the world. Christ did not say that if times grew hard He would excuse us, but He said, "Go." Through the Cooperative Program Missionary Baptists have agreed to do this. May we appreciate Christ's salvation enough and love him so well, that we will give the world the Gospel, at any cost.

In our Master's name,

More Farmers Give Their Approval Of County Farm Agent's Work

proval of the work of the County Farm Agent in Chilton County.

The meeting at Oak Grove, north of Jemison, was held last Thursday night. Exery man present at the meeting expressed himself in favor of the County Agent being continued. J. D. Sutley, W. I. Lessley, T. F. Satterwhite, and other farmers made talks in which they pointed out many ways in which the County Agent has been of help to them and others in the community.

C. R. Foss, cashier of The Peoples Bank, of Jemison, was present with the farmers and urged them to support the County Agent in the election of November 3. A poll of the crowd was taken, and every man present voted for the County Agent.

Another meeting at Pleasant Grove, west of Jemison, was held on Thursday night. It was an enthusiastic demonstration unanimously in favor of the County Agent. Talks were made by Will Clements, Clarence Childress, Clyde Cofer, Hunter Rasco, Mr. Foss, and others. It was pointed out in these talks by the farmers that the work of the County Agent has been used to great advantage by the people of Pleasant Grove. When a vote was called for every man arose in favor of the work and continuing it in Chilton County.

The largest gathering of farmers held at Collins Chapel in a long time came out Saturday night to give consideration to the County Agent business. Wilbur Bean, Perry Gore, Glenn Sessions, C. R. Foss, Zac Appleton, and others made talks pointing out the effective manner in which they had mastered many farm problems through the assistance of the County Agent. General discussion and criticism of the County Agent work was invited, but no opposition was expressed.

Following are some of the endorsements sent to this newspaper with a request they be published:

4-H Club Gives Expression

To the Voters of Chilton County:

We represent more than 400 Chilton County farm boys between the ages of 10 years and 18 years, who in 4-H Club work, have taken the following pledge:

I pledge:
My Head to clearer thinking
My Heart to greater loyalty
My Hands to larger service, and
My Health to better living; for My Club, My Community, and My Country.

We are trying to develop into useful citizens for Chilton County. Our County Agent, Mr. Stapp, is leading us in this work. We can't vote, but we plead with you to go to the polls on November the third and vote for the continuation of Mr. Stapp's work in the County.

(Signed)
CHILTON COUNTY 4-H CLUB,
CLYDE POPWELL, Pres.,
JAMES DENNIS, Vice Pres.,
OSMOND GLEN, Sec'y-Treas.
QUINTON KELLY, Reporter.

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 25, 1931.

Dear Chilton County Citizens:

We, the undersigned 4-H Club Members, are appealing to you for your support of our county agency work. Mr. Stapp has done much for Chilton County's youth and each of us have learned to love him as an older brother. By organizing clubs and promoting project work, he has made our farm life much more interesting and enjoyable, and by constantly stimulating our interest in agriculture, he has opened up the way to much great accomplishments during our future life.

It's all left up to you, dear voters. Will you vote for Mr. Stapp and support the welfare of Chilton County's youth, or will you defeat Mr. Stapp and make our way to better methods of farming much more difficult to travel? Who deserves your consideration more, the youth of today, or those few business men who's greed has brought this attack on the farmers' interest? Think it over and then help yourself and the younger generation by voting for the continuation of Mr. Stapp's work.

Sincerely yours,

—(Signed): Delos Culp, R. C. Yeazy, C. M. Manning, S. L. Breadhead Jr., Luther Mims, Marvin M. Durbin, James M. Deason, Wilbert Conway, J. P. Poole, James Calfee, A. D. Headley, Morris Keen, Hannon Owen, O. T. Scott, Carles Owen, Alton Culp and Winston Culp.

Editor, Chilton County News:

Please allow me space in your paper to express myself in behalf of the County Agent. Personally, I don't see how I could get along without him. I have had the services of a county agent for nearly 20 years, and I always find one a great help. I don't see how one could object to a county agent.

Chilton County is an agricultural county and the farmers need help with their problems. If the farmers suffer the merchants suffer, and if the farmers prosper the merchants prosper.

Before we got a County Agent we could not grow peaches. If we put them out they would soon die. Since we have a County Agent we grow more peaches than we know what to do with. The value of the County Agent can not be estimated in dollars and cents.

If there ever was a time the farmers need help with their problems it is now. I have heard several say that the county agent makes quite a bit from the store the Farm Bureau is running. I happen to be a director of the Farm Bureau and I know he does not make one penny out of it. It belongs to the members of the Farm Bureau and Mr. Stapp gives his services just like he does his other services. I don't think he gets enough for his services. He is going all the time, his expenses are heavy.

Now let us one and all lay all prejudice aside and go to the polls November the 3rd and settle this question once and for always. If we discontinue the county agent we will be sorry of it, for what we sow we shall surely reap. If we do away with the county agent, we will have no one to go to with our problems, and I think we have the best one in the State. I would not be willing to exchange him for nó one I know. He is always on the job.

The Drouth Relief could not have gotten help from the Government if we had not had a county agent, for it had to come through him.

In many ways he is a help to us. This is a serious matter when we begin to think of doing away with him. LET'S NOT DO IT!

J. L. SMITH.

"A Fool Thinketh"

Being the views and opinions of one who has time to think things over while leisurely confined at home.

It looks like winter just hates to pinch us all up again and puts off his arrival from day to day.

An airplane flew very low through my backyard the other evening, so low, in fact, that I invited the flying boys to come in and have supper with me. There was no place they could land out here and so they had to decline. So, you see, I saved my politeness as well as my supper. I went in to my supper table and looked at the poor, pitiful thing and wondered how long I would have lived if those flyers had landed and accepted my invitation. It would have been a case of justifiable homicide when they got through with me.

Mr. Hoover made quite a nice little talk over the radio Sunday, to the great international Conference of the Methodist church in Atlanta. As usual he rode the top rail on the fence. He always delivers a beautiful oration but never commits himself to anything.

Hon. Owen D. Young, of New York, delivered an appeal for the poor and out of work people at the Birmingham Municipal Auditorium Sunday afternoon. Like everything he does or says it was a masterpiece.

There are good arguments in favor of that bond issue, but just think whose hands the money will have to pass thru.

The cotton crop is about harvested. Let us hope that there will not be more than half that much to gather next year. Grow strawberries, tomatoes, both kinds of potatoes, melons, sugar cane, radishes, onions and with a few chickens and eggs on the side. Then get your county agent to arrange cooperative sales and shipments for you and then watch your pocket book grow and your smile spread. All of this in place of your cotton. Then grow hay, hogs, having enough to feed everything that eats on your place and happiness will put up at your home as a regular boarder.

Let everybody apologize to God for the awful way we have all been carrying on and humbly and earnestly ask Him to take the steering wheel again and watch how quick the "depression" will vanish and everybody be fed, clothed and happy once more.

The present administration of Miller and Feagin at the capitol astounds the people. They are actually stricken dumb with amazement that a supposedly civilized and democratic people would quietly put up with any such childish spite and personal egotism as is being dealt out to us daily by that wonderful pair of manipulators. If there ever was a time when the people needed to have a clean and honest show down, that time is right now. An audit by a pair of auditors from the far North will not appeal to the public, for, no matter how accurate and correct it might be, the fact of importing auditors from afar smells loudly of trickery, especially when Alabama could supply men equally as able, equally as honest and ten times better qualified because they live here, know the conditions and would take a personal pride in putting the business of their own state on a true and equitable basis. There must be a wonderful lack of confidence by the Governor in the people who put him in office when he fears to meet their duly chosen representatives in session and is likewise afraid for the people to assemble in mass meeting. What a sublime travesty on a supposedly democratic administration. Wonder if he is fearful of allowing the people to assemble for fear some man might mention that word "impeachment."

Mr. Hoover has some 10 or 12 "committees" or "commissions" out now to do something to tide over this terrible depression and provide for the poor and needy of our land, who have another six months of winter facing them immediately, without a dime in their scant and ragged pockets nor the faintest possibilities of a job of any kind. He has had these and similar organizations at work on their very important and pressing job for two years with not a thing done yet, nor even a suggestion made. In the meantime thousands of children have actually died from hunger and malnutrition, while the weaker class of women and the aged have passed away in like proportion and from the same cause. A few years of delay does not seem to mean anything to Mr. Hoover and his opulent "committees". They all have all the comforts of life and winter without food or shelter does not mean anything urgent to them, but to the pauperized millions who are right now dying and seeing their loved ones die, it means everything and this waiting policy is making the fires of bloody revolution burn brighter and brighter, as the clods drop into the pauper graves of these pitiful victims.

State Treasurer Blan told a reporter for the Birmingham Post that he knew it was against the law to pay out any of the School Fund money to anybody but the proper school authorities, still, he said it was "customary" down there not to observe that law so he thought it best to keep up the "customs." What do you think about that? It has been a "custom" for years to make and sell moonshine liquor, consequently, I suppose, the whisky men have adopted the same view held by Blan. They have equal rights and equal ground for doing so that he had.

For the past four years both our State and Federal governments have encroached, more and more, on the personal rights and even the domestic privileges of the individual citizen. They have taken over our fishing and hunting rights and you have to pay to fish or hunt on your own premises and only certain times are your permitted to enjoy these sports. But in spite of all that protective interference the supply of fish and game becomes more rare as the years roll by. There are a number of other more drastic and more personal laws, but they all break down like the game law. They won't work because they have no place in a land of freedom. If I was to go into this matter somebody would say "whiskey head" and that's a lie.

The weather is becoming quite dry in these parts. Wells are drying up and water is becoming quite an object in some localities. I remember one year when it did not rain a drop from August 31 to December 26, but we all got along somehow. However, that was before the 18th Amendment happened and the breweries kept at work.

Please let all readers understand that the Chilton County News, nor its editor, is at all responsible for anything the "Fool" may say in these squibs.

RECORD TRUCK CROP SHIPPED FROM STATE

Alabama farmers this year shipped 9,625 cars of truck crops, breaking an all-time record by 1,400 cars, reports the market division of the department of agriculture.

Truck crops shipped from the state this year includes 4,674 cars of Irish potatoes, 1155 cars of cabbage, 1148 of strawberries, 811 watermelons, 578 green corns, 456 cucumbers, 400 sweet potatoes, 224 of peaches, 80 beans, 48 of mixed vegetables, 43 pears and 9 of apples.

The previous high mark in truck crop shipments from the state was made in 1926 when 8,220 cars were shipped.

Statistics show that in 1920, 3315 cars moved from the state; in 1921, 4198; 1922, 7839; 1923, 5501; 1924, 8070; 1925, 6888; 1926, 8220; 1927, 8031; 1928, 7370; 1929, 8840; and 1930, 6766.

EACH COUNTY WOULD BE GUARANTEED $275,000.00 UNDER ROAD BOND ISSUE

Alabama good roads advocates attending the United States Good Roads Convention at Birmingham last week were overwhelmingly in favor of the proposed $25,000,000 bond issue amendment which will be voted on at a special election Tuesday, November 3. Many of them so expressed themselves in interviews given to convention reporters.

Following Governor Miller's address advocating a three and one-half cents additional tax on gasoline to finance a pay-as-you-go highway construction and paving program, Former Governor W. W. Brandon, called upon to address the convention, stated that the bond issue is necessary to match federal highway money, which otherwise will revert to other federal uses and be lost to Alabama forever.

Probate Judge John Gamble of Pike County, attending the convention, stated that the good roads amendment carried a provision for increasing the gas tax only one cent; that revenue from this one-cent additional gasoline levy will raise, on the present basis, more than $1,500,000 a year. The interest on the bonds will run about $1,250,000 per year, leaving about a quarter of a million dollars annually to apply towards paying the principal.

"But the bond issue will help pay for itself in another way," said Judge Gamble. "Together with the $14,000,000 which the federal government will advance to match the proceeds from the bonds in the next three years, it will hard-surface about 2,000 miles of highways that are now going to pieces in this state."

At an informal meeting during the convention, Alabama road advocates called attention to the fact that each county is guaranteed $275,000 under the bond issue program, but no county would be assured of any part of the funds raised by an additional gas tax of three and one-half cents per gallon, to be expended at the will of the governor, or highway director.

Sunday School Lesson

for November 1
WORLD'S TEMPERANCE SUNDAY
Galatians 5:13-26
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Special interest will center in a discussion of organized liquor traffic for this World's Temperance Sunday. The date is fixed to occur on the Sunday preceding the usual election day in the United States. Plenty of up to date facts will be found in the newspapers. Two books are suggested for special research. They are "Prohibition at its Worst," by Prof. Irving Fisher, and "Prohibition and Common Sense."

"Galatians," from which the lesson text is taken, comes naturally before us as it is one of the letters written by Paul from Corinth during his third missionary journey. It is always interesting to note how the Bible, written so long ago, meets the issues in everyday living at the present time. The biggest argument put forth by those who want to sell alcohol, which is always to be labeled Poison, is that of personal liberty. Paul writes here about "freedom," but makes the distinction between using it as "an occasion of the flesh" or "through love, be servants of one another." Christianity teaches that we are to give up our individual rights that we may be of real help to humanity.

Wickednesses are listed under "lust of the flesh" and it is the use of liquor which dulls mental activity that aggravates al lthe sins that are named. In marked contrast the "fruit of the Spirit" is pictured.

Almost unbelievable progress has been made in temperance reform during the past twenty years. The Eighteenth Amendment is enforced to at least 60% and 80% enforcement of any law is very good. When those who call themselves Christian demand better enforcement it will come.

Marbury Chapter Of F.F.A. Holds Meeting

The Marbury chapter of the Future Farmers of America held their first meeting of the year Monday, October 26th, to elect officers for the coming year. The officers elected were, Gray Peek, President; Jack Price, vice-president; Edward Mitchell, secretary; Herschell Dennis, treasurer; Pierce Culver, reporter; B. L. Martin, voc-agri. teacher, advisor.

Other business discussed was the time for meeting. It was decided to meet on the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month. Some of the things we expect to accomplish are: Visiting experiment station at Auburn and camping during the summer, besides many other similar activities.

Twenty-two members were present at this meeting with the determination to make this year the greatest year we have ever had.

Beef Cattle Seen As Opportunity

F. W. Burns, extension animal husbandman at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, has received inquiries about the prospects for profits in feeding steers this winter. To make it profitable, Mr. Burns said that "the feeder should have an abundance of home-grown feed."

In conjunction with this cattle must be cheap when entering the feed lot. "Remember that cattle bought right are more than half sold," he said.

If common cattle are used feed cottonseed meal and rough or unsalable hay. "High grade steers can be fed better feed such as corn, cottonseed meal, ensilage, and hay because if they are properly finished they can supply the demands for choice beef in our larger cities," he added.

Wintering long yearlings of good breeding and quality on stalk fields and cheap hay or hulls and cottonseed meal and finishing on grass and meal for market in July or August will make greatest profits.

Beef cattle are a means for converting cheap feed into cash. Farmers who have cheap feed and feed it to good cattle bought right should make money.

"Buying both steers and feed even at present prices is strictly a gamble and is to be recommended with caution," he warned.

Mr. Burns advised feeding cottonseed meal instead of cotton seed because 1000 pounds of cottonseed meal is equal in feeding value to 170 to 200 pounds of cotton seed.

News-Age Herald Offer Rapidly Nearing Close

The Birmingham News and Age-Herald big bargain offer is drawing to a close. This was a special October offer, made to rural and star route box holders, with a special bargain price of $2.19 for a year's subscription to either The News or Age-Herald daily only, or $3.19 for The News or Age-Herald daily and Sunday. This offer is meeting with an enthusiastic response.

"We are indeed gratified at the response to this offer," The News-Age-Herald states. "In order that people living on rural and star routes may have the advantages of a big daily newspaper, the same as those living in larger towns and cities, believing that such a paper gives them informative and educational advantages for which they are anxious, we have during the past few years, made a similar Bargain Offer, but never before have the results been so gratifying. It looks as if every one wants the News or Age-Herald, and is rushing in the subscription before the expiration of the offer. This, of course, is the wise thing to do. There is only a short time left, and those who postpone mailing their subscription may put it off until it is too late. Our advice to those who have not already mailed the subscription is 'do it now.' Your neighbor has mailed his subscription and you and your family will enjoy The News or Age-Herald, with its excellent news columns, entertaining and instructive editorial features, the work of the highest paid writers and artists in the world, the farm and society departments, the market news, sports news, and many other features, just as much as he will. You are just as progressive as he is, so don't let him get ahead of you!

"Parents find that The News or Age-Herald not only serve to keep them abreast with State and World events, but that their children are also helped from a general informative standpoint, and from the standpoint of laying a foundation for the better understanding of school studies.

"This Special Bargain Offer is positively only to rural and star route box holders, and those living in towns where no News-Age-Herald carrier delivery is maintained." (Adv.)

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article was prepared by W. F. McFarland, of Florence, member of the Muscle Shoals Commission. Mr. McFarland is well qualified to write on the subject of fertilizer and agriculture, having had long experience in intensive farming. This article shows the advantage to the farmers of the South, to all interests of the South and of the nation, in the operation of Muscle Shoals for fertilizer production.)

Recently the Muscle Shoals commission visited a chemical plant where concentrated fertilizer containing 32 per cent of phosphoric acid, 16 per cent ammonia, and 16 per cent potash, was being produced. The process being used is patented but will be available to a lessee of Muscle Shoals on most favorable terms.

Muscle Shoals is more favorably situated for economic production of this concentrated fertilizer than the chemical plant visited, because cheaper power is available and all the heavy raw materials, coal, coke, limestone, sand, and phosphate rock, are located nearby.

This concentrated fertilizer can be manufactured at Muscle Shoals and sold to the farmers at not more than $2.20 per hundred pounds, f.o.b. One hundred pounds of this concentrated fertilizer contains the same amount of plant food as four hundred pounds of 8-4-4 commercial fertilizer which costs $1.20 per hundred pounds at present prices, or $24 per ton. One ton of the concentrated fertilizer will cost $44 and contains the same amount of plant food as four tons of the 8-4-4 commercial fertilizer costing $96.

The saving on each ton of concentrated fertilizer purchased would therefor amount to $52, plus a saving of 75 per cent of the freight charges. All figures on the saving to the farmer are based on the plant food content of the fertilizer. The plant food is the only part of the ton of fertilizer that has any value.

In order to illustrate the economic value of operating the Muscle Shoals properties in the production of concentrated fertilizer and other chemicals essential to successful operation, we call the reader's attention to the following facts:

The principal cause of the depressed condition of agriculture in the Southern cotton states is the one crop idea: Growing cotton to sell to get the money to buy the food and feed which should have been grown at home has brought disaster. To remedy this condition the amount of cotton which can be profitably marketed should be grown on a greatly reduced acreage under more intensive fertilization and cultivation. To accomplish this abundance of cheaper and better fertilizer is necessary:

Four hundred and fifty thousand tons of concentrated fertilizer can be produced under full capacity operation at Muscle Shoals when the additional power which can be developed from the storage water from Cove Creek dam becomes available. This amount of fertilizer will fertilize 6,000,000 acres at the rate of one hundred and fifty pounds per acre, and will double the yield of farm crops where the soil is properly prepared and cultivated.

The liberal use of cheaper concentrated fertilizer and better cultivation, will greatly reduce the production costs of the farmer. The saving in the cost of fertilizer and freight charges, the saving of the rent, the cost of preparing, planting and cultivation of 6,000,000 acres of land which could be profitably used for pasture and growing food and feed crops for home consumption, would soon bring prosperous conditions.

Employment

The employment benefits will not be confined to the Muscle Shoals district in the production of fertilizer and essential chemicals. Employment will be increased in the coal mines, at the coke ovens, and at the limestone quarries of Alabama, and in the phosphate rock area of Tennessee.

Full capacity operation at Muscle Shoals in the production of nitrogen and the phosphoric acid necessary to make a properly balanced fertilizer will require annually the following raw materials: 58,000 tons of coal, 212,000 tons of coke, 360,000 tons of limestone, 500,000 tons of phosphate rock, 100,000 tons of silica (clean sand), 64,000 tons of muriate of potash, and 85,000 tons of coal for the steam plant during the low water period which occurs each year in the Tennessee river. Total raw materials required—1,379,000 tons.

The employment benefits will be continuous, because there will be a ready demand for all the concentrated fertilizer that can be produced at Muscle Shoals on account of the low cost.

The employment benefits will not be confined to the worker who receives the pay envelope. Railroads will handle the enormous tonnage of raw materials and finished products; increasing the employment of railway workers, and employment will also be increased among those who produce the food, clothing, and other necessities of those who mine the coal, limestone and phosphate rock, make the coke and produce the finished fertilizer and other chemicals

The Muscle Shoals commission has unanimously agreed that the Muscle Shoals properties should be used primarily in the quantity production of concentrated fertilizer: that the best results can be attained through a private leas: that a farmers corporation should be given the preference in leasing; that the net proceeds from the lease and the sale of power should be used in financing the storage and distribution of the fertilizer produced, and for scientific research for the benefit of agriculture.

The benefits which can be derived from the operation of Muscle Shoals primarily in the production of concentrated fertilizer will be widespread.

The fertilizer can be economically shipped to every state in the union.

The benefits to agriculture will be reflected in every line of business.

Prompt settlement of the Muscle Shoals problem during the next session of Congress should be included in the plans for relief of the unemployed.

Our government developed a great natural resource at Muscle Shoals which belongs to the people of the Tennessee Valley and the South. Wilson Dam was built to supply power to operate the nitrate plants. After thirteen years of delay and poltical bickering, the people who own this great natural resource should assume leadership during the next session of congress in the settlement of this great problem in the interest of agriculture and the unemployed.

GOOD NEWS

HOUSEWIFE

The housewife has been called America's most thrifty and most extensive buyer, and correctly so. She is the usual buyer of the grocery supplies in the home, she selects the furniture and other household fixtures, she usually selects the color of the automobile for the family. At times she is a great factor in the choosing of men's wearing apparel, and is certainly a critic in that line. So, she has been correctly called America's Most Thrifty and Extensive Buyer.

To the housewife there is good news to be found in the advertisements of business concerns that are occupying space in the News week after week. Good news because there are bargains being offered, and bargains are the object of a most extensive and thorough search of every housewife. Watch carefully, each week, those spaces occupied by business concerns advertising clothing of all kinds, groceries and other items. The expression, "Thars gold in them hills," may ring true in some sections, but in this section it is, "There's bargains in the News."

Good news, not only for the housewife, but for everyone on whom rests the responsibility of buying. Look through the pages of this issue of the Chilton County News. There are not only bargains to be found in the advertisements, but every column carries live, wide-awake, informative reading material, from spot news to feature articles.

"All Saints Day" "All Fools Day" What Have You?

According to Thomas Paine: "The sublime and the ridiculous are often so nearly related, that it is difficult to class them separately. One step above the sublime makes the ridiculous, and one step above the ridiculous makes the sublime again."

Commonly we express the idea: "One step from the sublime to the ridiculous."

In ancient times, folks were more deferential than now; probably there was more time for such. Good folks not only went to Heaven after death, but the bereaved invariably had the satisfaction of beholding another bright star added to the firmament after each death.

A day was set aside to revere the memory of various good souls that had been deified. Then came confusion: there were not enough days. There was Saint Jonathan of the Gauls, St. Patrick of Ireland, St. Vitus of the dance, ad infinitum. Saints must not be overlooked by these good folks; neither were fools forgotten. It became necessary to appropriate a special day to take care of the situation. Accordingly, November first was set aside as "All Saints' Day", and April first was set aside as "All Fools' Day."

The evening preceding "All Saints' Day" was given over to various ceremonies in a worshipful way, and the as "All Hallows Eve", or "Hallowe'en."

If those good folks are allowed to behold from the spirit word, the miscarriage of their splendid plan to: Pay honor, where honor is due, there might be weeping, then it were best for the veil to be drawn.

Divorcee—Won't you permit your daughter to marry my son?

Bjones—No, but she can be a sister to him, if you wish.

Divorcee—Oh, dear Mr. Bjones! This is so sudden.

Mt. Pisgah News

I wish to call to your attention that on next Sunday afternoon, November 1st, our singing society will meet again. We are expecting help from Eastview, Samaria, Maple Springs and maybe others. We cordially invite everyone who can to come and help us. Your presence wil lbe greatly appreciated.

Music is the praise service of the church, a joy in the home, a passport to society. It conduces to culture, contributes to refinement and tends to elevate the heart, mind and soul. To have excellent music we must toil together, stay active and wide awake, to succeed in the race for knowledge. For knowledge is the gateway to eminence, a willing heart and active mind are the levers; perseverance the fulcrum and knowledge the power to overthrow the walls of ignorance.

There is joy in the race for knowledge especially in building our singing classes. One who does not enjoy good singing would not enjoy being in heaven, for we are told, there is singing in heaven. Some say, "Times are so gloomy, we are in no mood for singing. Here we should learn a lesson from Paul and Silas, who were beaten with many stripes and cast into prison with their feet fast in the stocks. At midnight they prayed and sang praises unto God and suddenly a great earthquake came and all the doors were opened and everyone's bonds were loosed. Let us sing that in this gloomy hour, with skies bedimmed by doubt, by hate, by fear. We can rejoice that good alone has power, can prove it true, and thus win heaven here.

We thank the editor for the space to advertise our society.

Secretary.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and have caused the great seal of the State to be affixed at the Captol, in the City of Montgomery, on this the 3rd day of September, 1931.

W. L. Sanders Writes Views On Bond Issue And County Agent

W. L. SANDERS
Member County Board of Education

To the Voters of Chilton County:

As the election of November 3rd is drawing near and two important questions are to be settled I wish to express my views on them.

First, we shall take the $25,000,000 Bond Issue and see if it is worthy of our support.

I do not believe it will be wise to borrow this large amount to spend on the highways and let so many other things of greater importance go lacking.

The first thing the state officials should have done was to make provisions to pay off its just obligations and by so doing might have gained the confidence of enough voters in Alabama to carry the Bond Issue.

But to the reverse—and to our regret—we hang our heads and call for a half term of school. Why?

All because the state could not pay her just obligations. Then why should we go to the polls on November 3rd, and increase our indebtedness when it looks like we are already on the brink of bankruptcy.

These Bonds, if voted in, will have to be paid some day and whenever that time comes the taxpayers will tremble.

It will be a great task for the people to pay their taxes this year and if we keep voting in more Bond Issues what can we expect in the future?

Now let us go to the polls on November 3rd and vote the Bond Issue down for the state's burdens are so great at present it cannot meet its just obligations.

Now a few words in regard to the County Agent. It appears to me that it would be taking a backward step to discontinue the county agent because he is the mediator between the farmer and the experiment station. He has in the past been a great help to the farmers of Chilton County, for he has given the facts direct from the experiment station.

Some will say the county agent has never benefitted them. This may be true, but if so it's all because they haven't called upon him

I've never heard of anyone seeking information of him but what he got it.

He helps the farmer get a market for his cream, chickens and eggs. He helps him get the best market price for his strawberries. He insists on getting a pure breed of livestock and will help to get them if called upon. He will help you cull your hens that do not lay, thereby reducing feed cost which means a greater profit to the poultryman.

He has carried his terracing machine into many sections of the county, laying off terraces for the farmers which has resulted in a great soil saving and better profit on the rolling land. I remember one lot of terraces the county agent run for Mr. E. C. Traywick—for I was flag carrier. Mr. Traywick said the terracing he did for him had been worth $50.00 because the work had been done right.

Doing things right, or in a practical way, is the real necessity of having a county agent. The theory of the county agent is not of his own, but is of men who have made experiments at a higher cost than most farmers can afford. Farmers have not the time to make experiments as do the institutions that are paid by the state or government.

Now if a part of our taxes go to support those experiment stations and we discontinue our county agent we lose the reward for which we have paid.

It seems that some are awfully worried about the salary paid the county agent, but never stop to think how small it is compared to that of the tax assessor, collector and some of the other officials.

Let us think of the county agent as a teacher for the farmer and compare him with the teachers of the county in the different schools.

Some of the teachers draw a salary of $200.00 per month for their service in one community, while our county agent's service reaches over the entire county. And the county pays him only one hundred dollars per month. There is quite a contrast in the salary as well as in the service.

The county agent works six days a week while the other works five.

It's all right to economize if started at the right place, but it wouldn't be very economical for a man to cut off his feet to keep from buying shoes.

So let us go to the polls on November 3rd and show somebody they have started at the wrong end to economize.

Yours for the County Agent and better farming,

W. L. SANDERS.

1918 --- Lest We Forget --- 1931

Wednesday, Nov. 11 --- Armistice Day

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 11th, 1918, (AP).—The Armistice between Germany, on the one hand, and the allied Governments, and the United States, on the other, has been signed. . . . . The World War will end this morning at 6 o'clock Washington time, 11 o'clock Paris time. . . . The Armistice was signed by the German representatives at midnight. . . . This announcement was made by the State Department at 2:50 o'clock this morning in the form: "The armistice has been signed. It was signed at 5 o'clock A. M. Paris time, (midnight, New York time) and hostilities will cease at 11 o'clock this morning, Paris time, (6 o'clock New York time). . . . .

In observance of this day we honor the memory of heroes whose sacrifice bears witness that there is character in humanity, ' ' ' faith in men, . . . courage in the world. . . . Let us read again the names of those who died for the preservation of the American tradition of Independence, . . . of spirit, . . . of thought, . . . of action. . . . As we review their deeds may we acquire in our own hearts some part of their valor. . . . May they live again in our renewal ofcourage. . . . We fail to live up to our heritage when we cease to pay tribute to those who gave their all in carrying through to victory in the dark days of the World War.

ALABAMA VOTES THUMBS DOWN ON BOND ISSUE

Partial Returns Point to Two To One Rejection; Victory For Governor

Alabama voters last night had apparently turned thumbs down on a proposed constitutional amendment for a $25,000,000 bond issue for construction of paved highways.

Returns from 43 out of 67 counties giving 648 boxes of the 2,115 in the State gave 13,918 votes for ratification of the amendment and 26,804 against.

"It is the answer of Alabama's voters to a proposal to pile another bonded indebtedness on the State while its other debts remain unpaid," was the interpretation placed by Gov. Miller Tuesday night on the result of the $25.-

STATE SCHOOLS GET $846,000 SAYS HARMAN

Coosa County Gets $4,345.97, Chilton County Receives $7,933.23, Report

Montgomery, Ala., Nov 3—The State of Alabama is ready to pay to the common schools of the State $846,000 of the $2,151,000 it owes them on obligations of last school year

Dr. A. F. Harman, State superintendent of schools, announced last night that letters notifying the county and city treasurers of school funds that he has been advised by State Treasurer S. H. Blan that the State Treasurer is ready to pay warrants held against the attendance fund, will be mailed at once.

The warrants against the attendance fund were issued last Spring, with warrants against other State funds due the cities and counties. In many instances the counties and cities borrowed money with these warrants as security while other counties, less fortunate, have been forced to hold the warrants to await such time as the State could afford to pay them.

Mt. Pleasant Defeats Baker Last Friday

The Mt. Pleasant basket ball quintet rode to an easy victory over the Baker five last Friday afternoon, on the Baker court, 31 to 4.

The game opened with Traywick, the stellar little forward for the winners, netting the ball for eight points the first three minutes of play. His running team mate, Burnett, accounted for 12 points for the game. Traywick was, however, the usual high scorer, getting 17 points to his credit for the game.

Littlejohn made a nifty crip shot for the other two markers.

Cecil Traywick, regular running guard for the winners, was out of the game, due to an injured knee. Melton filled his place in a creditable manner, breaking into Baker's clever pass work throughout the game, and with Parker at his usual position, the Baker team could not break through the defense. Their four points came by virtue of fouls.

The half closed with the count 25 to 1 The Union Grove team comes to Mt. Pleasant next Friday, November 6. This will be a close game. A large crowd is expected.

This offer will last through next Saturday, November 7th, and applies only to those who live and receive their paper on a rural route. CHAPTER LXI

The pressure of the American army in the great Meuse-Argonne offensive had profoundly impressed the enemy. October 3 Marshal Von Hindenburg sent the following letter to the German chancellor:

> The High Command insists on its demand of September 29, for the immediate forwarding of an offer of peace to our enemies . . . There is now no longer any possible hope of forcing peace upon the enemy. . . The situation grows more desperate every day and may force the High Command to grave decisions. . . ."

The chancellor yielded, and October 5 telegraphed, through the Swiss government, to President Wilson:

> "The German government requests the President of the United States to take in hand the restoration of peace, acquaint all belligerent states with this request, and invite them to send plenipotentiaries for opening negotiations. It accepts the program set forth by the President in his message to congress January 8, and in his later addresses, especially the speech of September 27, as a basis for peace negotiations.
> "With a view to avoiding further bloodshed, the German government requests the immediate conclusion of an armistice on land and water and in the air.
> "(Signed) Max, Prince von Bedan,
> "Imperial Chancellor."

The President's reply was not satisfactory to the German government and the exchange of notes continued until finally the Germans accepted the very frank statement by the President conveyed in a State department message October 23, that "the nations of the world do not and cannot trust the word of those who have hitherto been the masters of German policy," and that "the government of the United States cannot deal with any but veritable representatives of the German people, who have been assured of a genuine constitutional standing as the real rulers of Germany.

"If it must deal with the military masters and the monarchial autocrats of Germany now, or if it is likely to have to deal with them later in regard to the international obligations of the German empire, it must demand, not peace negotiations, but surrender."

Meanwhile, with these peace negotiations in progress, and with our own and allied offensive continuing to produce favorable results, it became more and more evident that the time soon must come when we should have to consider terms and conditions under which hostilities might cease. The discussion of armistice terms in a general way by the allies had in fact begun.

The enemy's most important defensive position on the Romagne heights was in our firm possession, and his final defeat was only a question of time. He had fought desperately to hold his ground, but had been compelled to give way steadily before our effective blows. We could have gone forward without special preparation and succeeded in driving the enemy from the field, but the situation led to the conclusion that his defeat could best be accomplished by one powerful stroke by a well organized offensive.

The difficult and continuous offensive from September 26 had been very trying on our troops and had resulted in a certain loss of cohesion. It was, therefore, deemed advisable to take a few days for the replacement of tired troops, the renewal of supplies, and the improvement of communications.

French Delay Attack.

October 28 was tentatively designated for the beginning of the next general advance, the fourth phase of the Meuse-Argonne offensive, but the French army, which was to support our attack on the left, could not get ready in time, so the attack of both armies was fixed for November 1.

In accordance with my instructions on October 16, two important preliminary operations were carried out during this period. (1) operations against the bois des Loges and Bois de Bourgogne to clear the woods east of the Aisne and north of the Aire and thus flank that part of the hostile line on the Asine, and (2) local operations to secure a suitable line of departure for the general attack.

During the Meuse-Argonne battle my personal quarters were on my train, which lay partially hidden in the woods on a spur near Souilly. While there I spent a portion of each day at official headquarters giving directions regarding operations and deciding other important questions. I usually occupied the rest of the day at the front in close touch with corps and divisions. Although I had now relinquished the immediate command of the First army, its activities and those of the Second army, carried out under my direction, required close supervision.

Farther west, our Second corps (Read), with the British Fourth army, was engaged October 17 south of Le Cateau in the Battle of the Selle. This corps, with the Thirtieth (Lewis) and Twenty-seventh (O'Ryan) division in line from right to left, crossed the Selle river and advanced four miles in the face of strong resistance, capturing 1,600 prisoners and 12 guns.

The main objective of our initial attack September 26 had been reached. Failing to capture it in our first attempt we had deliberately, systematically and doggedly stuck to the task in the face of many difficulties and discouragements.

CHAPTER LXII

The demands of incessant battle had compelled our divisions to fight to the limit of their capacity. Troops were held in line and pushed to the attack until deemed incapable of further effort because of casualties or exhaustion; artillery once engaged was seldom withdrawn. Many batteries fought until practically all the animals were casualties, leaving the guns to be towed out of line by motor trucks or by hand.

Our men as a whole showed unrivaled fortitude in this continuous fighting during inclement weather and under many disadvantages of position.

Consider Armistice Terms.

My diary records:

> "Paris, Monday, October 28, 1918. Met Marshal Foch and allied commanders at Senlis Friday to consider terms of armistice. Petain's views were stiffer than Marshal Haig's and mine more stringent than either.
> "Have been laid up with grip since Saturday."

At the opening of the conference Marshal Foch said in substance: "You are doubtless aware that the Germans are negotiating for an armistice through the intermediary of the American government, and declare themselves ready to accept the fourteen points of President Wilson as a basis."

He went on to say that he had called us together to obtain our views, and that he thought "the terms should be such as to render Germany powerless to recommence operations in case hostilities are resumed." One of his officers then read aloud from a newspaper the fourteen points.

Defers to British and French.

Foch then asked my opinion as to conditions that should be imposed, and I replied that as it was a matter of greater concern to both Great Britain and France than to the United States, and that as their armies had been engaged longer and had suffered more than ours, I thought it appropriate for Sir Douglas Haig and General Petain to express their views first.

Marshal Haig said in substance that the German army was far from being disintegrated and was still capable of withdrawing to a shorter front and making a stand against equal or greater forces. On the other hand, the allies were pretty well exhausted. The total shortage of men for the British and French armies, he said, was about 250,000 each, with none available to fill the gaps. The American army, he further said, was not yet complete, and some time must elapse before it would be large enough to relieve the diminishing allied armies. He thought the terms should be such that the Germans would not hesitate to accept them.

He then proposed immediate and complete evacuation of invaded Belgian and French territory; occupation by the allies of Alsace, Lorraine, and the fortresses of Metz and Strasbourg; restitution of all rolling stock seized by the Germans in France and Belgium, or its equivalent, and repatriation of inhabitants of invaded territory.

Marshal Foch then asked my views. I replied, in effect:

"The general view that an armistice should provide guarantees against a resumption of hostilities, give the allies a decided advantage, and be unfavorable to Germany in case hostilities should be resumed, meets with my approval. I think that the damage done by the war to the interests of the powers with which the United States is associated against Germany has been so great that there should be no tendency toward leniency.

"The present military situation is very favorable to the allies. The German forces since the beginning of the counter-offensive July 18 have been constantly in retreat and have not been able to recover since that time. The condition of the French and British armies can best be judged by the fact that they have been continuously on the offensive since then and that they are now attacking with much vigor.

"As to the American army, the part it has taken in the operations since July 18 has not been inconsiderable. It is constantly increasing in strength and training; its staffs, its services and its higher commanders have improved by experience, so there is every reason to suppose that the American army will be able to take the part expected of it in the event of resumption of hostilities. I therefore propose:

> "1. Evacuation of France and Belgium within 30 days and of all other foreign territory occupied by Germany without delay.
> "2. Withdrawal of the German armies from Alsace-Lorraine and occupation of those territories by the allied armies.
> "3. Withdrawal of German armies to the east of the Rhine and the possession of such bridgeheads on the eastern side in the Rhine by the allies as may be necessary to insure their control of that river.
> "4. Unrestricted transportation of the American army and its material across the seas.
> "5. Immediate repatriation of all nationals of foreign territory now or heretofore occupied during the war by Germany.
> "6. Surrender of all U-boats and U-boat bases to the control of a neutral power until their disposition is otherwise determined.
> "7. Return to France and Belgium of all railroad rolling stock that has been seized by Germany from those countries."

Marshal Foch expressed his thanks for what I had said, and added that while it was true the American army was still young, its spirit was splendid and it was tremendously increasing every day in efficiency and in numbers.

He then asked Marshal Haig whether, in view of what General Petain and I had said, he cared to modify his views on the terms of an armistice, to which Haig replied in the negative. The conference ended here with Marshal Foch's request that each of us submit in writing what we had proposed.

COTTON LAWS FUTILE

Passing laws to restrict cotton production is unconstitutional and futile, in the opinion of Harvie Jordan, general secretary of the American Cotton Association. He says:

"The agricultural classes of no nation have ever been benefited by governmental interference. The past two years' history of the complete collapse of the Farm Board's efforts to overcome and set aside the immutable trade laws of supply and demand are now well known."

Instead of depending on legislation or political panaceas for farm relief, Mr. Jordan urges farmers to voluntarily reduce their acreage of cotton and other crops of which there is now a surplus, and raise more food and feedstuffs next year.

This is sound advice. The farmer who raises his own food and stock feed need never suffer for the necessities of life, even if the prices of so-called "money-crops" are low. A good garden, a cow or two, some pigs and chickens, with home-raised feed in abundance, will make any farmer virtually independent of market conditions.

It is encouraging to note that more and more farmers are learning this important lesson. The adoption of a live-at-home plan would be worth more to any farmer than all the laws that might be enacted. Those who depend upon politicians for relief will be disappointed in the future as they have been in the past, and the sooner all farmers realize this fact the better off they will be.

ABOUT MONEY

Some facts about money may be of interest, although that commodity itself is rather scarce so far as most of us are concerned. Our word "dollar," by the way, is from the German term "thaler," a piece of money first coined in Bohemia about the year 1518.

The United States silver dollar was first minted in 1794. Its intrinsic value is less than half its face value, ás it contains only 412.5 grains of silver. The origin of the dollar mark ($) is not known with certainty.

The motto, "In God We Trust," first appeared on a bronze 2-cent piece in 1864, and since 1865 has been used on gold and silver coins. The eagle appeared on the first coins issued, and on most coins ever since. Coinage of silver dollars has practically ceased in recent years.

It may not be generally known that half-dollars, quarters and dimes are legal tender only for debts not exceeding ten dollars, while nickels and cents are legal tender only up to twenty-five cents. Any old kind of money would be accepted as legal tender in any amount just now, we imagine—especially on subscription accounts.

The Chilton County High School football tigers held a highly rated Lineville team to a 6-6 draw on the local gridiron last Friday afternoon.

In the recent national and county elections, the returns from which are just coming in, the Republican party seems to have won by a landslide.

Mr. Curtis Guy of Birmingham was among the visitors to Clanton last Tuesday. He visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Guy, of Mt. Creek, Ala.

The Hallowe'en party which was held last Friday evening at the local high school was a decided success. The party which was sponsored by the local P.T. A. was well attended and over $45.00 was cleared.

Rudolph Scarborough was seriously injured in an automobile accident which took place just south of Clanton on the Main highway last Saturday afternoon.

SEVEN BEST FEEDS FOR LIVE STOCK

Says the Progressive Farmer:

"The seven feed essentials for livestock are: water, air, protein, carbohydrates, fats, mineral matter, and vitamins.

"Water is so plentiful, free, and so well understood—although often not fully appreciated—that it can be passed over briefly. Water is one of the most important animal féeds. It should be supplied clean, fresh, an doften by any livestock farmer wishing to reduce the feeding cost of his ration to a minimum. The oftener livestock drink, the more they drink. To allow an animal to fill up only once or twice a day prevents the maximum consumption of water and the prevention of this 'nearly free feed' from reducing the feed bill to the fullest extent. It often pays to warm water for livestock feeding in extremely cold weather."

There are two special subjects to be discussed at the Methodist church next Sunday. At 11 A. M. the subject is "The Prince of Peace," and at seven o'clock, "Don't Worry." We extend an invitation to all enlisted men to worship with us. It matters not when and where you served you should hear this message. If you are inclined to worry about things, be sure to worship with us Sunday night.

We are looking for you at Sunday school at 9:45. We have good teachers, a well organized school and plenty of heat to keep you warm. Our church is commodious, and for you we have a cordial welcome.

Three were united with our church last Sunday, Miss Lona Thompson, Mrs. E. C. Powell and Ront Winston Powell. We have a large place for these new members.

PAUL IN EPHESUS
Acts 19:8-20

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Begin your reading with Acts 18:18 and continue through chapter 19. Note the two similar incidents where a total of thirteen who had known only the baptism of John enter into the larger experience in Christian truth when they know about Him, the Holy Spirit. Paul returned to Ephesus after having been to Antioch that he might report on the second missionary journey.

Three years were now spent in Ephesus as the third journey is entered upon. After three months the school of Tyrannus became the general meeting place. Fine results came from the two years of preaching and teaching at that center. In fact, many points in the surrounding country were reached and these places were later addressed by both Paul and John in their letters.

The bonfire at Ephesus revealed the growing influence that Paul gained over the superstitious who used all sorts of charms to try and offset evil. It was quite like the rabbit's foot idea with some today, and there are still many who give up good money to have a palmist or other fortune teller hoodwink them. Multitudes brought their charms and soothsaying books for the fire and about $1000,000 worth was destroyed.

All this cut into the sale of the images of Diana, whose massive temple and licentious worship was dominant in Ephesus. The mkers of these idols had their part in starting the uproar as the people rushed to the open temple and shouted themselves hoarse as they cried "Great is Diana of the Ephesians." Paul wanted to talk to the crowd but cooler minds dissuaded him and Paul decided to work elsewhere.

OUR SCOUT TROOPS TO ENTER 'BLOUNT EFFICIENCY CONTEST'

The 'Blount Efficiency Contest' for Boy Scouts in the Central Alabama Area Council began November 1st The troop in the Council which has secured the largest number of points as of May 1st next year—an interval of six months—will be the first to receive the beautiful silver loving cup offered by Mr. Roberts Blount. ational Representative of the local Boy Scout Council. Local Boy Scout troops will have an active part in this contest and C. E Stapp, Chairman of this District feels confident that one of our troops will merit the first award. This contest will be conducted each six months until some troop wins the cup three times in succession, which gives the troop the cup as its permanent possession. Mr. Blount will present the cup for the first time at the Boy Scout Jamboree next year.

Yesterday Scoutmasters of this district received a personal letter from John J. Sigwald, Scout Executive, which enclosed the report blank for the month of November. Points are to be given for meeting regularly, wearing the Scout uniform, registering new Scouts, for activity in day and overnight hikes, participation in individual, patrol and troop Good Turns and advancement before the local Court of Honor.

The Council office has a large chart on its walls which will give the progressive points month by month of each troop. Reports must be entered not later than the 10th of each month if the troop is to receive credit for activities during the past month

With the Scoutcraft Jamboree in May calling on the boys for physical participation in many events it is very appropriate that this type of troop efficiency contest should run each month calling for the Scoutmaster and Scouts to be continuously 'on their toes.'

Forest Fires Are Enemies Of Trees

By Lyle Brown, Auburn, Forester

While visiting the woods where fire has been allowed to go through even occasionally during the lifetime of the trees that occupy the land just take a look at the butts of these trees and note the yawning fire scars that are seriously holding in check the growth of these trees and which will render almost worthless the "butt cut" when harvested.

Limbs and young trees that are naturally shaded out in the woods die and fall to the ground. Many of these, together with the "lightwood knots," will be found lying against the base of the larger trees; and, when fire creeps thru the woods, they kindle a hot flame against them. As they burn out they leave a big dead spot, frequently half way around the tree. Rot enters and works its way up into the tree to make a big hole for a rabbit and a worthless butt log for a farmer. When these scars are formed on young trees they frequently grow up so that they are not noticeable from the outside, but when cut for timber a rotten center tells the story.

In addition to scarring these older trees fires burn the cover of humus which is laid down each fall and winter. Therefore, fire robs the trees of a great deal of moisture, which is held for the trees by this blanket over the soil, and destroys the plant food to be furnished by this cover of leaves and show when it decays.

A careful study of forest fires reveals only harm and destruction. They ruin trees, they rob the soil, they cheat the owner of trees and land.

Why Did Hoover Wait?

President Hoover called an impressive delegation of both Republican and Democratic Congressmen to Washington to hear his outline of a legislative program for arresting the banking troubles that have become manifest as a natural consequence of the industrial and economic depression. Obviously this was done for the purpose of assuring himself of a non-partizan approval of his ideas. Some curiosity has been displayed as to why the President thought such a gathering necessary.

It would seem to be perfectly plain that no political faction would oppose any program that was demonstratably of value in improving the existing situation, and it must, of course, be assumed that the President believes that his suggestions would have this effect. There is nothing inherently political in the extension of the rediscount privilege of the Reserve Banks to securities of undoubted value or to providing further capital for the Federal Land Banks, or even to the tentative proposal of bringing into being an organization similar to the War Finance Corporation to reinforce the banks' revolving fund, which he suggested. The value of these expedients is something for the economists to determine. If they are wise they will be accepted. If they are otherwise they will undoubtedly be modified by Congress. In neither event can politics have anything to do with the decision. Nobody is going to, at such a time as this, either accept or object to the proposals because they emanated from the President of the United States.

An interesting element of the situation is that the President's decision to have Congress legislate on these matters shows a seeming discrepancy between such action and what has been accepted as the President's position in the past that governmental enactments could not correct the business malady. For example, the President informed the Indiana Republican Association last June in a speech that "there is no sudden stroke of either governmental or private action which can dissolve these world difficulties." He seemed to have the same idea when he addressed the annual convention of the American Bankers' Association at Cleveland a year ago, for he told the bankers that he had never believed that our form of government could satisfactorily solve economic problems by direct action, and added "that government can and must cure abuses. What the government can do best is to encourage and assist in the creation of institutions controlled by our citizens and evolved by themselves from their own needs and their own experience and directed in a sense of trusteeship of public interest."

If the President's program will produce the loosening of frozen credits and so induce the resumption of the revolution of the wheels of business—and everybody hopes that these things can be brought about—it is to be regretted that he did not advance the plan when he was talking about these things last year. That the frozen credits were in his mind then is evidenced from the context of his speech to the bankers, for among other things he said, comparing the present depression with that of 1922, "our difficulties at that time were far more severe than they are at present. The commercial banks particularly were sufferers from a large amount of frozen credits, and enjoyed nothing to compare with the comfortable liquidity that prevails today."

However, if he has finally found the method of breaking the credit dam the general verdict will be one of satisfaction rather than of criticism because he waited so long to enunciate the formula.

Editors Renew Fight

Continuing its long fight against the encroachment of the government upon private business, the National Editorial Association recently launched a new campaign, one feature of which is furnishing members attractive colored stickers bearing the words:

"Government in business cuts the heart out of private enterprise and kills individual effort."

Circulars containing arguments against government operation of business enterprises are also being widely distributed by the Association, and members are asked to aid in the fight for the freedom of private business by calling attention to the injustice of using the taxpayer's money to set up government subsidized and tax free enterprises to compete with him. The circular says:

"The government seems to have embarked more and more into socialistic experiments that have been mighty expensive, as indicated by the Federal Farm Board's costly experiments in marketing grain, cotton and other products, and the losses experienced in Michigan in the manufacture of cement by convict labor. The time has now arrived when publishers should point out to their constituency the danger of government encroachments upon private business, which have become so outstanding that the life of our nation is threatened."

In this campaign the National Editorial Association is fighting for every legitimate private business in the country, and it should have the support of everyone who believes in Americanism, as opposed to Socialism, Communism and other isms which seek to destroy our national structure.

PAST-PRESENT-FUTURE
IN CHILTON COUNTY

To many, the fact that the election set for last Tuesday is over, is quite a relief. To some it is a disappointment while to others it is a pleasant thought, that is, speaking of the results.

I have heard many persons, even after the election was over Tuesday night, ask the question, "Why did they have to call an election about the county agent?" Many times that same question came into my mind, but knowing the conditions, it was not difficult to understand.

To me, the result of this election in regard to our County Agency Work is a pleasant thought, although I have listened attentively to many persons who wished to argue against the office, telling of their various reasons for wishing to do away with it, none of which I really agreed with. I was pleased to note that Clanton went over strong in favor of the work, as did Maplesville, Stanton, Mullins, Isabella, Verbena, Kincheon, Cooper, Providence near Jemison, and Providence east of Clanton, and others.

In my mind, it is hoped that this result will end the belliaching 'some citizens and tax payers' have been doing in regard to the County Agent Work here. It should and if those who have the say-so in such matters are broadminded, it will.

However, now that it is decided that the County Farm Agent is to be retained, then I have several ideas I am going to suggest to the man holding the place. These ideas in my opinion, are good, and have come to me from those persons I have so often heard arguing the question.

Frankly, I was somewhat surprised to see the count on the box at Jemison. With a strawberry association there that brought money into the surrounding country this past season and great strides being made in the agricultural line there, it is difficult to understand why the vote resulted as it did. However, possibly some of the older politicians could explain that matter.

Heard the following conversation took place between two men the other day: One said, "All Stapp does is to teach these young Republican boys." The reply he received was this. "Well, that's all right. Let him teach them something and then they'll be Democrats. It's better to try to teach a young person than to try to change an old one, ain't it?"

I note that this county will receive something over seven thousand dollars for educational funds from the state right away. This money is not to be used for this year's work, as it will be applied on a $15,000 loan made by the educational system of this county to pay items last year. In fact it is a part of last year's appropriations, or warrants, just now being paid by the state, according to Buford Lwrence, county superintendent that will make our educational department just that much less in debt.

Something tells me that there is no reason for worry in regard to our school situation, as I believe that the schools will continue on, although it is true that it will mean a great sacrifice on the part of the educational employees. That fact should be recognized by everyone.

The Capture of Yorktown

The hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown has just been made the occasion of an A-1 celebration. The President of the United States on the U. S. S. Arkansas headed a naval procession that was participated in by French ships. On shore the atmosphere of patriotism was rampant. In reenacting the surrender to Washington all the glories of Revolutionary America were emphasized.

The George Washington Bicentennial celebration will be formally opened on February 22, and for nine long months exercises and ceremonies will be staged in Washington and in every part of the United States. The whole American Nation is to be immersed in a tremendous patriotic wash-up. And it won't be confined to Saturday nights either.

Undoubtedly the Nation is ready and the time is ripe for a renaissance of those heroic days when the people did not hesitate to offer their lives in order that they might be Freemen.

Honey Mush

There is a lot of hokum being printed throughout the country advising people to use concoctions of honey in automobile radiators. The Department of Agriculture says that it takes two parts of honey to one part of water to prevent freezing at zero, and the solution does not circulate readily at low temperatures in automobile radiators. Better stick to your glycerine and alcohol, and eat your honey—on cakes and waffles.

Stop Skidding and Slewing

Improperly adjusted brakes often cause a number of mechanical ills, according to W. T. Palmer, an official of the company making Rasco brake linings. Among them are warped brake drums, front wheel alignment trouble, spring breakage and bent axles.

"In addition to the safety promoted by properly adjusted brakes in order to forestall skidding and slewing, brake neglect frequently costs the car owner a great deal more in garage bills than regular inspection and care of his brakes would amount to," Mr. Palmer says.

"Four-wheel brakes, while considerably more powerful than the formerly used two-wheel brake, require extra attention in order to keep them in proper repair and adjustment. The car having a tight front brake on the left wheel and a loose brake on the right front wheel may bring about wheel alignment problems in addition to causing skidding on wet pavements and dangerous sudden twisting into oncoming traffic.

"Efficient brake inspection at a reputable service station usually costs nothing and it may save thousands of dollars and weary weeks in a hospital. Periodical brake care is only a trifling tap on the family budget; an automobile accident is a wallop that may knock it out for years and cause endless misery."

Letters To The Editor

BIBLE HAS REMEDY FOR HARD TIMES

Editor, Chilton County News:

Please allow me a little space in your paper. Hard times have been the cry so long that everyone, I believe, is wishing for a change of mental diet. Everyone has an idea to express about the cause of the hard times, but most people stop there with an apathetic attitude of helplessness and think they can do nothing to hasten the return of better times. Greed, selfishness, wickedness, indifference and carelessness have all had their part in the cause of the present situation. There is a supreme remedy for the situation in the Bible. It is expressed in Isaiah 55:7, in these words:

"Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and He will have mercy; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon."

Even though warning and exhortation is so faithfully given from the pulpit, over radio and through Christian literature, and above all—the Bible is in reach of the majority of the people; our nation is not wholly the Christian nation that it should be, could be, and has the name of being.

In studying the Bible, we read that in all ages where God's people forgot Him and went into wickedness, they got into trouble. If they repented and turned from their evil ways, God forgave them and brought them out of their troubles. The Bible is full of such instances—full of promises of mercy and blessing to the person or nation that turns from sin to the Lord, and walks righteously.

Since it takes individuals to make up a nation, it will take repentant individuals to make up a repentant nation. The humble, consistent, righteous man is the happy man, whatever his surrounding situation; so with the nation. If every person will search his own heart, repent of the wickedness, indifference or carelessness which he finds there and consistently live the Golden Rule, God will hear and answer his cry for mercy; and again—so with the nation.

Alabama Voters Thumbs Down On Bond Issue

000,000 bond issue vote when informed of it by The Advertiser.

Majority of Two to One

Barring an unexpected heavy vote in some of the counties unreported and a change in the trend of some from which only a few votes were reported Tuesday night, the proposal seemed defeated by a majority of about two to one.

In the two most populous counties, Jefferson (Birmingham) and Mobile, the vote was overwhelmingly against it. Montgomery County with two rural precincts missing, showed a margin of 55 votes for ratification.

Voting throughout the State was extremely light, with probably not more than 75,000 votes cast out of nearly 300,000 in the State, indicating the lack of interest in the proposal.

Tuscaloosa, Houston, Morgan, Madison, and Etowah, all populous counties joined Jefferson and Mobile in piling up heavy majorities against the amendment, returning from two to one to four to one majorities against the proposal. Cullman County piled up a 14 to 1 vote against the bonds.

Many of the smaller counties, early returns showed, favored the measure which would have guaranteed $275,000 in paving for each county.

Counties Against It

Counties, early returns indicated had voted against the issue included: Autauga, Bibb, Cherokee, Chilton, Clay, Colbert, Covington, Crenshaw, Cullman, Elmore, Escambia, Etowah, Geneva, Houston, Jefferson, Lamar, Lauderdale, Lawrence, Madison, Mobile, Morgan, Pickens, Pike, Shelby, Tuscaloosa, Walker—26.

Counties giving majorities for the issue: Blount, Bullock, Calhoun, Conecuh, Chambers, Dallas, Hale, Limestone, Lee, Marion, Monroe, Montgomery, St. Clair, Sumter, Tallapoosa, Winston, Greene—17.

In some of the counties in both lists only one or two boxes had been reported, and these were close enough for a shift in trend to be made either way.

Experienced politicians, however, either smiled and looked at the result or shook their heads, but agreed that the issue was defeated and some indicated they believed the ratio of defeat would be increased with laggard boxes.

NEW WAYS OF BEATING THE DEPRESSION

Nothing is more dangerous in business than to assume that there is nothing new on the horizon, suggests Dr. Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, in his latest comment on the depression.

"Do you think things stand still in a depression?" he asks in the American Magazine. "Do you think it's just a matter of standing by and waiting for better times? If you do you may have a long wait before better times hit you. For a depression is just the time when things happen to business with increased speed."

Every business slump, it appears, has been the signal for new inventions, new methods of doing business, even new industries. And the men who were able to see what these new inventions meant in terms of their own jobs, who sensed the significance of these new ideas, who saw the possibilities of these new industries, were the men who got ahead during the depressions and went on to leadership in the new days of prosperity that followed.

Today history is repeating itself, Dr. Klein declares. "And if you want more money or a better job or increased business," he adds, "then strap on your watch and keep an eye on what old Father Time is doing. Make him work for you, because if you don't, he's pretty likely to work against you.

"Look what he's doing now. He's changing the sales map of the world with the aid of constantly improving transportation and communication facilities. He's changing the whole system of marketing, with new ideas in merchandising, chain stores, cooperatives, new installment systems. He's opening up all sorts of magic possibilities in the field of production, through the work of efficiency engineers, research workers and chemists."

Organized War On Rats Is Planned

Rats by the thousands are scheduled for extermination this fall. They will not be allowed to feast upon and destroy much of the big crop of things to eat made and being stored by farmers.

W. A. Ruffin, extension entomologist at Auburn and Roy Moore, leader in rat control for the U. S. Biological Survey in Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana are state leaders in rat destruction. They are working with the county agents and teachers of vocational agriculture in their respective counties with a view to conducting town and county rat-killing campaigns.

Several towns in Alabama put on rat poisoning campaigns last year and it is expected that a greater number will do so this winter. It is very probable also that several county-wide rural campaigns will be conducted as a means of reducing rat infestations on farms and plantations.

The campaigns are conducted under a cooperative arrangement in which the city or other cooperating agency purchases the bait materials used, while county agents, teachers of vocational agriculture, and the U. S. Biological Survey furnish personal supervision without cost. Experience in controlling rats has indicated the value of poisoning campaigns in which effective baits are applied on all infested premises in a given area under trained supervision.

Many Alabama towns and communities will conduct effective rat-killing campaigns this year, Mr. Ruffin said.

DEATH CALLS AWAY JOHN LITTLETON, COLLINS CHAPEL

The Death Angel again visited our community and severed the life cord of one of our dear friends. This friend was Mr. John Littleton. Mr. Littleton had lived in and near the Collins Chapel community most of his life. He was one of the oldest members living here could remember much of our community when it was not what it is today. He has been influential in making our community what it is today.

Mr. Littleton was born December 12, 1859. He died Friday night, October 29, 1931, at 10 p.m. Had he lived until December 12, 1931, he would have been 72 years old. Mr. Littleton is certainly going to be missed in our community, because he was a friend to all. For to know him was to love him. A true and faithful husband and father.

Mr. Littleton is survived by his wife, three daughters, two sons and eighteen grandchildren.

D. W. Haskew

The Lord was looking down from his throne, and he saw a strange thing taking place among the children of men. His servant, the one whom he had called to preach his gospel, was out in search of funds with which to extend the borders of his kingdom. God saw this messenger as he approached a church member and asked for a donation to a righteous cause. He heard the man say, "I have nothing that I can give." Shortly after this statement this same church member walked up to a cold drink stand, and ordered a Coca-Cola, he drank it, down. Then he bought two packages of cigarettes, and paying for his purchases, he walked out smoking like a freight train. When people think more of God than they do of tobacco, they will pay to the church before they buy things to smoke and chew. Chilton County has many men and women in it who pay twelve dollars a year for snuff and tobacco, and less than five dollars to the church. Surely, the good Lord wonders at our folly.

I was walking down the side walk of a certain city in Alabama, and came upon a grocery dealer, standing on the side walk. He had a bill folder under his arm, and on his face there was an expression that indicated that he was sour with the world. I said to him, "Friend, why all this golom?" He replied, "Do you see that man walking yonder?" "Certainly" said I. "That fellow owes me for three months grocery bills, and he can write a check for a thousand dollars and it would be good, and yet he refuses to pay me." Then he added, "He is sure pay but he is slow pay." That kind of dishonesty borders close to actual stealing. When a church, when a club, when a business house, when an individual, defers a payment, when it can be paid, honesty tells me that a legal interest is due. The most of us are sorry for a man who owes a debt and can not pay it, but we have little sympathy for those who owe and can pay and then will not. When you owe a thing, walk up and pay for it when it is due. If you are sure pay, for heaven's sake do not spoil it all by being slow pay.

Many years ago I went out with a company of men to muddy a pond. We shoved our way through briars and rubbish, and finally reached the edge of the water. One of the fellows stepped off into the water and went down to where his head was all that could be seen. We expressed surprise, and informed him that we did not think that the water would be that deep. He told us that the water was not so deep, but the mud seemed to have no bottom. He squirmed about in the water and mud for a few moments and then said to us, "Fellows, you will have to pull me out." When he was safe on the shore we decided that we could get along without the mud cats in that pond. Since that day I have seen hundreds of men jump into the awful pond of debt. They hoped to bring up many good fish, but they were doomed to disappointment. There is no bottom to the pond of debt. Many jump into it and flounder about for years and then go down. Very few are ever able to get out when they get in. Friends, let me give you a word of good advice, "Stay out of debt." You may strike it hard for a short time, but in the long run you will benefit by this decision.

I was standing on the side walk and close to me were two men in a heated discussion. I did not want to make their business my business, but I could not help hearing what they were talking about. One of the men was a merchant, the other looked to be a farmer. The merchant was trying to collect a bill past due. The two men parted, and then the one who owed the bill was heard to say, "He wants me to pay him, and that is his worry." I inferred from the expression used that the man was not concerned about the debt that he owed. Not many days ago a man in Clanton met me and this is what he said, "Brother Haskew, I owe money and I can not pay it. I have tried everywhere for work and I can not find it, and I just do not know what I am going to do. I am losing my appetite, I can not sleep, can't you tell me what to do?" When a man is in the pond of debt he is in an awful bog. Friends, I want to say to you again, "Stay out of debt." If you are in debt be sure that you do not dismiss it as a matter of no weight. Get out of debt as soon as you can and then stay out.

A white man was seen in a public gathering. His clothes were rather shabby. He was renting land and his calloused hands indicated that he was working hard. The summer sun had parched his brow. Twelve o'clock came and the crowd dispersed for the noon meal, but this man walked the street until time to go home. He told me this short story, "Parson, I am hitting it hard. My wife and I are saving all we can. We are doing without many things that we need, and we are going to buy us a place with our savings." That winter, this farmer took the money he had made and saved, and bought a home for himself and that brave little woman who had walked by his side. God bless the men and women of that type. It is better to wear rags and eat bread and drink water and be out of debt, than it is to wear silk and broadcloth and be in debt. May God give us more sure enough honest men and women. Thrice, I would tell you to stay out of debt. Work hard, practice economy, save your money and pay as you go. The debt system, the credit system, in our country is the greatest curse of our day. It makes servants and slaves out of many a good man.

THE NEW PROMOTION PLAN OF THE BAPTISTS

The new promotion plan of the Baptist Denomination is unique in that it seeks to provide for the needs of the local churches first.

In the every member canvass that will be put on in all churches of the Southern States, November 29th thru December 6th, the first idea is to get a living budget subscribed for the local churches, which, of course includes the pastors' salary.

The denominations hope to raise $31,000,000 for local church expense and $9,000,000 for missions, education and benevolence. In addition to this they hope to enlist one million tithers during 1932.

It is said that Pastors and Laymen are alike pleased with the plan and that more enthusiasm is being shown than with any movement the Baptist have known in recent years.

The district associations have been organized and now the local churches are preparing for the canvass. In many churches classes are being taught in Stewardship and the Pastors and Deacons of the local churches are receiving envelopes and canvass cards which will be simultaneously used in all churches on the canvass date—November 29th-December 6th.

Plain bacon sandwiches can be put together in a very few minutes when time is short and other fillings are unavailable.

The kitchen is, above all else, a place to prepare and serve food. Limit it to this use if possible, and arrange for laundering and such work to be done in another place.

Cut raw potato will sometimes remove a mud spot from black silks of firm weave. The thin film of starch left when the potato has dried can be brushed off. This treatment leaves a spot on all but black materials.

Corn meal may be substituted for a part or all of the wheat flour in many recipes for quick breads, muffins, griddlecakes, and cookies, using a scant cup of meal for a level cup of flour, baking more slowly and longer, and dropping rather than rolling out biscuits.

Cottage cheese is good in a great many ways. Serve it with rich cream and a little salt, or with sugar, and cream or whole milk. Try combining it with pears, peaches, or other fresh fruits; raisins, cut dates, or figs; brown sugar, maple sugar or sirup, honey, jam, or marmalade; or chopped fruits. You can mix cottage cheese with broken nut meats, chopped pimientos, finely cut green peppers, diced cucumbers, or other crisp vegetables. Horseradish onion juice and parsely make a good combination with cottage cheese.

THOMAS A. EDISON

Since the death of Thomas A. Edison on October 18, many thousands of articles dealing with his life and work have been published. The tributes paid to his genius by leaders all over the world have been unprecedented. And he deserved them all, and more.

To Edison came the satisfaction of seeing his inventions revolutionize the conditions under which mankind lives and works and plays. His most important invention was the incandescent light in 1879, which made possible the electrical industry. He invented the phonograph in 1876, and was a pioneer in developing motion pictures. Nearly 1,200 inventions were the product of his fertile brain.

Edison had not more than two or three months of schooling, but received some early instruction from his mother. Aside from this, he was self-taught, and remained a student thruout his 84 years. The results of his tireless energy and infinite patience can not be measured, but it is safe to say that he did more for the advancement of civilization than any other man who ever lived.

Mt. Pisgah News

On last Sunday afternoon, November the 1st, at two o'clock, our singing society was called to order by our presidetn, Mr. Jake Henley. Prayer by Rev. Ollie Hayes. Mr. Henley directed a few songs while the committee was arranging the program.

Directors for the afternoon were Dr. Williams, Mr. Jake Henley, Mr. Tom Wells, Rev. Ollie Hayes, Mr. Cornelius Hand and Prof. J. M. Williams; organists were Miss Birdie Edwards. Closing prayer was by Mr. G. W. Edwards. The singing was fine. Visitors were from Eastview, Clanton, Maple Springs, Samaria, Highland, Bethsalem, Liberty Hill, Pleasant Valley and Floyd. We were very glad to have you all with us, and welcome you back every first Sunday afternoon. Your presence and help is a great encouragement to us to press forward for a better singing class.

All who were not at the debate here Sunday night missed hearing some fine speaking. The subject was, Resolved That the bootlegger is worse than the booze buyer. Affirmative, Mr. Eugene Aldridge and Rev. Ollie Hayes; negative, Mr. Dave Adams and Mr. Elmer Hayes. All four made some fine points. Mr. Adams made a beautiful word picture of the cross of Christ, that one full of booze can't look to that cross, and may lose his last chance. Also with two ears of corn, one yellow, with a few white grains and the other ear white, he proved traits to be hereditary.

Mr. Elmer Hayes told in an eloquent way how the drinker starves his family, has no respect for the sabbath and that the boy gets his first drink from the drinker.

Mr. Eugene Aldridge makes plain that the bootlegger is dishonest, tempts the appetite of those who would quit drinking and that the government works harder after the bootlegger.

Rev. Ollie Hayes makes it plain that the bootlegger both drinks and sells, is guilty of all the bad things that go with booze and is responsible for all the trouble caused by booze. I've only mentioned a few of the things each speaker made plain. I'm afraid I'm calling for too much space. I believe such speeches will be uplifting, for how can a man or boy touch booze after hearing such talks?

There will be another debate here Saturday night, November 7th, at seven o'clock. Subject: Resolve that the Prohibition Law is a benefit to the United States. We invite all who can to come and be with us.

Respectfully,
BIRDIE EDWARDS.

PEOPLES TELEPHONE COMPANY ELECTS OFFICERS SATURDAY

At the annual meeting of the Peoples Telephone Company, held at the courthouse last Saturday afternoon, new officers and Board of Directors were elected. Jesse Baker was elected president, and T. E. Wyatt was re-elected secretary-treasurer. One change was made in the Board of Directors; the place held last year by Lee Popwell was filled by the election of J. P. Jackson. The other two members of the board who were re-elected are: James Mose Robinson and E. H. Mims.

The meeting last Saturday afternoon had to be set back over an hour on account of the farmers meeting at the courthouse, and was therefore not very well attended. A number of people had to go home before the farmers meeting adjourned. However, a good interest in the telephone business was manifest in the meeting.

The Board of Directors held a meeting Monday afternoon, and the matter of an operator for the coming year was considered. Six people had placed their bids with the secretary, all of which were taken under consideration by the Board. In the mind of the Board, the best and most feasible proposition was made by the present operator, Mr. A. L. Giles.

A proposition is being considered of moving the switchboard to new quarters, and at present it seems that such removal will be to the interest of better service to the patrons of the company. Complete plans for this have not as yet been worked out, however, it is almost certain that the switchboard will be moved between this and the first of the year.

The Board of Directors desire to give the very best service possible considering the condition of the system. Not much work can be done toward repairing just now, but what money that is collected will be used to the best advantage that it can. Phoneholders are urged to pay their central fees as early as possible, as funds are needed to start off the new year. The company does not owe a penny, but there are no funds in the treasury to start off the new year.

T. E. WYATT, Secretary.

Isabella Home Ec. Club Met Oct. 26th

The Home Economics Club of Isabella High School met October 26 for its program which consists of our club song, sung by the club, and recitations by different members of the club. It was decided that Myrtle Durbin should give our creed and Gertie Mae Owen our aims and accomplishments for the annual banquet, which will be December 4th.

The Senior II Class in Home Economics is studying a very interesting unit, Child Development. The first period of our home economics class is given to the children from grades one to four. We teach them rhythm and how to play different games. Each girl gave something in the way of blocks, sacks for tents and hammocks, and tires for the boys to roll. We hope to have permanent playground equipment such as sand piles, etc. We have had three weeks of this study and find it very interesting.

Goodyear Puts On Fine Radio Program

Pioneers in making the world "deep harmony" conscious, the members of the new Goodyear Quartet, to be heard every Tuesday and Saturday night beginning October 31, over a nationwide N. B. C. network, also can trace their growth as headliners along with the growth of radio.

It was back in 1918 that Lewis James and Wilfred Glenn, still members of the quartet, joined forces with Elliot Shaw and Charles Hart, to make up what was to become the most famous men's singing organization in the United States if not in the world. They then were known as the Shannon Quartet and prior to making their entry into radio they had distinguished themselves as recording artists. In the first broadcast ever given in the New York district by artists themselves this same Shannon Quartet was heard from the Westinghouse Factory in Newark, N. J. This was in October, 1921, over the station which was later to become WJZ.

Frank Black, arranger and pianist, joined the quartet in 1925, and James Melton, who had met with success in appearances with Roxy, came into the group in 1927. Because of Black's inclusion in almost all of the trips made by the quartet, it has come to be referred to as the only quartet in the country made up of five members. Will Rogers referred to it sometime ago as "the only quartet in the world that carried a spare."

Phil Dewey, baritone and newest member of the quartet, replaced Elliott Shaw when the latter retired some weeks ago.

Fire Dept. Receives Three Calls Recently

The volunteer fire department of Clanton had a busy time for awhile last week, answering alarms. Three alarms came in, two of them in one day.

The home of Leonard Williams in Clanton was slightly damaged by fire last Thursday morning, on the roof. The blaze was soon extinguished by the firemen.

The home on Second Avenue, North, belonging to William Patterson, and occupied by the family of Fred Holcombe was almost destroyed Wednesday night of last week. It was stated that no one was at home at the time, and it was not until the house was burning furiously, that the blaze was discovered shortly after midnight. Several hose lines were stretched by firemen, in extinguishing the blaze and protecting nearby homes at the same time. The house and furniture became practically a total loss. Good work was done in preventing the spread of the flames.

Dry weeds, rubbish and wooden slabs, became ignited last Thursday about noon, near the Seventh Day Adventist Tabernacle, and the fire department was called out to prevent further damage by the fast spreading flames. Short work was made of this.

The home of Charlie Cox, west of Clanton on the Lay Dam road, its contents, a garage and woodshed, were a total loss last Thursday afternoon from a blaze, origin of which has not been determined, according to information. It was stated that the family was away from home, and the house was burning all over when discovered. Mr. Cox and family will occupy another one of his houses in the same vicinity, it is stated.

CHILTON HIGH NETS VICTORY LAST FRIDAY

Montevallo Defeated on Own Field By Fine Local Playing

The Chilton County High School Tigers unleashed a tornado of hitherto latent power and scoring punch last Friday afternoon and ran wild to crush a gallant Montevallo high school team by a one-sided score of thirty-two to nothing. The game was played on the Montevallo eleven's own field last Friday afternoon at three-thirty and after four periods of spectacular running by the Clanton team and excellent passing by the Montevallo boys, Clanton had managed to cross her opponent's goal line for five touchdowns and two extra points.

Chilton elected to kick off to Montevallo and taking the ball when Montevallo punted on the first play drove the ball over behind the spectacular running of Arnold, fullback for Clanton, for the first score of the game. Sumner's try for the extra point was good and Clanton held a lead of 7 to 0 with the game hardly started. This lead was increased to thirteen points very soon when Clanton drove across the line for her second counter, a few minutes lat-

Will Helton Gets Year And A Day, Appeals; Many Being Carried To Kilby

The July Term of Criminal Court of Chilton County is still in session here, with Judge George F. Smoot, of Wetumpka presiding and Hon. Winston Huddleston, prosecuting for the State.

The case of Will Helton, age 71, went to trial last Monday and continued thru Tuesday, with several witnesses taking the stand. Helton was charged with the murder of Hubbard Glass, age 60, on Monday afternoon, August 25, 1930, at Oak Grove, near Jemison, Alabama. The jury returned a verdict Tuesday afternoon about six o'clock of guilty of manslaughter in the first degree. A sentence was pronounced of a year and a day, it was stated, and Helton's defense has appealed the case.

Clanton Fire Fighters Have Banquet Recently

Fifteen members of the Clanton Fire Fighters enjoyed a barbecue and banquet last Wednesday night at Matt's Lunch Shoppe, in Clanton. Only one member of the outfit, Sleepy Miller, was absent, being in Florida at the time.

The occasion was the end of an attendance contest among the members, where the losing side had to set up the winners to a feed. Points in determining the winners were based on the number of each side at the regular practice meetings of the Fire Department every Wednesday night over a period of two months.

At the conclusion of the banquet last Wednesday night it was voted to start another contest which will end on the 23rd of December with another barbecue and banquet.

The firemen wish to publicly acknowledge their thanks to Mr. Matt Ware and the personnel of his cafe for providing such a bounteous feast for them on this occasion. Everything was perfect and right on the dot.

The boys disbanded at the conclusion of the banquet, everyone feeling full to the brim. By a strange coincidence, it was only about an hour later that they were all together again fighting a fire which had broken out in a residence on east Second Avenue. Some of them found out that it is not good to have such a full stomach when fighting fire. They might have had worse results, however, if they had been at home trying to sleep in that condition.

Stapp Publicly Expresses Thanks To People of Chilton Co. for Their Efforts During Election

Following is a letter from C.E. Stapp. County Farm Demonstration Agent of Chilton County, in which he expresses his thanks to voters for their endorsement of the County Agent work in this county at the polls November 3rd:

'I wish to take this opportunity to thank my many personal friends as well as the friends of County Agency Work for their splendid support and cooperation during the recent campaign and the election on November the 3rd.

"I sincerely regret that more than four hundred saw fit to vote against the continuation of the work. I assure those who voted against the work that I am just as conscientious now in wanting them to see the value of the work as I was prior to the election.

"If those who voted against the work will come to me or call a meeting I will be more than anxious to meet with them and be of service to them.

"As I stated during the campaign there are only two classes opposed to county agency work. One is the fellow who is opposed because of some personal greed; the other is the fellow who has not given the work thought and consideration.

"I am more anxious than ever to make the work of greater value to Chilton County."

C. E. STAPP, County Agent.

ENTERPRISE DEFEATS THOMAS JUNIOR LAST FRIDAY

Enterprise defeated the Thomas Jr. team with a score of 20 to 13 in a game at Thomas Jr. Friday, November 6. The game was very interesting because of the keen rivalry between the two schools.

James Griffin on the Enterprise team is little but loud. He went through the defense of the Thomas Jr. team and made 9 of the 20 points. He played as right forward. Cecil Yeargan on this team also showed his ability to shoot goals. By shooting backward or forward he added 6 points to the score. L. C. Cagle, Guy Silas and Lois Stroud also showed the Thomas Jr. boys they were on the field by holding them to the losing score. Cagle and Silas made 5 points by pitching field goals and brought the Enterprise score to 20.

Ray, playing as center on the Thomas Jr. team made 6 of the 13 points for Thomas Jr. George Wilson also demonstrated his ability as left forward by piling up their score 6 points more. Jim made 1 field goal, making a total score for Thomas Jr. of 13.

MORE CASH FOR TEACHERS BY NEXT MONTH

Another Slice of Treasury Income By December Probable, Say Reports

By George L. Davis
In The Montgomery Advertiser

While the question most frequently heard among employes at the State Capitol yesterday was "when will the State pay off?" word came down by the customary grapevine route that the workers may have to bide their time while the State makes arrangements to give the common schools another slice of the treasury income in payment of obligations that have been outstanding since last Spring.

The State of Alabama still owes to the counties $1,306,000 after having paid within the past week nearly $846,000. The $1,306,000 represents the amount for which certain counties hold warrants against school funds, just as many employes at the Capitol who are paid out of the general fund of the State, are now holding salary warrants and it is known that it is Gov. Miller's purpose to pay the outstanding debts to the common schools at the earliest possible moment.

Payment Probable

In view of this fact it is considered

On Display At Dief's Service Station As Prize For Sales

Unusual photograph of the giant Navy airship "Akron" and the Goodyear Zeppelin airshop dock where it was built, taken by Margaret Bourke White, famous photographer. The picture, framed in duralumin, the metal of which the ship's framework was constructed, was recently the prize award to Dief's Service Station, Clanton, Ala., Goodyear dealer who won a summer sales contest known as the Third Annual Zep pelin Race.

An unusual picture of the giant Navy airship, 'Akron' taken by Margaret Bourke White, famous photographer, and framed in duralumin, was received by Dief's Service Station here recently and is attracting considerable attention.

The picture showing the big dirigible emerging from the air dock at Akron, Ohio, was taken during the "walkout" of the ship, just before starting its trial flights. By a curious fore-shortening effect which Miss Bourke White caught, the dock or hangar, which is three full city blocks long is narrowed almost to an arch, the rear doors of the building being open at the time accentuating this effect.

Scrap duralumin from the ship itself was used in the frame of the picture and held into place by a hundred duralumin rivets.

The picture was presented to Dief's Service Station, Clanton, Ala., winner in a summer merchandising contest instituted by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., constructor of the airship.

Presentation of the prize winning picture to the local concern was made by L. J. Teijelo, sales representative of the Goodyear company who congratulated the recipient on his aggressiveness and fine character of service that had won the award for him in a depression year.

Explaining the anomoly of a tire manufacturer being in the unusual business of airship building, Mr. Teijelo explained that some 21 years ago, President P. W. Litchfied, of Goodyear, then superintendent of the company, was looking about for new products to manufacture, and was attracted to aeronautics for two reasons. The company was already experienced in impregnating cotton fabric with rubber in connection with making tire plies and belting. This is also the first step in building balloons. And as a more important reason, he was already impressed with the importance of improved transportation, whether by land or air, and felt that aircraft were destined for an important future in economic history.

MINING ACCIDENTS OVER ALABAMA CUT BY TWO-THIRDS, REPORT SHOWS

The Alabama Mining Institute, at a recent meeting in Birmingham, adopted resolutions of pleasure over the remarkable accident-prevention record achieved by the Alabama industry, the [illegible] in the first nine months of 1931 were reduced [illegible] per cent over the same period [illegible]

The United States Bureau of Mines has made public commendation of the excellent prevention work done in the coal mines of Alabama by the awarding of certificates of honor. Among certificates of honor awarded was one to the Alabama Mining Institute "for its effective work in forwarding safety in the coal mining industry of that State."

Another honor certificate was awarded by the bureau to the Hull Mine of the DeBardeleban Coal Corporation of Alabama for having worked 11 months and 20 days "producing 100,699 tons of coal, with 301,763 mine hours worked without a lost time accident."

A certificate was awarded William B. Hillhouse "for excellent safety record extending over a period of approximately five years' service as chief mine inspector of Alabama. During this time the number of accidents occurring annually in the Alabama mines has been greatly reduced."

At the meeting of the Mining Institute the following members were elected on the board of Governors for a term of three years: Clarence L. Moss, Horace Hammond, George F. Peter. Hold-over members of the board are Harold McDermott, D. E. Wilson, H. M. Brooks, R. T. Daniel, L. E. Geohegan, and Milton Fies.

Resolutions of the Mining Institute, a copy of which has reached the Governor's office at the Capitol follow:

"Whereas, during the past four and one-half years the number of casualties to the workmen employed in and about the coal mines of Alabama has been materially diminished in proportion to the number employed, man days worked and tons of coal mined; and

"Whereas, the safety record of the coal mines in this State for the first nine months of this year is unexcelled; and

"Whereas, this most remarkable reduction of accidents in and about the Alabama coal mines is due, in great measure, to the efficient, intelligent, conscientious and praiseworthy service of the State Mine Inspectors, in pointing out and recommending the abandonment of unsafe practices, the elimination of physical hazards, and the maintenance of safe working conditions in and around the mines; as well as, in requiring strict observance, by the operating officials and workmen, of the Mining Law and the working rules, designed and put in force to protect the workman against personal injury;

"Therefore, Be It Resolved, by the members of the Alabama Mining Institute, in meeting assembled, that the chief and associate mine inspectors of Alabama be and are hereby commended most highly for the effective efforts constantly exerted by them, during their past tenure of office, to protect the coal mine employes of Alabama against personal injury and or death occasioned by work accidents, and that they be and are hereby complimented for their impartiality, and courage in enforcing compliance with the provisions of the Mining Law and working rules, mentioned in the preamble hereto.

"Be It Resolved, Further, that the members of the Alabama Mining Institute do hereby pledge their continuing and fullest cooperation in the future, with the Chief and Associate Mine Inspectors of Alabama in their accident prevention activities and in the proper and effective discharge of the duties devolving upon them under the law or implied therefrom."

How To Kill Rats Is Told By Ruffin

By W. A. Ruffin
Extension Entomologist, Auburn

There is now stored in Alabama barns, corn cribs, and granaries an unusually large amount of food and feed products for people and for domestic animals. Unless it is protected against rats they will destroy and damage a lot of it. It can be protected by storing it in ratproof buildings or by applying poison to kill rats.

Powdered Red Squill is the most satisfactory poison to use. There are two grades of red squill used in poisoning rats. The K-R-O brand is prepared by a special process and is slightly more toxic than the second grade, which is commonly known as Sun Dried Squill. The K-R-O (Kill Rats Only) costs 75c for a two-ounce can. The Sun Dried Squill sells for about 60c per pound. See your county farm bureau or local druggist and if they do not have the squill on hand they will be glad to help you secure it.

It is recommended that three kinds of bait be used. The best materials for bait are raw hamburger, canned salmon, and oatmeal. Each kind of bait should be mixed separately with the proper amount of squill. One pound of K-R-O is mixed with sixteen pounds of food. If the Sun Dried Squill is used one pound of squill is mixed with ten pounds of food.

Mix each kind of food separately with the squill in the proper proportions. The powder should be mixed through the food thoroughly. Drain the liquid off before mixing with canned fish. Mix oatmeal with the poison dry, then add water or milk to make heavy dough. Squill sometimes causes a stinging sensation to the hands for a short time.

1. Remove other foods in so far as possible.
2. Distribute baits late in the day.
3. Place each kind of bait in separate half teaspoonful lumps at numerous places about the entire premises where rats may frequent.

About one-half pound of each of the above mentioned baits is required to poison the rats on the average size farm.

Is History A Dry Old Subject In School?

(Not in the Maplesville school where the 5th grade pupils began the years work in History and Geography by making a study of their town and of Chilton County. Below is the story of Maplesville as clipped from the Alabama Booklet written by Willard Hayes, a member of the fifth grade class.)

Maplesville is situated on the western border of Chilton County near Mulberry Creek. The M. and O. and Southern railroads run through Maplesville. It is a convenient place to market the lumber and agricultural products.

The citizenship of Maplesville is of original Southern stock. There is located in the town two churches, a Baptist and a Methodist. Maplesville has a strong and substantial bank which carries the town name, "The Bank of Maplesville." We have a modern Senior High School building. All the grades are being taught here from the first through the twelfth. We have eight teachers.

This town was first settled three miles east of here in 1822. It took its name from a prominent pioneer named Maples. In 1850 when the railroad was completed from Selma to Dalton, Ga., the town was moved so that it would be more convenient. Mr. Reding Hicks was the pioneer merchant.

We have now about twenty business houses and a population of about five hundred law-abiding citizens.

Dr. J. B. Williams' reply to an article which appeared in the Union Banner of Thursday October the 29, 1931. Styled, "Preacher's Neck Broken"

This man, Elder Cox, has been telling it around I broke his neck in making an adjustment on him. He has also told others, viz.: Mr. Will Cox a nephew of his, and Mr. Frank McCary that the condition was caused by his splitting stovewood and pitching it back over his shoulder. And I have been informed that a daughter of his said the same thing. I further have been informed that he had been treated by three or more medical doctors of Clanton for that trouble before coming to me. It also can be proven that after I had given him the adjustment he was over at Mr. Jim Dunlap's store and stated, that it made him feel better, and showed them that he could move his head more freely.

The facts in the case. About twelve months ago, the old man came into my office with a stiff neck and asked me if I could help his condition. I told him I believed I could but that it would take several adjustments, perhaps, to do him much good. He took one and I heard no more from him until this movement by the Medical doctors to oust us Chiropractors. Then reports began to come; this one's ribs were broken, this one's neck was broken and another was killed. If ever a Chiropractor touches a person and he happens not to improve immediately or dies, of course he is charged with causing whatever follows. Of course most of it is lies, told to prejudice the public against Chiropractic. However, the public is awaking up to such schemes. Who killed Cock-Robin? Who killed [illegible] McMurray? Who killed Eld. A. D. Hewett and countless others [illegible] young and middle aged who have filled the cemeteries all over the country? Do medical doctors injure and kill people? Here is what the leading men of the medical profession have to say about the two methods of healing:

"All curative agents are poisons and as a consequence every dose diminishes the patient's vitality. In their zeal to do good physicians have done much harm. They have hurried thousands to the grave who would have recovered if left alone to nature." Dr. Alonzo Clark, Prof. of New York College of Physicians and Surgeons.

"The Science of Medicine is founded on conjecture and improved by murder." Sir Astley Cooper, Surgeon to King George IV.

"How rarely do our medicines do good! How often do they make our patients really worse! I fearlessly assert that in most cases the sufferer would be safer without a physician than with one." Dr. Francis H. Ramage, Member of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, London.

"We have assisted in multiplying diseases, we have done more, we have increased their fatality." Dr. Benj. Rush, University of Penna.

"It is my firm belief that the prevailing mode of practice is productive of vastly more evil than good, and were it absolutely abolished, mankind would be infinitely the gainer." Dr. Cogswell, Boston.

"Thousands are annually slaughtered in the quiet sick room." Dr. John Marshall Hall.

"I declare my conscientious opinion founded on long observation and reflection, that if there were not a single physician, surgeon, apothecary, mid-wife, chemist, druggist or drug on the face of the earth, there would be less sickness and less mortality." Dr. James Johnson, Surgeon to Wm. IV.

"All medicines which enter the circulation poison the blood in the same manner as do the poisons that produce disease." Joseph M. Smith, M. D., Prof. in New York College of Physicians and Surgeons.

"Medicine never cured any malady except probably cases of tape worm or some other parasite, in which case it proved its power to kill but not to cure." J. H. Kellogg, M. D. Battle Creek Sanitarium.

"The effects of medicine on the human system are in the highest degree uncertain and unsatisfactory, except indeed, that they have destroyed more lives than war, pestilence and famine combined." John Mason Good, M. D., London.

The above statements are from outstanding medical doctors and surgeons. I could give similar testimony from local men but it is unnecessary.

What about Chiropractic and Drugless Theropy, I seem to hear you say! Read the testimony.

"The drugless healer is one of the best things that has come into the life on the present." Charles Mayo, M. D., Rochester, Minn.

"Chiropractors are obtaining results that I could not have obtained with medicine or surgery." E. G. Rutherford, M. D., Birmingham, Ala.

"Clinical records show that there is hardly a recognized form of disease that cannot successfully be 'treated' by Chiropractic adjustments." R. C. Ellsworth, M. D., Astoria, Oregon.

"The Chiropractor uses nothing but his bare hands to realign bones that are misplaced in the spine, thus releasing pressure of harder substances from the nerve trunk to restore normal tension to individual nerve fibres. The application of such adjustments is practically painless and leaves no ill effect with the patient." G. H. Patchen, M. D. New York City.

"There is no comparison whatever, as I cannot promise any definite results when treating a patient medically, but when I adjust them, I feel certain that I am going to get results." A. B. Hender, M. D., D. C., Ph. C., (16 years a medical physician and medical instructor and 15 years a Chiropractor), Davenport.

"The Chiropractic theory of the cause of disease appeals to the educated judgment of the people as no theory of medicine ever can." Dr. Frederick Terry.

"Chiropractic is not a "cure all" and should never be claimed as such, but it reaches successfully a larger number of so called chronic diseases than any known mechanical method, and is so much superior to the "drug method" that it is truly laughable to compare them." Alfred Walton, M. D., D. C., Philadelphia. (Surgeon for 20 years and rendered the use of oxygen possible in the medical profession.)

"Medicine knows no specific remedies for disease of any kind, while, on the other hand, Chiropractic adjustments answer the heart's earnest desire for a specific for the cause of dis-ease." A. F. Hall, M. D., D. C., Indianapolis.

"Results are what count and Chiropractic adjustments, when scientifically given, bring them, nothwithstanding what our medical friends (?) may say to the contrary." Wm. A. Seeley, M. D., Tipton, Ia.

"I have by Chiropractic adjustments obtained wonderful results in acute appendicitis, rheumatism, constipation, stomach and kidney trouble, goitre, headache and the pelvic diseases peculiar to women." R. E. Ellsworth, M. D., Astoria, Oregon.

To compare a Medical doctor with a Chiropractor would be like comparing a Gas-Filling Station operator to a good Auto-Mechanic. All the Medical man and the Station operator know to do is to pour in drugs and gas but when your bodies—human and auto—get out of order it takes a Mechanic and a Chiropractor to make the adjustment.

Chiropractors, a great happy band are we,
No drug doctors can compare with us so you see.

PAUL IN JERUSALEM
Acts 21:27-39

Really romantic incidents about the third missionary journey of Paul are found in Acts, chapters 20 and 21. Follow with him on his return from Corinth. You will not go to sleep as did the man at Troas who fell out of the window. A final good bye was said to the Ephesian elders at Miletus, for Paul was aware that he was advancing to his own deth when he proceeded to Jerusalem. Keep track of the "we" passages, for then Dr. Luke, the author of Acts, was with Paul.

Plenty .of trouble awaited Paul at Jerusalem. The people scarcely said "thank you" for the fine offering he brought for the poor saints there before they told him of the criticism scandal-mongers were delighting in.

To offset this Paul agreed to undertake a vow and, pay the costs for others making a similar vow. While they were in the Temple courts the cry was raised that Paul had brought others than Jews into the sacred area. Then there was an uproar indeed and soldiers rushed down from the castle of Antonia to rescue Paul from the mob.

As the prisoner was being dragged up the stairs into the castle he saw the fine opportunity to speak once more in behalf of Jesus Christ. Here was the crowds surging about and the stairs furnished an ideal pulpit. Paul rehearsed his own conversion and the hissing broke out again and Paul was taken within to be examined by scourging. But just as the lash was about to descend on his bare back, Paul asked a question that had a startling effect. He asked: "Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman and uncondemned?" 22:25. Read all the record and especially about the vision of commendation, encouragement and promise that came the next night, 23:11.

MT. PLEASANT WINS OVER UNION GROVE BY SCORE 18-9

In a swift and interesting game of basket ball the Mt. Pleasant Junior High School boys swept the fast Union Grove quintet down to an 18 to 9 defeat last Friday afternoon on the former court.

Cecil Traywick opened up the scoring with a beautiful shot from the side—close to the center line, his teammate, Burnett, soon followed with a nice crip shot. This four-point lead was held until the third quarter when the Union boys gained a one-point margin only to lose it shortly, as the Mt. Pleasant lads settled down to a fine exhibition of pass work, which led them through the opponent's defense where they netted 8 more points. The half closed with the winners clinging to a slim lead of 8 to 7, but after Union had registered 2 points by foul shots soon after the opening of the second half, the Mt. Pleasant team began their real drive through their opponents defense. H. Littlejohn gave the large crowd a surprising thrill when he dribbled the ball from back of center-mark to the goal where he made a beautiful looping shot, netting the ball.

The Union team made 2 points the last half, these coming by fouls. The intense rivalry between the two teams led to excessive fouling on both sides. Mt. Pleasant committing 7 and the Union boys 4. Retherford led the scoring for the losers, getting 2 field goals and 2 foul goals for 6 points. Burnett led the winners with 6 points to his credit. The Union boys took particular pains in guarding his running teammate Curtis Traywick, holding him to 5 points. Mt. Pleasant goes to Enterprise next Friday with Enterprise returning the game the following Friday, November 20.

It Really Doesn't Pay To Try To Do Without It

The telephone is such a familiar part of daily life that its convenience and value are often overlooked until it is out of service.

This is the experience of those who discontinue their service for one reason or another. They soon find that the small cost of the service has been repaid many times each month in convenience, in time and actually in money saved.

Telephone users constantly tell us that the cheapest service they can buy today, compared with its value, is telephone service.

There have doubtless been times in your own experience when your telephone service has proved priceless—when the ability to call instantly a doctor, a policeman or the fire department, could not be measured in terms of money.

But it is not alone the emergencies that give the telephone its true value. There are the commonplaces of every day conversations—the twenty-four hour a day convenience in the home, the shop, the office, whenever you wish two-way communication with anyone almost anywhere.

On reflection you will doubtless agree that it really doesn't pay to try to do without it.

Children On Wheels

The chance of an automobile accident is much greater if the driver is under twenty than when he or she is over thirty, according to statistics compiled by one of the large accident insurance companies. The records of some four million licensed automobile drivers were examined and it was found that by far the highest percentage of accidents occurred when children under age were driving a car.

There are still a good many states and communities where very little or no inquiry is made into the qualifications of anyone who wants to drive a car. In the majority of the states today licenses are required, but the examinations and driving tests vary. And there are still a great many places in which any child who is physically able to hang on to the steering wheel and reach the pedals is allowed to drive.

Of course, the earlier in life one learns to drive, the more confidence the motorist acquires and the better he or she is likely to be as time goes on. But we think there is a great deal of wisdom in the law which obtains in some states, under which no one under eighteen may be licensed to drive, and then only after a severe road test of ability. In order to learn to drive before applying for a license, young people in states where this law obtains must always have with them on the front seat an experienced licensed driver.

There will always be parents who will let their children talk them into taking out the car, whether really fit to drive it or not, and children will always want to get out on the road and "step on it." That is human nature, and it would not be anybody else's concern if people driving cars were not a menace to other motorists and pedestrians.

Armistice Day

Thirteen years ago the greatest war in all history came to a sudden termination with the declaration of the Armistice on November 11, 1918. The hopes of the world ran high. This was to be the last of war. The Peace Treaty was to be such a masterpiece of statesmanship that all future grounds for war would be eliminated. Our soldiers came back from France with the feeling that they had played a victorious part in a war to end war.

After thirteen years, how far has the world got toward ending war? Every nation in the world, including our own, is staggering under a crushing burden of taxation to maintain greater armies and navies than ever before. As we write this the machinery set up by the Treaty of Versailles for the prevention of war is being subjected to its first serious test, and it is still in doubt whether war between Japan and China can be averted. President Hoover's effort to reduce the cost of keeping up a larger navy than we are ever likely to have use for has aroused a storm of protest on the part of people who fail to realize that preparation for war always breeds war. It is absurd to believe that any nation can train hundreds of thousands of fighting men and not create a "war party" which will welcome any excuse to put this military and naval training into practice.

There are circumstances under which no nation can refuse to go to war, just as there are circumstances under which a man must fight whether he wishes to or not, but those circumstances so seldom arise, and their consequences when they do arise are so disastrous even to the victor, that the sober thought of the whole world is turning more and more against war as a means of settling international disputes. When war was merely a glorious adventure for youthful fighters, and had no serious effect upon the rest of the population, it had a romantic appeal. But war today touches every man, woman and child, and we believe that we are expressing the thought of those who participated in the last war, as well as of the vast majority of others, when we hope that our country shall never again have to go to war.

Dry Weather --- Dust and Smoke

Dry weather is bringing dust and smoke to this section of the state, as well as other sections. Both are becoming dangerous, and in some instances, real serious.

Dangerous because dusty roads make it so for those who travel dirt roads. Several accounts of automobiles and wagons almost having accidents due to dusty highways have been coming in lately. Drivers of automobiles and those who ride in wagons on dirt roads should be more cautious during this dry season.

Woods are being burned off considerably. Whether these fires are started intentionally or accidentally is not known. Regardless of how they originate, they are becoming serious, not only by destroying nature's beauty and efforts and injuring the land, but by creating such a density of smoke that the air is becoming thoroughly saturated with it in many sections. Roads are becoming dangerous at night for auto drivers due to smoke hovering close to the road, making it almost impossible to see over five feet ahead of the automobile.

People who are apt to start one of these woods fires, should take a second thought and remember that the smallest of fires built in the woods or on the side of the road, can soon be fanned into a dangerous, devouring blaze that will cover a country-side, endangering crops and homes. Be careful where you throw that lighted match—be sure you extinguish that road-side fire, and that the pile of trash you burn does not spread its blaze.

PAST-PRESENT-FUTURE
IN CHILTON COUNTY

For some of the past of Chilton County this week, we will recall the good old days, remembered by many, when there were board walk-ways over near the Wilson Hotel and one over there by the Aldridge home, and when the place now occupied by the buildings of The Dixie Cafe, Jones Place, and the filling stations, were occupied by large and beautiful oak trees.

Those were the good old days when many of our older citizens now, were probably just putting on long trousers. Those, most of us, who remember these places and how they looked, can possibly recall to mind many other interesting things that occurred in those days.

And who remembers when the streets of Clanton would get in such bad condition during wef, winter months that it was almost impossible to get through them? No doubt some of our old time mail carriers can tell something about that. If it rained here on Saturday, we really had a mess. And when the weather was dry and hot, the merchants almost had to keep their store doors shut to keep the dust out. And now, how many persons who use our fine paved streets reflect back to recall such things?

It hasn't been so very many years ago when Clanton was protected by fire fighting apparatus with only two or three small hose wagons, hand-power. Now, we have a modern fire truck, an organized fire department.

Go back in your mind—think of ten years ago, or even eight years ago. How many vacant lots and disreputable buildings were in Clanton then? Now, count them and see how many nice modern little stores are located on those vacant lots.

It will do one good to stop and think over these things. It will show immediately that Clanton is going forward. There is one thing, however, that Clanton is lacking in. That is, one thing I'll mention here. It is the fact that our citizens are allowing the young men and women to go to other fields to go into business, too much. In my opinion, some day some of our older, substantial citizens are going to pass away, and should have some young person to take up and carry on where they left off, and there is nothing like a home boy or girl to do these things.

Understand that Kiwanis activities in Clanton are still going on with a snap. Also understand that this newspaper will soon publish an account of activities of the Clanton Kiwanis Club over a period of years, its age. From looking over some of these activities, already compiled, I am under the impression that it is going to be interesting.

Unwanted fires in homes in Clanton are increasing lately. However, few ever do much damage, but nevertheless they do get started. Residents of Clanton might do well to take a little more care in how they build fires, have their wiring checked, etc., and guard against this dangerous item.

W. H. Sartor, at The Fair Store, says, "Boys, I'm selling goods at a price lower than I believe I have ever placed on goods." Notice in this issue a full page ad from The Fair telling of some of the bargains there.

Hosea Downs, once one of our residents, has shown some real taste in landscaping at his home south of Clanton. We kind of envy Mr. Downs there. But, lest we forget, I really believe that Mrs. Downs plays a great part in the attractive appearance of their fine little country home.

Clanton's C. Fenn Jones is still that Gentleman of Leisure, one reads so much about and seldom sees. As yet, we have not grown accustomed to separating Mr. Jones from the hardware and furniture business, but maybe we will sometime, and class him along with other retired capitalists.

There is no question about it, this town would not seem the same should we have to do without Dr. Hayes. He is one who stands out. It is not necessary to say Doctor J. P. Hayes of Clanton. All one has to say to be understood is Dr. Hayes, or "Sie" Hayes.

Now that we are assured the county will have a County Farm Agent, I will endeavor to talk a little more freely about the matter. I sincerely hope that the man now holding the office will be broadminded enough to understand the comments I might make. He will, because he is a type of man who can understand things. In my opinion, C. E. Stapp is worth his salary to Clanton alone. I happen to know of many of his enterprising activities in this town, and I will say that he is worth his salt.

Some of these days I might take the pleasure of compiling a list of names of persons who should be placed in Clanton's book of immortals. Those people who go about day after day, doing good, and asking nothing in return. Little is said of these people of Clanton. But when they will pass to the Great Beyond, then will the people begin to realize what these few people have meant to Clanton.

Mrs. Samuel J. Ezell, church worker, Christian woman, and I wish I could command words enough to express the esteem I have for her, with her untiring work in behalf of that which is best at all times.

Was thinking the other day of the Callen family of Clanton, past and present. William T. Callen's photo hangs in the Peoples Savings Bank here, directly over the large vault, a very appropriate place for it. To many of the people of Clanton W. T. Callen will always occupy a warm spot in their hearts. Nothing is amiss to say that the present president of The Peoples Savings Bank is occupying a warm place in many hearts today. "Democracy, for the right always."

A Break For The Men --- Or Is It?

One of Birmingham's daily papers, or perhaps we should say The South's Greatest Newspaper, The Birmingham News, is giving the men a break, when it comes to style, so we see lately. Some enterprising advertising man up there got the idea that the men should have a break in regard to style in wearing apparel, so it seems, and originated the idea of "Personal Appearance."

Now, is that a break for the men, or is it ain't? So far the men have not been bothered so much with style. They have been allowed to go along and get by without having attention called to what they wear or how they wear it. Now, here comes this "P. A." idea and the men will have to have things just right, or they don't have Personal Appearance. No doubt, members of the male sex will now become more self-conscious of their dress and if the advertising man of "The South's Greatest Newspaper" succeeds in putting this idea across nationally, the men are either going to have to stay at home, or wear just 'so and so" or—what difference does it make.

Letters To The Editor

Editor, Chilton County News:

A few words to correct the erronious impression of "A Reader" in your paper of November 5th inst. Please allow me to say that the writer of that article overlooked the cause of our trouble and God's remedy therefor. "In the days o these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Dan. 2:44. This is what shall come to pass in the latter days. ver. 28. Satan is the cause of all our troubles, and we shall have no complete remedy therefor until he is destroyed. Heb. 2:14.

For some six thousand years man has governed himself by various forms of government, and all of them have been unsatisfactory. Theocracy is the only remedy. When this comes, a sad day will have dawned for the doctors. Jer. 33:6, Isa. 33:24. I have not space to tell what will be the results to all classes of professional men of this evil world, but the clergy will have to hunt other jobs. Heb. 8:10-11. They (the preachers) can peddle their creeds no more. God speed the day! Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven. Mat. 6:10.

Auto Accidents Over The Week End, This Section

ed, causing the car to swerve from the road and overturning. The occupants were enroute to Birmingham Saturday night when the accident occurred, and later stopped in Clanton.

Charlie Simpson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Simpson, received severe cuts about the face and head last Sunday morning, and Mr. Simpson received slight bruises, when their car was struck by another car, said to have been driven by Grady Gillespie, of Clanton. This accident occurred on the Lay Dam road, near the gates of the power company property. Both cars were badly damaged.

Ruphus Brown's Car Burns

Arthur Broadhead of Clanton, son of J. D. Broadhead, received severe burns about the face and head last Sunday night when the car belonging to Ruphus Brown of Clanton caught fire and was destroyed.

Ruphus Brown is believed to have received broken ribs and a bruised arm, while Miss Dody Wells, of Jemison received slight burns about the face and head. All were confined to bed Sunday and Monday, Broadhead's condition believed to be most serious.

Information states that the three had just left the Wells home in Jemison to meet other girl friends who were to arrive on the bus at Jemison. The bus being slightly behind schedule, the party drove up the highway just beyond Jemison, with Broadhead driving. In attempting to turn the car around, one of the back wheels slipped off the road, and when they attempted to exchange drivers, a ring of keys belonging to Brown, dropped from his pocket to the ground.

While the car was sitting in its inclined position, gasoline from the full tank had apparently overflowed onto the ground near the car, and in striking a match to locate the bunch of keys, the gasoline flamed up on the ground, immediately catching fire to the tank and car. The gas tank is said to have shortly exploded, enveloping the car in flames.

Several other minor accidents were reported from the past week end, most of them being attributed to dense smoke on the roads, caused by woods burning.

More Cash For School Teachers Next Month

probable that the State will pay another portion of its indebtedness to the common schools early in December. The indebtedness represented by the outstanding warrants in the hands of the various county boards of education is payable from two school funds—one the high school education fund of $406,000 and the other the equalization fund of $900,000.

All counties in the State will share in the High School Education Fund, and officials consider that this fund probably will be the next to be paid by the State.

The equalization fund, designed to aid the poorer counties of the State to permit the children of these counties to attend schools for terms more nearly equal with those of the more prosperous counties, is payable to the school treasurers of 33 counties. It is expected that the State will pay this amount as soon as possible.

No Definite Statement Monday

State Treasurer S. H. Blan Monday night said he could not state definitely when the other outstanding debts to the common schools could be paid but corroborated in part, the fact that it is the policy of Gov. Miller to pay these debts as fast as possible.

"We are going to do everything we can for the schools as fast as we can," Mr. Blan said.

Mr. Blan pointed out that the State had many obligations this month, among them amounts of interest due on the first issue of highway bonds, Alabama Bridge Corporation Bonds, port bonds and the "old bonded debt" of the State. These funds must be paid by Dec. 1, he said, but they are not paid from the same source as the amounts due the schools.

"A Fool Thinketh"

Being thoughts of one who has time to think about things while confined at home.

You see so many farming renters that do not have an idea as to what they will do nor where they will live another year. They are the people who have my sympathy. That state of uncertainty is horrible, especially when you have a wife and a few children depending on you. Get close to God. He can and will arrange everything for you if you will only trust him.

Cash is so very scarce these days that even our courts see the point and are giving time instead of fines in almost every conviction. What will the state do with all these new boarders? A report on prisons a week or so ago gave to Alabama prisons a very large number more than the State had accommodations for—Kilby with over 1400 more than they had room for.

They talk a whole lot about "cooperation" now. Who is going to "cooperate" with the thousands who are absolutely down and out now? Cooperation with God is the only kind that many of us can secure and the assured remedy for hard times.

People talk too much. If you have nothing else to talk about but to scandalize your neighbors, you better sew up your mouth.

It is an encouraging sign in these dark days of depression to see so many thousands of people all over our country beginning to realize the true cause of our conditions and turning back to God and begging for His help. Before long now this tide of repentance will sweep the country and the gladsome days will return again.

Take deception, lying, misrepresentation and greed out of our politics and both the old parties would be much safer for us to trust than they are at present. They have both fallen into the hands of "robbers and thieves" as things stand today.

Society may not be any worse today than it used to be, but all night "joy rides" with a pint or two "on your hip" were unheard of or even dreamed of in those old fogy days.

We have entirely too many laws these days, hence, the slack enforcement. For instance, we have so many school laws now that the system has actually run aground.

It is estimated that it would require more than half our population to enforce all of the laws and that would put the other half in jail.

It is about as silly for the average editor to try to tell the farmers how to farm as it is for the big man in Washington to undertake to sit in their offices and fix the acreage, the variety and amount each farmer must plant.

Every man in the country wants to "help the poor farmer." Yes, that's right. They want to help him dispose of it and they generally do—corn at 50 cents and cotton at 5. They "help" him all right—help him into bankruptcy.

When is the last time you have seen a really disinterested act of kindness performed?

It's funny how both drivers are always innocent when two autos collide.

We are living in an age when we do not have time to consider the right or wrong of any matter. The only question is "Can we get by?"

You can say what you please about Dr. Bob Jones, but you can hardly fail to admit that he is doing a most wonderful work for the Master these days. Without money and without price he is certainly spreading the great story of salvation to thousands and tens of thousands these days. All honor to him.

The way the Bond issue was attended to last week is the most cheering piece of news I have heard of in a long time. The people certainly woke up that time and may they never slumber again.

Chilton High Nets Victory Over Montevallo Team

er. The extra point was not made after this goal.

At this point Montevallo in possession of the ball unleashed a deluge of long passes which caught the Clanton team flat footed and which advanced the ball into the shadow of the Chilton goal. There their drive was stopped by the stand of the Chilton team and the end of the quarter period.

In the second period Chilton tallied again on a long sweeping end run by Harris. Harris went over standing up and hardly a Montevallo tackler came near to him. The try for extra point also fell short this time and Chilton had a one sided lead of 19-0.

Chilton opened the half with more driving and fast running plays and soon Burdette carried the ball over the left side of the line for the fourth score of the game. During this period Clanton held the ball and Montevallo was hardly given a chance to open up again with a passing attack.

The last tally of the game came during the last minutes of play when Chilton advanced the ball up the field behind the spectacular running of Arnold and the other stellar Clanton backs and Arnold drove across for the score. There were only a few more minutes to play and Chilton had a commanding lead which could hardly be overcome. Coach Walker rushed in an almost entirely new second team of Subs. These subs drove the ball across the line thru their opponents for the extra point bringing the score to thirty-two to nothing.

Montevallo seemed to take heart at the substitutions and after the next kick-off took possession of the ball and deluged the Chilton subs with a barrage of passes which ended only when a Montevallo player dropped a pass as he was standing behind his own goal. This was Montevallo's last scoring threat and as the game ended Chilton was starting back up the field for another touchdown.

The entire Chilton team functioned well. The Chilton lads outweighed the Montevallo boys by a good many pounds in the line and kept the Montevallo line off its feet during almost all the game.

Chilton's backfield showed up well during the game, functioning with with hardly a hitch. Arnold at fullback was the most outstanding player in the Chilton backfield. Time and again he shot outside his tackle and round end for gains of ten and fifteen yards which meant touchdowns.

Chilton was hardly called upon to do any kicking and tried only one pass which was knocked down by Montevallo. The whole game was cleanly and hard fought and Montevallo played a heads up game, but was unable to stem the Clanton tide.

Clanton meets Holtville here on the Chilton field next Friday afternoon and a good game may be expected. Chilton should not experience much difficulty with the Holtville team. Holtville has met the Isabella team this year and defeated them by a score of seven to nothing. Clanton has defeated Isabella twice, once by 18 and again by 19 points. This would prove Clanton to be two touchdowns better than Holtville. But then scores don't mean so much and Holtville will probably not be as easily tripped as it seems at the present. Everyone who is interested in the Clanton team should come out next Friday afternoon and see the Clanton team in action.

Goodyear Has On A Weekly Prize Contest

—o—

"Car owners in Chilton County are urged to tune in their radios November 10, for a weekly prize contest announcement that is certain to interest everyone who operates a car," declares Dief's Service Station, Goodyear tire dealer located at Clanton.

"Over a nation-wide hookup of 54 stations in the NBC network through WEAF, the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. of Akron, whose tires I have sold for _ years, is putting on a splendid radio program each Tuesday evening at 7:30 p.m., and each Saturday night at 8:00 o'clock featuring John Phillip Sousa and his band, Arthur Pryor and his band, the famous Melton, James, Dewey and Glenn quartet and a complete concert-dance orchestra," said Mr. Diefenderfer.

"The contest is an added feature, and I hope that everybody in the city will listen for the announcement which will be made every night starting November 10."

National attention was created by the first broadcast in the Goodyear biweekly radio program with the commissioning ceremony of the airship U. S. S. Akron by the Navy at Lakehurst, N. J. Thorsby Institute News

The Christian Endeavor Society was led last Sunday by Odell Rowe. World Peace was the general subject considered. Flags of various nations were on the wall and the leader told to which nation each flag belonged. One thought brought out was that if the amount spent in the World War had not been so spent it could have provided everyone a home costing $4,000 apiece, a $5,000,000 hospital, $5,000,000 library, and $10,000,000 college for each city of 20,000 or more inhabitants and still have left a sum equal to the value of all private and public property in France and Belgium before the war. The money so spent would have been constructive rather than destructive.

Next Saturday night everyone is invited to come to Thorsby Institute to the Helen Keller Literary Society meeting. The Operetta, "Christina of Greenland," will be presented at 7:30. Admission will be 15 cents and 25 cents to all not pupils or teachers at the Institute.

On November 28 the school will have its Annual Stunt Night. This is always an enjoyable occasion. A small admission of ten cents will be charged.

Mr. Sigwald Visits School
(By Nell Neighbors)

Mr. Sigwald, Boy Scout Executive, was here Thursday. He talked on the subject of scouting, which was enjoyed by all. The scouts were asked to stand at attention and repeat the scout oath

He then asked John Ezell to talk on the progress that troop 47 has made during the last year. J. C. Connel, Lay Dam Scout, talked on the progress that troop 51 has made in the last year.

Everyone enjoyed these talks and we want to thank Mr. Sigwald for his splendid talks and to visit our school again.

Boy Scouts Speak at Kiwanis
(John Ezell)

Last Thursday at 12:00 the three local patrol leaders of the Clanton troop and the Lay Dam troop were guests of the local Kiwanis Club along with the Scout Executive, Mr. Sigwald. The following topics were spoken on by the following scouts: The History of Troop 47, by Morgan Reynolds. What Troop 47 Has Done the Last Year, by Joe Moore. What Scouting Has Meant to Me, by John Ezell. What Troop 51 Has Done Last Year by J. C. Connell. The Value of a Scout Executive, by Thomas Marcus.

The purpose of these talks was to create an interest in raising the proper funds to carry on scout work during the coming year.

C. C. H. S. Glee Club Entertains

The entire student body enjoyed very much the entertainment given Friday morning at assembly period by Miss Mary Ellis and the high school glee club. They rendered a beautiful song entitled: "Mighty Like A Rose." Several new pupils have joined the club, and it is showing progress every week.

We are deeply indebted to Miss Ellis and her glee club, for their enthusiasm and interest shown since the organization of the first of school back in September.

Masterpieces of Modern Art Put On Exhibit

Traveling Gallery comes to C. C. H. S. with 150 Subjects represented. Many latest workers are included.

The Art Exhibit to be held at the Chilton County High School during the week of November 30-December 4, is creating quite a bit of comment. This exhibit will no doubt attract many visitors and is eliciting the praise of all who are familiar with this type of art work.

This collection of 150 fine prints reproduced directly from the original is said to be the most artistic exhibit ever displayed here. The original of these are in the most famous Art Galleries of the world.

This Art Exhibit will be fostered by the P.-T. A. of the high school, and will be open to the public each afternoon from 3:00 to 5:00 o'clock.

"Tell me what pictures hang upon his walls and what books are his companions and I will tell you what manner of a man he is," the words of a wise man.

That the school should train for the use and choice of good books is accepted and every school does this obviously, to a greater or less extent. But to be well educated means a many sided development and the knowledge of art is one of the prerequisites of modern education.

Dr. Carmichael Addresses Local Meeting of P.-T. A. This Afternoon

It is generally known that Dr. O. C. Carmichael is one of the leading educators of the South. This man is to lecture to a joint meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association at the High School Auditorium this afternoon at 3:00. We especially urge every parent and others interested in the promotion of education in general to be present on this occasion.

BILIOUS

"I have used Black-Draught . . . and have not found anything that could take its place. I take Black-Draught for biliousness. When I get bilious, I have a nervous headache and a nervous, trembling feeling that unfits me for my work. After I take a few doses of Black-Draught, I get all right. When I begin to get bilious, I feel tired and run-down, and then the headache and trembling. But Black-Draught relieves all this."—H. O. Hendrix, Homerville, Ga.

YOU NEED THE RAILROADS and the Railroads need your Patronage

THE OLD RELIABLE

The successful operation of the railroads is of vital importance to every American. You, as an individual, may not own any railroad securities but all over the Nation, financial, educational and charitable institutions are, because of large holdings of railroad securities, seriously concerned in the earning power of railroad stocks and bonds. Thus both our business and social structure are linked with the prosperity of our railroads. Their prosperity is your prosperity and railroad problems your problems.

Present economic conditions and unregulated competition have placed the railroads of the United States in a perilous position. If these conditions are permitted to continue, we may face even greater economic disturbances than are now harassing the Nation.

Read these startling figures. In 1930 the number of cars loaded with revenue freight fell 7,000,000 below the figure for 1929, and the freight revenues decreased $742,000,000, or 15 per cent.

Passenger revenues decreased $144,000,000, and the total revenues, including mail, express, etc., decreased approximately one billion dollars. The rate of return earned on railroad property invested, fell from 4.84 per cent in 1929, to 3.30 per cent in 1930—and for the first 8 months of 1931 the rate of return was 2.14 per cent.

To what extent the railroads have been involved in the present unemployment situation, can be seen by the fact that the number of railroad employees has declined from 1,661,000 in 1929, to 1,488,000 in 1930.

Payrolls and purchases of materials and supplies have decreased to such a degree as to entail a loss of $637,000,000 in the purchasing power of the railroads and their employees.

These significant figures tell briefly the railroad story.

In spite of such tremendous losses the railroads have kept faith with the public and are rendering more satisfactory service, in safety, speed, and luxurious equipment than ever before in their colorful history.

It is time to consider the railroad problem, honestly and without prejudice. Your patronage and good will is the foundation upon which their success depends. They also need, and ask, your cooperation in obtaining legislative relief for yourself and for them. If that success, which has meant so much to the Nation at large, is to be maintained in the future, the traveling and shipping public must lend their active support by patronizing the railroads.

My Experiences in the WORLD WAR

CHAPTER LXIII

Returning to Paris from the conference of allied commanders-in-chief at Senlis, October 25, 1918, I cabled a report of the proceedings to Washington, including my proposals in detail as enumerated in the previous chapter.

Marshal Foch did not definitely express his views at the conference, as may be recalled, but the following day he submitted his report to Prime Minister Clemenceau. Marshal Foch's recommendations embraced the main points proposed by the commander-in-chief, and were accepted by the supreme war council with practically no change.

In the light of later events we know Germany was more nearly beaten than the allied leaders realized at that time, and was, in fact, in no position to resume the fighting even had her government remained intact. Her last division was in line, her supply system was demoralized, and the congestion behind her lines made it practically impossible for her to move her armies in the face of the aggressive allies.

Instead of requiring the German forces to retire at once, leaving material, arms and equipment behind, the armistice terms permitted them to march back to their homeland with colors flying and bands playing, posing as the victims of political conditions.

If unconditional surrender had been demanded, the Germans would, without doubt, have been compelled to yield, and their troops would have returned to Germany without arms, virtually as paroled prisoners of war. The surrender of the German armies would have been an advantage to the allies in the discussion of peace terms and would have greatly facilitated their execution.

In conversation with M. Poincare some time after the war, he told me that, as president of the republic, he was in favor of demanding the surrender of the German armies, but that M. Clemenceau, his prime minister, insisted upon granting them an armistice.

The last phase of the Meuse-Argonne operations was to begin November 1. The American army was now able for the first time to prepare for an offensive with some deliberation, under reasonably normal conditions and more nearly on an equal footing with the other armies.

We had learned from reports and from photographs taken by our aviators that the enemy had greatly strengthened the most prominent points back of his lines, while captured documents indicated his intention of organizing a position along the west slopes of the Barricourt ridge. The eastern spurs of this ridge commanded all the crossings of the Meuse and formed a connecting link with the high ground east of the river about Cote Saint-Germain.

The infantry advanced to the assault at 5:30 the morning of November 1, following an accurate barrage of artillery and machine-gun fire, which beat down German resistance over a zone of 1,200 yards in depth. Squadrons of swift-flying combat planes drove the enemy planes from the air and fired on the hostile infantry, while the bombing squadrons harassed important points behind the enemy's lines. The attack went forward with precision, gaining momentum with every mile.

Enemy Badly Beaten Everywhere.

For the first time the enemy's lines were completely broken through. Although he had been badly beaten on all parts of the front he had hitherto been able to avoid this disaster. By the magnificent dash of our First army, however, the enemy now found himself in the same situation that had confronted the allies earlier in the war.

The Fifth corps in the center drove a wedge into the German defenses, swept through the zone of their artillery, and by night had reached the heights of Barricourt, five miles from the front of departure. The enemy's lines had been decisively crushed, thanks to the splendid performances of the Eighty-ninth and Second divisions.

The Third corps had strongly supported the Fifth corps, the Ninetieth division carrying all its objectives without a reverse, and the Fifth division on its right reaching the Meuse, north of Brieulles, and capturing Clery-le-Grand.

On the left of the army in the First corps the Eightieth division co-operated with the Second division in the capture of Imecourt and reached the corps objective north of Sivry. The remainder of the corps was unable, in spite of great efforts, to make much headway against the Bois des Loges, although the Seventy-eighth division did gain a foothold in that wood.

By the evening of November 1 the situation of the enemy was so serious that he had either to deliver a strong counter-attack or to withdraw from all territory south of Buzancy-Boult-aux-Bois. The blow struck by the First army had, however, given him such a shock that he was unable to take strong offensive action, although he still offered serious resistance.

Germans Hurled Beyond Meuse.

The attack continued with vigor November 2 and 3, the Third corps hurling the enemy beyond the Meuse near Dun-sur-Meuse and Stenay. The Fifth division on the 2nd captured Doulcon and the Ninetieth took Villers-devant-Dun. The following day the Ninetieth pushed through the woods on its front and established its line along the heights overlooking the river in the neighborhood of Villefranche.

In the Fifth corps the Eighty ninth division November 2 captured Tailly in the face of heavy machine-gun fire, and the following day seized Barricourt and drove the enemy backward to Beauclair. The Second division made a slight advance on this date, resuming the attack the 3rd.

That night the Third brigade (Col. James C. Rhea), by a perilous night march through the extensive Foret de Dieulet passed completely beyond the enemy's lines and captured German troops in their billets. By midnight the head of the column was in firm possession of la Tuilerie farm, just south of Beaumont.

The success of the attack in the center, November 1, compelled the retirement of the enemy on the entire front of the First corps. The Eightieth division on the 2nd reached the new German defensive position, broke through it and took Buzancy. The following day, against heavy fire, the Eightieth established its line along the road running southeast from St. Pierremont.

The Seventy-seventh division now succeeded in passing Champigneulles, and by the night of the 2nd had reached Harricourt. The following morning it drove the enemy to the hill north of St. Pierremont, where it was held up by heavy machine-gun fire.

Pershing Spends Day at Front.

The Seventy-eighth division captured the Bois des Loges the 2nd, and established its line along the eastern edge of the Bois de Bourgogne north to Briquenay, and continuing on the 3rd, captured Germont and Verrieres.

My diary notes:

> "Souilly, Thursday, November 7, 1918. Had long talk with Stettinius about ordnance on Monday. Visited Second army headquarters and found indications of withdrawal on that front.
> "Spent the day at front. Went through Grandpre, overtaking Dickman's First corps headquarters at Harricourt; he was pushing troops toward Sedan. Returned through St. Juvin and found traffic in difficulties, many trucks having run off the road in the darkness. Gave directions to use lights on all motor transport.
> "Received letter from Marshal Foch today asking for six American divisions for new offensive south of Metz. Our advance has been continuous. Recommended Harbord and McAndrews for promotion to grade of lieutenant general."

By November 4, the enemy, greatly disorganized, was retiring before the vigorous pursuit of our troops on the entire front of the First army. His withdrawal was strongly protected by cleverly placed machine guns and well-organized delaying operations.

The following telegram came to me on the afternoon of the 5th:

> "The operations begun November 1 by the First American army, due to the valor of the command and to the energy and bravery of the troops, have already assured results of great importance. I am happy to send you my congratulations.

CHAPTER LXIV

Our success had been so striking since the beginning of the November 1 attack that I felt full advantage should be taken of the possibility of destroying the armies on our front and seizing the region upon which Germany largely depended for her supply of iron and coal. In accordance with these views the following order was issued to the First and Second armies:

> "The energetic action of the First army should completely expel the enemy from the region between the Meuse and the Bar within the next few days. The results obtained by this army have been felt on the entire front from the Moselle to Holland. . . .
> "It is desired that, in carrying out the directions that are outlined herein, corps and division commanders push troops forward wherever resistance is broken, without regard for fixed objectives and without fear for their flanks. Special attention will be given to impress upon all officers and soldiers that energy, boldness and open warfare methods are demanded by the present situation.
> "2. The First and Second armies will at once prepare to undertake operations with the ultimate purpose of destroying the enemy's organization and driving him beyond the existing frontier in the region of Briey and Longwy. . . ."

Between the Meuse and Chiers rivers, north and northeast of Stenay, there was a very strong position which commanded the crossings in that vicinity. I believed that if we should cross the river south of Stenay and move in the direction of Montmedy we could turn this position and have an excellent opportunity to capture large numbers of German troops driven back on the line Sedan-Montmedy. By this maneuver we would also be in an advantageous position to advance on the important supply areas of Longwy and Briey.

An attack by the Third corps to the east across the Meuse, south of Dun-sur Meuse, in conjunction with the northward movement by the French Seventeenth corps, was prepared as a preliminary to a new line of advance to the east.

November 3, 4 and 5, the Fifth division of the Third corps in a brilliant maneuver on a wide front effected crossings of the Meuse and established bridgeheads south of Dun-sur-Meuse. The heights of the Meuse were gradually cleared by the Third corps and the French Second Colonial corps, which had relieved the French Seventeenth corps. Now for the first time since 1914, the French positions around Verdun were completely free from the menace of these heights.

In these operations the Fifth division, assisted by a regiment of the Thirty-second, on November 5 had captured Milly and established its line from there south to the Bois de Chatillon. By night of the 9th it had advanced to Remoiville and north of Mouzay.

Our front was also extended to the south, and by November 10 an excellent line of departure was secured for an offensive in the direction of Montmedy. The Seventy-ninth division (Kuhn), in the French Second Colonial corps, met decided opposition in its attacks of the 4th, 5th and 6th against the Borne de Cornouiller, and this strong point was finally taken on the 7th. On the following day the Seventy-ninth, with units of the Twenty-sixth division (Bamford) attached, advanced on its entire front, and on the 9th took Wavrille.

Between November 3 and 7 the Twenty-sixth division, on the right of the Seventy-ninth, made no attack. On the 8th it took up the pursuit of the retiring enemy, and by night of the 9th occupied a line which included Ville-devant-Chaumont.

The Eighty-first division (Bailey) entered the line as the right division of the French Second Colonial corps, November 7, relieving the Thirty-fifth division (Traub). Attacking on the 9th against stiff defense, it captured Manheulles and Moranville.

Reaching the Meuse.

The Eighty-ninth division, Fifth corps, overcoming stubborn opposition, captured Beaufort on the 4th and reached the Meuse. The Foret de Jaulny was cleaned up the following day, and Cesse was occupied. The Second division in its attack of the 4th suffered heavy losses and made slight headway, but during the next two days it continued rapidly, and by night of the 6th reached the Meuse south of Villemontry.

In the First corps the Eightieth division, on the 4th, in spite of the enemy's stand, captured Vaux-en-Dieulet and Sommauthe. The enemy retired during the night and the division took up the pursuit, overcoming vigorous rear guard resistance until reaching a line north and west of Beaumont. During the night of the 5th its progress continued, the division being relieved the next morning.

The Seventy-seventh division was effectively opposed on the 4th north and east of Oches, but on the 5th its line was pushed forward to the north of Stonne and La Besace. By night of the 6th the Seventy-seventh had reached the Meuse, Remilly and Villers being entered by its patrols.

The Seventy-eighth division on the 4th captured Les Petites Armoises, and on the following morning advanced more than a mile to the north. The Forty-second division relieved the Seventy-eighth on this line, and by the 6th established itself north of Bulson.

It was the ambition of the First army, and mine, that our troops should capture Sedan, which the French had lost in a decisive battle in 1870. I suggested to General Maistre that the prescribed boundary line between our First and the French Fourth army might be ignored in case we should outrun the French, to which he offered no objection, but on the contrary warmly approved.

To reach the objective the left boundary of the First army would have to be ignored, as Sedan lay to the northwest beyond that limit. The afternoon of November 5, the First corps was directed to bend its energies to capture Sedan "assisted on its right by the Fifth corps."

A misconception in the Fifth corps of the exact intent of my orders resulted in the First division erroneously going beyond the left boundary of the Fifth corps and marching directly across the sector of the First corps during the late afternoon of the 6th and throughout the night. The troops of the First division carried out this unnecessary forced march in fine spirit, despite their tired condition.

Considerable confusion resulted in the Forty-second and Seventy-seventh divisions, and their advance was delayed as roads became blocked by the columns of the First division. The Forty-second and the First then began a race for the honor of capturing Sedan. Part of these divisions had entered the zone of the French Fourth army and were waging a fight with the enemy for the possession of the heights south and west of Sedan.

The morning of November 7 found men of the Forty-second and the First divisions on the heights overlooking the city. Under normal conditions the action of the officer or officers responsible for this movement of the First division directly across the sectors of two other divisions would not have been overlooked, but the splendid record of that unit and the approach of the end of hostilities suggested leniency.

The enemy's main line of communications was now within range of the machine guns of the First army, which had driven him 24 miles since November 1. His position on the western front was no longer tenable and he urged immediate consideration of an armistice.

Late on November 9 Marshal Foch, then in conference with German representatives regarding the terms of the armistice, sent telegraphic instructions to all allied commanders in chief from which it might be inferred that he was uncertain regarding the outcome of negotiations and wished to let the enemy know that there would be no further delay. The following was the message received:

> "The enemy, disorganized by our repeated attacks, retreats along the entire front.
> "It is important to co-ordinate and expedite our movements.
> "I appeal to the energy and the initiative of the commanders in chief of their armies to make decisive the results obtained."

HOW THE TWELVE APOSTLES DIED

By Pleasant Grove Correspondent

According to the generally received traditions of the church Andrew suffered martyrdom at Patrae, in Achaia, on a cross of the form known as St. Andrew's Cross; Bartholomew James, the elder son of Zebedee was beheaded. James, the brother of our Lord, was probably starved to death; Matthew died a natural death; Phillip died a violent death at Hiorapolis; but by what mode is uncertain; Simon Peter was crucified at Rome; Thaddeus or Jude, probably suffered martyrdom in Persia; John the beloved disciple, lived according to Jerome to be about 100 years old, and died at Ephesus; Simon Zelotes was crucified at 129 years of age; Thomas was put to death in India, and Judas Iscariot hung himself.

ARMISTICE DAY

November 11 marked the 13th anniversary of the Armistice which ended the world's greatest tragedy. Yet the effects of the war are still felt everywhere, and unrest is as widespread as it was before that great struggle

In spite of the efforts which have been made since 1918 in the interest of peace the outlook for the future is not reassuring. The needs and aspirations of nations are unsatisfied, and the desire [illegible] can not be met without encroachment upon its neighbors.

[illegible] Manchuria and Mongolia, where the conflicting interests of China, Japan and Russia menace the peace of the Far East

While less acute for the moment, the racial and economic antagonisms among European nations still exist, and the political air is filled with distrust

In view of these conditions, Armistice Day this year should remind all people of the horrors of the last war, and cause them to pause before taking any aggressive step which might lead to another.

PEOPLES TELEPHONE COMPANY ACCEPTS CONTRACT OF GILES

At the board meeting of the Peoples Telephone Company here Monday, the president, Mr. Jesse Baker, and all of the board were present. The meeting was to dispose of some unfinished business left over from last week, that being the final decision as to an operator for the coming year. It was decided that A. L. Giles be retained as central operator, his duty being also to keep up the lines inside the corporate limits of Clanton.

The matter of moving the office to new quarters was taken up, and it was decided by the board to move the central into the house of Mr. John Giles on third Avenue in East Clanton. The work of moving will be done within the next few weeks, according to the present plans.

The board urges the payment of central fees as fast as possible, as the funds of the company are now exhausted. Mr. Jesse Baker, the president, said: "We believe that we can give fair service this year with reasonable co-operation from the phoneholders. The phones are needed this time worse than ever before, due to the fact that lots of people are not able to operate automobiles; but we believe that everyone can scrape up $2.50 to pay their central fee with. I want to urge everybody to pay just as soon as possible so that we may be able to pay as we go. We don't owe anything now, and we want to stay that way."

Below is a copy of the contract which was offered by Mr. Giles and accepted by the Board of Directors:

Operator Contract

I, the undersigned, A. L. Giles, hereby agree to operate the central of the People Telephone Company, for the year beginning November 1, 1931, and ending October 31, 1932. I also agree to keep up the lines of said company within the corporate limits of Clanton, Alabama, said Company to furnish all material.

In the operating of said central I agree to keep the switchboard in as good repair as I can, considering the condition of same and to keep an operator at said switchboard ready to answer any calls from all lines both night and day. I further agree that the operator at said switchboard will use no partiality in the service given but will render to all who pay central fees the very best service possible regardless of the line they are on. This same method will be followed in keeping up the lines within the corporate limits of Clanton, Alabama.

It is my understanding that the Peoples Telephone Company agrees to pay the house rent and the light bills incident to operating said central office.

This, the 9th day of November, 1931.
(Signed), A. L. GILES.

An arrangement has been worked out whereby Mr. Giles will rebuild and work up the interest on some of the lines that have been out of commission for the past two years. Anyone interested in getting your old line put back in without cost to you, see Mr. Giles or some members of the Board.—T. E. WYATT, Sec'y.

COOSA, CHILTON WILL PUSH TAX SUIT HEARING

Counties Plan To Seek Swift Showdown On Rejection Of Equality Demand

The Alabama Journal, Montgomery, stated Tuesday afternoon that having been turned down by State Tax Commissioner S. R. Butler in their effort to place the Alabama Power Company on a tax equality with other tax payers, citizens of Coosa and Chilton Counties now plan to press vigorously for an early showdown in their mandamus suit to compel the "one-man tax commission" to cease its flagrant favoritism and assess the power company's property at sixty per-cent of its value, as all other property is assessed.

This announcement, according to the Montgomery paper, was made by Rep. Felix Smith, of Coosa county, one of the attorneys for the Coosa and Chilton county boards of revenue in the mandamus proceedings.

In a telegram to Judge L. H. Reynolds of Chilton County, a reporter of the Montgomery newspaper had the following to say,

"Judge L. H. Reynolds
Clanton, Alabama.

"Would you wire to me briefly any comment you care to make on Butler Tax decision also advising as to plans for pushing court action. Wire me collect care Mobile Register."

HUBERT BAUGHM.

Following is the reply from Judge Reynolds, wired to the reporter Tuesday:

Hubert Baughm,
c/o Mobile Register,
Mobile, Alabama.

"Chilton and Coosa Counties do not propose to be bound by the arbitrary and unreasonable tax valuation fixed by Alabama one Man Commission. Court proceeding will be pushed to the limit.

JUDGE L. H. REYNOLDS."

State Tax Commissioner Butler made it known last Saturday that the power company assessment would remain as it had been set, it was stated.

Enterprise Defeats Mt. Pleasant Friday

A very interesting game of basket ball was played between the Mt. Pleasant and Enterprise teams at Enterprise Friday, November 13. The usual interest manifested in this game is attributed to the fact that both these teams had won every game played with other schools this year. The Mt. Pleasant record was broken when the Enterprise team claimed the victory with a score of 17 to 8.

Curtis and Cecil Traywick were high point men on the Mt. Pleasant team. Curtis made 5 points, Cecil 2 and L. Burnett 1, making a total score of 8. The other players on this team were H. Littlejohn and H. Parker.

James Griffin led the Enterprise team, making 8 of the 17 points. Guy Silas piled the score up 6 points and Cecil Yeargan scored 3 points, making a total of 17 for Enterprise. The other players on this team were L. C. Cagle and Lois Stroud.

The players of the two teams who did not score were by no means idle. They were on the alert, staying on the defense of the opposing team. Both teams struggled for victory during the game and the Mt. Pleasant team did not acknowledge defeat until the game was ended.

TWO KILLED IN SHOOTING NEAR CALERA

Randolph Man Is Killed By Calera Police Chief After Shooting

Calera, Ala., Nov. 15.—Two men were shot to death, one instantly, in a shooting affray on the Montevallo Highway near here, at 5 p.m. Sunday, following an attempted arrest of an automobile part accused of disorderly actions in Calera.

Luke McCary, resident of Randolph, Ala., was shot and killed instantly by Chief of Police H. A. Miller, of Calera, who said Filma Cost, of Calera, was shot in the abdomen and fatally wounded by McCary, just before he was killed by the officer.

Cost was rushed to a hospital in Birmingham, but died en route. He was a farmer and a resident of Calera.

Shortly before the double tragedy, an automobile in which McCary, Cost, Mrs. McCary and a man named Millstead, a railroad employe, were riding, halted in front of a pottery shop in Calera, Chief Miller he said he was told.

Chief Miller said L. M. Fuller, pro-

HOWARD WILL MEET DUQUESNE THANKSGIVING

Game To Be Played In Birmingham On Legion Field November 26th

Having won its first and only intersectional game of the season from Oglethorpe by a score of 12 to 0, Duquesne University, of Pittsburgh, is coming to Birmingham on Thanksgiving Day determined to maintain a clean record so far as the South is concerned. The Catholic "Night Riders" and the Howard Baptist "Bull Dogs" will meet at the Legion Field Stadium, Birmingham, in their second annual clash, with the Pittsburghers one-up on the Baptists.

Howard invaded Duquesne's territory last year and came home with the small end of a 14 to 9 score, and this year the Catholics will play a return engagement which promises local fans every thrill football can furnish. Both teams are said to be evenly matched in present-season records and manpower

The Howard Baptists are equally as determined to get revenge for last season's defeat and their 1931 season's record indicates that a battle-royal, such as Thanksgiving's combat will be, will find them on the big end of the tally, despite the fact that Coach Layden of the Catholics and a large number of students, who will accompany the team to Birmingham, believe otherwise.

It is expected that a large number of Chilton County football fans will attend the game, which will begin promptly at two o'clock. The splendid condition of the highways to Birmingham and the fact that it will be the only big game in North Alabama on Thanksgiving Day, assures a huge attendance from all sections of the state.

"Rowena Rides The Rumble" Is New Serial To Start In News Beginning In Next Week's Issue

The whole trouble lay with Peter—Peter Blande. He was the fly in the ointment, the blot on the escutcheon, the carbon knock in the motor. Things just couldn't have worked out more to Rowena's fancy, except for the persistent appearance of Peter. And there was absolutely no hope of getting rid of him—he was too deeply mixed up in everything.

To tell the truth, it was Peter's project in the first place. Rowena herself only got into it at the last minute in answer to an advertisement in the morning paper. It was Peter who put the ad in. A Rackruff Roadster, 1931 model, furnished another part of the complications.

"Rowena Rides the Rumble," written by Ethel Hueston, will make you laugh, wonder, get peeved, it is truly fascinating with its many, many incidents woven around three people who are on a cross-country tour for a motor company. This story will start in next week's issue of the News. Start with the first installment and read it thru.

YOUTH SLASHES THROAT WHILE ON LONELY ROAD

Leaving a note, and driving off to a lonely road, Garnie Wilson, age 22, of Thorsby, slashed his throat with a razor last Monday morning. It was stated that Wilson is believed to have made this attempt on his life sometime in the early hours of the morning.

He was found later Monday morning by E. W. Wilson [illegible] carried to his home and later rushed to the Central Alabama Hospital in Clanton in a Martin's ambulance. When Mr. Miller found the young man, he stated that he was exceedingly weak from the loss of blood, and hospital authorities stated Tuesday afternoon that he had a chance to recover at that time.

Information states that no motive has been found so far as to why young Wilson slashed his throat. Wilson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lum Wilson, prominent residents of the Thorsby section.

Ramer Team Will Meet Local Team

Football fans who have been following the games of the team of the Chilton County High school are promised a real treat in the way of a game next Friday afternoon on the local field at three o'clock. Coach Walker's eleven will meet the team from the Montgomery County High School, located at Ramer.

Ramer has a strong team this season and may be expected to give the Chilton boys a full four periods of fight. Ramer has played some strong teams this year and has had a fairly successful [illegible]. They were defeated by the Sidney Lanier Poets a few weeks ago by the score of 18 to nothing, but after a hard fight.

Ramer has also met the Prattville eleven on the gridiron and the Prattville team held them to a draw. Chilton also tied Prattville and this should prove Chilton as good as the team from Montgomery County High School.

Chilton has been priming for this tilt and with a good season behind them they should be ready to give all they have against the Ramer boys. This will be the last game of the season for the local boys. So far this season their record stands as follows:

Games won against Isabella (2) and Montevallo, games lost to Bibb County High, Selma, and Dallas County High. games tied with Marbury, Prattville, and Holtville. Three games won, three lost and three fought to a scoreless tie.

Letters To The Editor

MORE PROPHECIES

Editor Chilton County News:

Will you please permit me to say a few words or point out a few scriptures that are applicable to the end of this age or dispensation.

First, I learn that all prophecy has a figurehead. For instance, we take the old city of Babylon, that is the figurehead of spiritual Babylon, and Jerusalem the figurehead of the church or the kingdom of heaven. We see in Matthew, 11 chapter, 12 verse, Jesus says, "And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence and the violent take it by force." Isaiah says "Their webs shall not become garments, neither shall they cover themselves with their works. Their works are works of iniquity and the act of violence is in their hands." Jeremiah says "For thus hath the Lord of Hosts said, hew ye down trees and cast a mount against Jerusalem. This is the city to be visited. She is wholly oppression in the midst of her, as a fountain casteth out her waters, so she casteth out her wickedness, violence and spoil is heard in her. Before me continually is grief and wounds.

"Be thou instructed, O Jerusalem, lest my soul depart from thee; lest I make the desolated land not inhabited."

Ezekiel says "Violence is risen up into a rod of wickedness, none of them shall remain, nor of their multitude neither shall there be wailing for them the time is come, the day draweth near; let not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn, for wrath is upon all the multitude; for the seller shall not return to that which is sold. So we see the kingdom of heaven was taken by violence operated by vile people, and has been for nearly 28 generations.

It is called Babylon. It is full of extortioners and deceivers; but I thank God it's about seen its day. How are we to know? By reading the signs of the times, we find in the book of Nahum, says "For the Lord hath turned away the excellency of Jacob, as the excellency of Israel for the emptiers have emptied them out, and marred their vine branches. The shield of his mighty men is made red, the violent men are in scarlet, the chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation; the chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches; they shall run like the lightnings.

So we see this prophecy has reference to the cars and he says it will be in the last days or the end of this age, or just before the coming of that great and notable day of the Lord. Paul says, "For that day shall not come except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed the son of perdition. We must fall away from parties and creeds. Jesus says he that doeth the will of my father the same is my mother, my brother, and my sister. Yes, we go about trying to establish our righteousness when we haven't submitted ourselves to the righteousness of God, claiming to have the holy ghost, yet can't interpret prophecy.

Peter says, "For the prophecy came not in ol dtime by the will of man." But holy men of God spake as they were moved, by the holy ghost. If a man had the holy ghost he surely could interpret prophecy and prophesy of things to come for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy. If a man don't know anything about prophecy he don't know anything about the holy ghost. tI is a stranger to him. With best respect to all.

J. H. JACKSON.

Editor, Chilton County News:

I am asking you for space for a few words. God made a covenant with Abraham and promised him that through his seed all the families of the world would be blest. We see that Abraham had two sons, one by a bond woman and one by promise of the free woman and that the latter was a type of Jesus, who came to seek and save that which was lost and that Jesus tasted death for every man and gave himself a ransom for all to be testified in due time. This son, Isaac, wife was a type of the church and his son, Jacob's name was changed to Israel and was the father of the Israelites, which was God's chosen people for a typical purpose. They had the Law and no other nation at that time was under the Law. (The Gentiles were counted as dogs.)

We see that the Law was given or added because of transgression and was a school master to bring us to Christ (Gal. 3:24) when Jesus came to His own His own did not receive him (only a few accepted him.)

In Acts 15:14 we read, Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out a people for his name, and knowing that Israel was blinded because of unbelief. Paul says, for I would not brethren that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits that blindness in part is happened to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in, and as concerning the gospel they were enemies for your sake, but as touching the election they are beloved for the father's sake. for God hath concluded them all in unbelief that He might have mercy upon all (Rom. 11 chapter) and according to (Rev. 20:6) there is going to be two resurrections.

Blessed and holy is he that part in the first resurrection. On such the second death hath no power, and according to 16 and 37 chapters of Ezk. and the 11 chapter of Hebrews, there will be many saved in the second resurrection. For God will fulfill His promise to Abraham and to all Israel, and Christ will reign for the purpose of destroying the works of the Devil and bring all to a knowledge of the truth.

PAUL IN ROME

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Keeping up with Paul will make you busy and also a student. This time you must undertake a real sea voyage and in winter time. Work out the navigation as you allow for wind and drift and you arrive at Malta where the shipwreck took place. Begin your reading at least with chapter 24. See how Paul made friends with and gained the confidence of his centurion guard and the ship's captain. As a result the prisoner had the freedom of his own hired house in Malta, though he was necessarily chained to the changing guard. Paul went to Rome by reason of the privilege of his Roman citizenship. When he saw that he could not obtain justice at Ceasarea he demanded, "I appeal unto Caesar."

It was with real interest that the Jews in Rome arranged an audience for Paul. For many years to go to Rome had been the ambition of this great traveler. In a most thorough manner this man of many experiences retold how Jesus Christ was the Messiah of the Jews, long prophesied in Scripture. Then Paul settled down to make the most of his opportunities. First, he could gospelize as the guard was changed every few hours.

During the two years that followed Paul wrote four letters that are still helping mankind: Ephesians, Philipians, Colossians and Philemon. Try and find time to read each of these during the week. While in Rome some years ago the writer read the five letters which Paul wrote while in the midst of his two imprisonments in that city. In one of these epistles the author reveals at least one of his life secrets: "I can do all things in him that strengtheneth me," Philippians, 4:13, which is the Golden Text for today.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

November 9, 1931.

Again we are called upon to pay a tribute of respect to one of our brethren, whom the Great Architect of the Universe has seen fit to call from our midst. Bro. D. H. Gentry, who was a member of Thorsby Lodge No. 759 A. F. and A. M., passed away November 9, 1931. His loyalty and faithfulness were attested by his regular attendance, his eagerness to learn and his ability to serve. His stalwart character has left its indelible imprint upon our memory. He will be greatly missed as a citizen and Mason.

Be It Resolved, First, That we extend to his family our deep sympathy in their sorrow, and commend to them the following found in our manual: "We cherish his memory here and commend his spirit to God who gave it."

Second, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one spread upon the minutes of our lodge, and one to each of our county papers.

ACRE YIELD OF COTTON IS HIGHEST SINCE 1914

Alabama this year produced the highest yield of cotton per acre since 1914, says the Department of Agriculture.

This year's yield per acre is estimated at 198 pounds of lint. Only twice in the State's history of cotton production has this yield been exceeded—in 1911 and 1914, said the report.

The Alabama crop is forecast at 1,400,000 bales which is 15,000 bales more than indicated a month ago and 73,000 bales less than last year. Up to the first of November, 1,180,000 bales, or about 85 per cent of the crop, had been ginned.

"Father and Son Banquet" A Success

Success spelled the outcome of the "Father and Son Banquet" last Thursday night, sponsored by Prof. Benjamin Anderson, teacher of vocational agriculture at the Chilton County colored Training School. Music, debates, awarding of prizes and a delicious repast were among the many interesting things on program.

The subjects of the two debates, one by the Evening School farmers and one by the vocational boys, respectively, were as follows: Resolved that there should be no cotton planted for the year 1932, and, Resolved that it can be determined whether one animal is better than another by observation.

Mr. A. G. Gordon, a negative representative for the Evening School, kept the audience at his finger tips throughout his discourse. Mr. Ben Brown, the affirmative representative, did equally as well. The affirmative won.

With Linzie Draper, a representative on the negative side for the vocational agricultural boys, the negatives were bound to win with his eloquence, gestures and poise. Among other speakers were Ernest Bracy, Cleveland Monroe and John Dickerson.

There was music galore, the Bryant Brothers, melody four, doing their bit. They sang good old spirituals (negro) which set our souls on fire.

A miniature plow was presented to Mr. Ben Brown, one of the oldest citizens and farmers in the community, for outstanding work done on the farm. He is recognized as a farmer who lives at home and boards in the same place. Prof. Anderson in his presentation speech, said in part, "A farmer should not buy anything he can produce on his farm. Mr. Brown has not produced everything, but he has set the pace in this community, growing food and feed crops, raising chickens and live stock for milk, butter and meat. Take this little plow, keep it in remembrance of our appreciation of your service to God, to your community and to your race."

Miss Rose V. Lee, teacher of Home Economics, pleasingly served the guests with chicken sandwiches, cake and lemonade.

The banquet was to mark the close of the Evening School classes which opened in August, but the farmers voted to continue the class throughout the year.

After the delicious repast the guests departed, saying, "The best yet."

FARMERS ADVISED TO HOLD FOOD AND FEEDS

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 16.—F. W. Gist, state and federal agricultural statistician, has advised farmers not to sell their present food and feed crops at this time but to wait until next spring "at which time any surplus may be disposed of to much better advantage."

Since Alabama farmers have produced a splendid supply of food and feed crops and since credit conditions seem to be unfavorable for next spring farmers are advised not to sell their food and feed at this time" he said. "Prices are low at present but are bound to be better next spring, at which time any surplus may be disposed of to much better advantage."

FARMERS ENTER WINTER MONTHS WITH MORE FEEDS

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 16.—Alabama farmers are entering the winter months with a much larger supply of food and feed crops than they did last winter.

F. W. Gist, agricultural statistician, reports that state farmers this year produced about 18,000,00 more bushels of corn, over 1,000,000 more bushels of sweet potatoes, 900,000 more bushels of peanuts, a half million more gallons of syrup, 2,000,000 more pounds of pecans, and 34,000 more tons of hay than produced in 1930.

How Alabama Power Service Cut $5,225,000 Yearly From Alabama's Electric Bill

THE first full year of operation by the Alabama Power Company was the calendar year 1914. From 1913 to July 1, 1930, the company acquired electric plants in 93 cities and towns in Alabama. Of these, one was owned by the State and 29 were municipally-owned. Communities served by these companies had to depend upon isolated plants—few were connected with central station service. In every case rates were higher than the then prevailing rates of the company. Under rates prevailing in cities and towns at the time they were acquired by the company, customers today would pay annually $4,768,000 more than they pay the company under its existing rates. Domestic customers formerly served by municipally-owned plants save 54.5 per cent and commercial lighting customers save 63.9 per cent as a result of the changed ownership. Customers formerly receiving service from privately-owned plants before acquisition by the company save 38.7 per cent in the case of domestic service and 48.3 per cent in the case of commercial service.

In addition, savings effected from time to time in behalf of domestic, commercial and rural customers initiated by the company and savings effected through revisions and equalization in street lighting, industrial and other rate schedules approximate $442,000 annually or a total aggregate annual saving based on former rates and on existing use of about $5,225,000.

The Huntsville Daily Times

Henry F. Johnston has recently become publisher of The Huntsville Daily Times, Huntsville, Ala., having purchased that fine daily, taking it over November 2 this year. Mr. Johnston, although a few years past his twentieth birthday, is a newspaperman of experience, having been with The Birmingham News-Age-Herald for some time.

This newspaper extends its heartiest congratulations to Mr. Johnston in securing The Huntsville Daily Times and wishes him no limited measure of success in his undertaking, which is no small one. The Huntsville area is one that has wide advantages and possibilities.

In a public statement through his paper, the new publisher expresses his profound gratitude to his uncle, Mr. Victor H. Hanson, publisher of The Birmingham News-Age-Herald, for his financial assistance in securing the Daily Times. In reflecting over this statement, the editor of this newspaper remembers, in regard to Mr. Hanson, "There is a man, a newspaperman, giving young men an opportunity."

No Slump In Cleanliness

There is some anxiety among the advocates of high standards of living lest the decreased incomes of the day may be reflected in the mode of daily life. Discouragement, as well as straitened circumstances, they fear, may lead to neglected homes and to general carelessness.

Such fears should prove to be entirely without foundation. The love of cleanliness and order is too well established in American character to be discarded by temporary financial difficulties. It is more likely that our own reactions will be similar to those of the Germans recently described by a newspaper correspondent: "Cleanliness, order, frugality, these are what immediately strike you in entering a poor German home. . . There will be growing flowers on the window sill, the carpetless floor will be scrubbed white, the curtains will be clean, everything will be placed in such regimental order that the tiny room will seem airy, convenient, and livable."

Certainly American housewives can be counted on to make their homes cheerful, clean, and comfortable, even in the face of a depression. A well ordered home helps to combat the discouragements and disappointments that many wage-earners meet almost daily. Such a home, such a standard of living, does not involve expense. The supplies needed are of the cheapest. But it takes character to use them.

The Modern Cavalier

In the old days the man on horseback was a superior creature. At least, he regarded himself as such. In the feudal system, the man on foot had no rights which the cavalier was bound to respect. It was up to the pedestrian to get out of the way. Here rode wealth, caste and arrogance; the peasantry must make way for the gentry. The old tradition of the superiority of the cavalier died hard. It seemed so much more noble to ride a horse and give [illegible] to men on foot than it did to follow a horse along a furrow, that there persists, even in America, the legend of "gentility" typified by the man on horseback. That, by [illegible] one of the reasons why the cowboy of western fiction and the movies, who in real life is [illegible] farm hand whose job requires him to ride a horse, is such a figure of romance in the eyes of youth.

There is something of the same sense of superiority manifested by many persons who drive automobiles in these days. They seem to have only arrogant contempt for people on foot, and to look down with scorn on those who drive shabbier or cheaper cars than their own. This is not true of the great majority of motorists, of course, but it is true of enough of them to account for a high percentage of the annual toll of deaths caused by the automobile. More than half of the 35,000 persons killed in the past year on the highways were pedestrians run down by cavalier motorists.

An old proverb reads: "Put a beggar on horseback and he'll ride to the devil." The automobile has brought power of life and death into the hands of thousands who are unfitted for it by training and intelligence. Even in the older days there had developed the motto "noblesse oblige," which signifies that nobility recognized its responsibility toward the lower classes. It would not do to run down the commonalty too recklessly. But there are thousands of motorists today who recognize, apparently, no responsibility toward anyone, and who seem to become intoxicated by the sense of power as soon as they sit behind a steering wheel.

For such drivers, who are responsible for most of the highway accidents and deaths, there is but one remedy. To try to impress a sense of social responsibility upon such people is worse than useless; they simply don't know what you are talking about. Prompt and severe punishment for every infraction of the motor vehicle laws and regulations resulting in accident or death is the only deterrent. A mere fine is not enough for most of these lawbreakers. Imprisonment without option, and revocation of the license to drive a car, once it is generally understood that these penalties will be enforced upon all alike, may result in time in making our roads safe for the ordinary, law abiding citizen.

PAST-PRESENT-FUTURE
IN CHILTON COUNTY

How many people are forming or have formed a habit of using that little word "If"? It is a small word, easily spelled, easily pronounced and used, but a bad word in most every case when used. It is a word that many are inclined to hide behind, use as an alibi. How many times have you used it as an alibi? Say for instance that you ignored the word, what could you have done?

Indications point favorably toward a Democratic victory in the coming presidential election, according to "what I read in the papers," and from opinions expressed in Washington.

Did you know that Chilton County is one of the very very few Republican counties in the Great Democratic State of Alabama? It's true. But, at the same time we wonder if it is really Republican, or is it just a gang that are ruling. It does seem strange, frankly, that Chilton County should be termed "Republican," with all the many Democratic counties in the state, and with so many of the residents of Chilton County having come over here from Coosa County, a solid Democratic County.

Instances show up where a person who has voted the so-called Republican ticket in Chilton County for many years, just vows he will not do it again, and then when election time comes around somebody will slip a bug in his ear and he'll make a cross under the elephant, apparently having forgotten his boasting statement, "I'll never vote for that again." But they do it, and can't tell you why, either.

But just what do these "bugs" referred to above, amount to in the long run? Of course they sound good to a person when being uttered by a smooth-tongued politician who seems to have a little influence, but after the show-down, what does it mean? That is what makes the author of this column wonder—Is Chilton County really a Republican County, or do many of the voters need a little backbone and guts enough to vote their own personal conviction? That is rather plain spoken, but possibly will ring true.

In my opinion, a man or woman, who is old enough to think and knows right from wrong, and will allow someone else to tell them how to vote, not allowing themselves to vote as they wish or think best, have little business of being a voter. Their ballots in that case are not their own, but have been humbly given to someone else. Your ballot is your rightful voice as a citizen, and when you allow someone else to cast it for you as they wish, then it ceases to be your ballot—you have given it away. Vote by all means, but don't allow some smooth-tongued politician tell YOU how you should vote. Think for yourself.

Monday was a very quiet day in Clanton and other towns in the county, but merchants have reported a splendid trade during last Friday and Saturday. No doubt with the advent of cooler weather, trade will pick up considerably.

Have you stopped to think and make some preparations for Christmas. It's not long off, and although the weather does not feel so much like Christmas, that doesn't prevent it from arriving on December 25th, next month as usual. It would be a wise thing now to make up your Christmas gift list and do a little shopping before a price or two will increase with the coming increase in trade.

MR. MERCHANT—

I have not noticed any display of Christmas goods. I realize that the weather is something of a drawback on Christmas trade, but to you, Mr. Merchant, stands the responsibility of reminding the buying public that Christmas is near at hand and that you are in business and sell articles suitable for gifts. How are you going to do it? The answer is to show a little progressiveness, "primp" up your windows, show cases, and by all means get your message out to the people by advertising.

Some merchants say, "I've been in business here for fifteen years or so, and everybody knows I'm here. I don't have to advertise." Yes, part of that is true. Perhaps everybody does know he is there, but do they trade with him? Does he send his message out to the people inviting them to see him, telling them what he has to sell, and how much he wants for it?

One of the best arguments in favor of advertising I have ever heard was something like this. William Wrigley, the chewing gum magnate, was traveling on a train with a friend. The friend was glancing through a well known magazine and saw a large Wrigley Gum advertisement. At that moment they passed a huge bill board with a Wrigley sign on it. He turned to Wrigley and asked, "Why do you keep spending millions for advertising when your gum is known the world over and everybody uses it?" Wrigley's reply was something like this, "If you were running a locomotive, and had up a sufficient amount of steam, would you stop putting coal in the firebox, and expect the locomotive to continue to run?"

Everybody's Business

In connection with the recent Fire Prevention Week, Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde made a plea to farmers and rural dwellers to reduce the gigantic annual fire loss on farms—a loss said to total $100,000,000 in property and 3500 lives.

Fire Prevention Week is over. But that advice is still good—and will always be good. Every fire prevented, as Secretary Hyde pointed out, represents that much gain for the community, and a reduction in farm fire loss is equivalent to an increase in farm income.

At present, farm property losses due to fire total about a fifth of the entire national waste in property, and a third of the waste in lives. Practically all farm fires, like those in cities, are preventable. The principal causes are defective chimneys and flues, sparks on combustible roofs, lightning, careless use of matches and smoking, spontaneous ignition of farm products, careless handling and storage of gasoline and other inflammable and explosive liquids, defective wiring and improper use of electrical appliances. Almost all of these menaces may be minimized by care and thought on the part of the farmer.

Every community should organize in an effort to prevent fire. It should do this, not for one week each year only, but for fifty-two weeks. Public opinion should be used to bring home to the individual his personal responsibility for fire. Every fire damages the whole community, and costs the whole community money. It is one case where one person's business is everybody's business.

Two Are Killed In Shooting Near Calera

prietor of the shop, reported the party acted disorderly in the shop, damaged wares on display and finally drove away with some objects of pottery.

Chief Miller said Fuller reported the occurrence to him and the two departed in the chief's car in pursuit of the other machine. Overtaking the group at a point about a mile west of Calera on the route to Montevallo, Chief Miller said he ordered the car to halt after he had succeeded in blocking the highway.

When the car stopped, he said, he ordered the occupants to get out. Cost was driving and McCary was sitting near him, the officer said.

Chief Miller reported that at this point McCary produced a pistol and that Cost, apparently in an effort to prevent McCary from firing, siezed his pistol, the bullet striking Cost, and then wheeled around, pointing the weapon at the officer.

Chief Miller said he then shot McCary, the bullet entering his heart and killing the latter instantly.

After the tragedy, Mrs. McCary and Millstead were returned to Calera for questioning. No charges were placed against the two survivors or the chief of police Sunday night.

Funeral services for McCary were held at Randolph Monday. Martin & Sons were in charge, with Rev. B. Lawrence officiating.

Senior III Memorial Electric Clock System Installed

The Senior III Class of 1931-1932 is very proud of the new clock that has recently been installed in Chilton County High School. They are going to leave this clock as a memorial to their Alma Mater. They had a substantial payment to make on it which speaks will for the general activity and interest of the class.

This clock embodies the most advanced features of electric time system engineering. It automatically supervises the entire system. All secondary units check hourly with the master clock, positively preventing scattering and insuring correct time throughout the entire system.

The clock winds itself every minute, sounds all the warning and signal bells, cuts off every night at 6:00 P. M. cuts back on next morning at 6:00 A. M. Cuts off Friday night at 6:00, and cuts back on Monday morning at 6:00. When regulated in position, it is guaranteed to run within 30 seconds per month of correct time.

The system complete, consisting of the master clock and eight secondary clocks (one in each classroom) would cost the school $543.40. The Senior Class bought only the master clock and one secondary clock which is placed in the auditorium. This cost them $335.00. They will receive one-half state aid, as this is permanent school equipment.

This project on the part of the Seniors, far surpasses any donation ever made by any graduating class in the past history of the school. We feel they are to be commended for their loyalty and school spirit.

Science Room Equipped With New Desks

The science room has always used a straight chair. These chairs have never met the needs of the room. We now have 40 new tablet—arm steel desks. The entire desk is steel except the back, seat, and the arm on which the student writes. This material will meet a long felt need in our school. We now have as good desks as can be found in any high school in the State.

Dr. Haskew At Assembly

Dr Haskew made his regular visit to our school last Monday at 10:15. He brought us an interesting message and inspiring words that we shall never forget. We always welcome him for he has something new for us and something that will make us better citizens of tomorrow.

Clanton And Holtville Football Game Ends In Deadlock

Chilton High football team met the strong Holtville team Friday afternoon at Clanton. The game ended in a scoreless tie with the ball in Chilton's possession on Holtville's ten-yard line. Chilton went deep into Holtville's territory in the firt minute's play. The ball was advanced to about the twenty-yard line when the drive was bolted by Holtville. The game was a hard fought one with Holtville showing unexpected strength. Jesse Frank Foshee stood out in Chilton's line, while the hard blocking and tackling of Captain Robert Sumner was outstanding in the backfield.

We are looking for the hardest fought battle of the season next Friday, when the strong Montgomery County High School team from Ramer comes to play the last game on our own field. Everything points that we will win this game.

"Safety First" A Howling Success

Those who did not see "Safety First" last Friday night at the high school auditorium, put on by the Grammar School, missed an hour and one-half of real fun and spontaneous laughter. The play was a great success from beginning to end. The characterization was splendid and the humor was of the kind that inspires hearty response.

A MAN WITHOUT HATE

There has been published the interesting autobiography of H. Rider Haggard, the English novelist whose vivid tales have entertained and charmed millions of readers throughout the world. This autobiography was written several years ago, but Haggard stipulated that it should not be published until after his death, which occurred in 1925.

The author of "King Solomon's Mines," "She," and forty-odd other stories reveals a versatile and kindly personality and recounts his adventures in various parts of the world. Perhaps his most striking passage is that in which he says: "I have known many emotions, all of them, I think, except that of hate."

What a fine thing it was to be able to say that! How many of us have known all the emotions except hate?

4-H Girls Saved Food For College

Four former 4-H club members, now freshmen at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, have set a record in efficient management which will be difficult to excel. A cash outlay of $3.85 for the four of them represents their expenditures for groceries for the first month of school.

Elizabeth Lawson and Nellie Fuller of Macon County, Elise Edwards, Lee County, and Opal Jones, Butler County, are the girls who have set the record. Each of them came from a farm where food was plentiful and cotton cheap.

In order to attend college it was necessary to manage well. With the encouragement and help of their home demonstration agents, the girls made plans for keeping house together. They spent last summer canning food to be used throughout the winter.

Their pantry is well stocked with every available product of the farm and each product has been prepared in a multitude of forms. Canned fruits, vegetables, meats, jellies, pickles, jams, marmalades, and all the other goodies are ready for preparation of well-balanced meals. They also have cured hams and bacon, dried fruits and vegetables and potatoes. Occasionally their families send fresh vegetables.

They keep accurate account of all supplies provided by each girl in order to keep the amount balanced. Two of the girls prepare meals for a week while the other two clean their apartment. They shift every Sunday.

All of the girls are popular on the campus and are taking an active part in all phases of college life.

There is some good work being carried on among the W. M. U. ladies of this circle, helping and caring for the poor and orphans, and we hope this work will continue.

Some of the ladies motored to Billingsley last week and did some shopping.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Ratliff and mother, Mrs. G. W. Ratliff, and little son, J. M., and little daughter, Margene; spent Saturday and Sunday with Mrs. Zula Davis in Floyd community.

Mr. Kent Minor, with Mr. J. D. Deason, and son, Dewey, motored to Selma Monday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Fill Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Willie Smith spent Saturday night and Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sansom.

"All out for Montgomery and Kilby prison," shouted the sheriff of Chilton county, as he climbed into the bus that was Montgomery bound. During one week the county sent near forty prisoners to live behind the bars. For several days the people living in one of the best counties in the State, poured law violation into the court hopper, and the rocks ground out forty strong, able bodied men for the penitentiary. Each poor prisoner may have received justice. It may be that others escaping should have gone along with the convicted. We are not talking about the right of the law to convict, but we are refering to the awful situation when men, young and old, must ride away as wards of the State. To see forty men ride away to stripes at one time is enough to melt the heart of stone. They go away from home and loved ones, they go away to receive a stigma on their lives that time will never wash away. There is something radically wrong with our ideals when such sights greet the eyes of our people. It is time that every law abiding citizen in Chilton county should ask himself this question, "Am I doing all I can to prevent the violation of law?" I fear that many on the outside of the prison wall, are directly, and indirectly, responsible for some of those poor mortals who are now wards of the state at Kilby. "Forty men out for Kilby" should echo in our hearts, and stir in us a passion to see that our laws are obeyed.

On every hand I hear it being said, "I have no money to give to the church." Then I hear people complaining about the cost of the churches. Did you know that the last two weeks of court in Chilton county cost the people more than all the churches in the county? It is not the churches that are costing us the most. The law violators in Chilton county are costing us more than all the churches combined. We have to pay big salaries for men to hunt out the law breakers, we have to pay big salaries for men to try the cases, we have to waste much precious time hanging around the court house during court week, and besides all this, the county is at an expense of about a thousand dollars per day when court is in session. Law violators in Chilton county are costing the county not less than a hundred thousand dollars every year. I suppose that the cost of the churches in our county would not go above ten thousand dollars for one year. Better do your complaining about the cost of wickedness, and not about the cost of the church.

It was about two o'clock in the afternoon. and Clanton people were quietly moving about in pursuit of their duties, when the fire whistle screamed its alarm. I rushed to the door of my home to see how long it would take the fire force to gather and be off to fight the flame. In one minute and twenty seconds the boys had gathered and the truck was on its way to the burning building. That was what I call service. There was something that needed to be done, and the Clanton boys did it. At the sound of the whistle every member of the fire department dropped what he was doing, and with all possible speed he went to do what was calling for his help. There are many things in our city that need to be done, but they do not seem to be as urgent as the call of the fire alarm, and we are prone to delay. When people get in earnest about a task, it is going to be done. I like that passage in the Bible where it says, "Do with all thy might, whatsoever your hands find to do." This thing of delaying, postponing, putting off until tomorrow—the thing that should be done now, is an abomination in the sight of God.

The judge was sitting on his bench, the jury was in the box, the sheriff stood on duty. A preacher tried to enter the Courthouse door. He was told to stand back. He learned that every seat was taken. He stood on the outside of a closed door and his thoughts went wild as he looked over his surroundings. On the inside the court was investigating a case of law violation, and the multitude was there to get a whiff of the odor. Crowds surged up and down the stairway, and milled about the courthouse yards. More people had gathered to listen to the proceedings of court, than had gathered into any church in the county during the year. Many girls of the teen age were pressing their way in and out of the court room. Young mothers stood about with a babe in arms, wanting to see and hear. My heart burned within me as I witnessed the morbid tendency of the human mind. If people in Chilton county would crowd to God's house as they do to the county courthouse during court week, there would not be so many cases coming up for trial. As long as we have crowded court houses, and empty churches, as long as we have morbid minded men and women to push their way into court trials, just so long will we have corruption and more corruption.

The school work is moving along nicely. The enrollment at present is about 200. Attendance for the second month this far has been slightly better than the first month, which was about 92.5 per cent.

Mrs. Wright, our 6th grade teacher, presented an interesting program at chapel exercises last Friday morning. Several of the members of the 6th grade staged a highly pleasing negro comedy act; while several members of her Junior I English class dramatized the play entitled, "Little Women."

The Liberty Hill quartet has promised to render a program for the school in the next few days.

The Mt. Pleasant school plans to sod the ground of our school yard with grass and shrubbery and shade trees, after the next rain. Due to the present drought it has been almost impossible to beautify our grounds.

An entertainment is going to be given in honor of the Junior III Class soon.

The Mt. Pleasant faculty and student body are glad to know that their friend, Mrs. Frank E. Mastin, is rapidly recovering from recent illness.

The school is deeply gratified to Mrs. Mastin for her recent contribution of a nice set of Encyclopedia to Mt. Pleasant Junior High, also to Mr. Mastin who gave a large number of beautiful and attractive pictures to the school.

The Mt. Pleasant boys team suffered their first defeat of the season when the heavier Enterprise lads won over them last Friday by the count of sixteen to eight. Two of the regular Mt. Pleasant boys were suffering with a sprained and swollen hands. This made necessary the use of a substitute player who was unable to match speed with the clever little forward, Griffin, who led the Enterprise team in scoring with 9 points. Most of the points on both sides were made through foul shots. Two goals were registered by Mt. Pleasant and four by Enterprise, is evidence of the close guarding an unnecessary fouling by both teams.

Enterprise will come to Mt. Pleasant next Friday afternoon for a game at three o'clock. Both teams being almost evenly matched a hard fought and interesting game can almost be assured. We expect a large crowd out to cheer the boys.

More than Indemnity

Your fire insurance dollar provides far more than you realize. Of course it protects you from financial loss in case of fire. But it does so much more that it ranks as one of the most effective dollars you spend.

Merely as indemnity, Stock Fire Insurance is one of the cheapest necessities. Its average rate has consistently declined for more than 20 years, until in 1930 it reached the lowest figure in all American fire insurance history.

STOCK FIRE INSURANCE

teaches better building practices—furnishes a service for the suppression of arson, another for the improvement of community fire defenses and conducts many general fire prevention activities, all of which have contributed to the reduction of fire waste and the loss of life by fire.

No Respite for Enemy.

Orders in response to this appeal were immediately issued and their execution by the First army was under way November 10 and 11. Yet here again no sort of urging was necessary. Our troops were determined not to give the enemy any respite. Already the crossing of the Meuse had been planned for the whole army, and the Fifth corpse got over during the night of the 10th-11th. Part of the Eighty-ninth division crossed on rafts just west of Pouilly, and others in the rear of the Ninetieth division (Allen).

The Second division was unable to force a crossing at Mouzon, as planned, but about a mile south of Villemontry the engineers of the division, with exceptional rapidity and skill, threw two bridges across, over which one regiment passed. The Seventy-seventh division, now on the left of the Fifth corps, only sent over patrols on the 10th and 11th, the low ground north of the river opposite its front being flooded by heavy rains and damming operations by the Germans.

The First corps from November 6 to 10 was withdrawing its divisions to points on the Meuse between Dun-sur-Meuse and Verdun, preparatory to a general attack which would have as its object the turning of the enemy's strong position in front of the Fifth corps.

East of the Meuse the First army advanced in conjunction with the Second army, which had been earnestly preparing for this moment ever since its organization.

Under the instructions issued by me November 5 for the advance of the First and Second armies, which received approval of Marshal Foch in a personal note of November 8, the Second army made advances along its entire front in the direction of the Briey iron basin during the last three days of hostilities.

Attacking on the 10th, the Thirty-third division reached the Bois d'Harville and captured Marcheville, but was forced to retire. The Twenty-eighth division occupied a part of the Bois des Haudronvilles Bas, as well as Marimbois farm. The Seventh division took and held against counter-attack Hill 323. The Ninety-second division captured the Bois Frehaut.

On the front of the First army, the Ninetieth division, on the left of the Third corps (Hines), had crossed the Meuse on the 9th and attacked on the 10th, meeting decided opposition throughout the day. Elements of the division entered Stenay but were unable to clean up the town, while others, after hard fighting in the nearby wood, reached but could not take Baalon.

The Fifth division (Ely) captured Jametz and cleared the Foret de Woevre. The Thirty-second division (Haan) re-entered the line on the 9th, as the right division of the Third corps, and made substantial progress. On the 10th the division moved forward until stopped by heavy fire from east of the Thinte river.

On Other Fronts.

Meanwhile other of our divisions were engaged on distant fronts. In Flanders our Thirty-seventh and Ninety-first divisions, which had been sent to the French Sixth army at Marshal Foch's request, entered the battle October 31. The Cruyshautem ridge was taken by the Thirty-seventh division (Farnsworth) on the first day, while the Ninety-first (Johnston), advancing against intense fire, seized the strongly defended wooded area in its front. Both divisions moved forward rapidly to the Escaut river on the following day in pursuit of the enemy. Despite resistance, crossings of the river were effected by the Thirty-seventh, November 2 and 3, the division being relieved the following day. Audenarde was occupied by the Ninety-first division on the 2nd, and the division was relieved on the 3rd by the French.

Both divisions re-entered the line for the general attack of the French Sixth army November 10. The Thirty-seventh division was directed to relieve two French divisions east of the Escaut the morning of the 10th, but these divisions had been unable to cross, and were relieved on the west bank. Despite severe losses the Thirty-seventh succeeded in again crossing the river and moved forward the following day, advancing two and a half miles eastward. The Ninety-first division met slight opposition on the 10th and none on the morning of the 11th, reaching a line east of Boucle-Saint-Blaise.

In the First army the Fifth corps advanced rapidly the morning of the 11th. Elements of the Eighty-ninth division occupied Stenay and established a line on the hill to the north. Pouilly-sur-Meuse was mopped up early in the morning and Autreville occupied. The Second division advanced to the ridge west of Moulins, while the Seventy-seventh division held its line of the 10th.

In the Third corps, the morning of the 11th, the Nineteenth division entered Baalon, and the Fifth and Thirty-second divisions were preparing to attack. The Seventy-ninth division of the French Second Colonial corps attacked against the Cote de Romagne and advanced a short distance, the Twenty-sixth division made slight gains, and the Eighty-first division again took Grimoucourt.

On the front of the Second army the attack of the Thirty-third division on the 11th was held up. The Twenty-eighth division carried its line forward north of Marimbois farm, the Seventh division made no attack, and the Ninety-second division attacked but did not hold all its gains.

The line of the First army, November 11, extended from Fresnes-en-Woevre to Pont-Maugis. The Second army line ran from Port-sur-Seille to Fresnes-en-Woevre. Thus both American armies were now in position to carry out the offensive as directed by my orders November 5, which was what I had planned and advocated when Marshal Foch insisted that there should be a coverging movement of all the armies west of the Meuse, with Mezieres-Sedan as the objective of the American First army.

CHAPTER LXV

As the conference between Marshal Foch and the German delegates proceeded, and in anticipation of advices regarding the armistice, telephone lines were kept constantly open between my headquarters and those of the First and Second armies.

When word came to me at 6 a. m., November 11, that hostilities would cease at 11 a. m., directions to that effect were sent to our armies immediately. Our troops had been advancing rapidly during the preceding two days, and although every effort was made to reach them promptly a few could not be overtaken before the prescribed hour.

A brief account of the conference with the German delegates was given to me a few days later by General Weygand. He said the Germans came across the line by automobile the afternoon of November 7 and boarded a special railway coach sent by the French to meet them. During the night this car and the marshal's were placed side by side in the forest between Compiegne and Soissons.

The emissaries were ushered into the marshal's presence, and after producing their credentials were asked the object of their visit. They replied that they had come to discuss the terms of an armistice. The marshal then made it clear that he himself was not requesting an armistice and did not care to have one.

When asked if they wished an armistice they replied that they did. The marshal said that if that was the case, here were the terms, a copy of which he handed them. The severity of the demands seemed to surprise them and they appeared very much depressed. They had no power to sign an armistice they said, without the consent of the chancellor, and after some little discussion they started an officer to the German capital with the terms.

They did not seem to object to turning over 5,000 cannon, but deplored the condition which required them to surrender 30,000 machine guns. They finally succeeded in having this reduced to 25,000 machine guns on the ground that they might have some left for riot duty. In speaking of the danger of riots, the delegates were asked why they did not send some of their reserve divisions to maintain order in the interior.

Their reply was that they had no divisions in reserve, as every division that they had was actually in line. Then they complained about the short time allowed for evacuation, stating that the German army was in no condition to move, either forward or backward.

What America Had Done.

Between September 26 and November 11, twenty-two American and six French divisions, with an approximate fighting strength of 500,000 men, on a front extending from southeast of Verdun to the Argonne forest, had engaged and decisively beaten forty-three different German divisions, with an estimated fighting strength of 470,000. Of the twenty-two American divisions, four had at different times during this period been in action on fronts other than our own.

The enemy suffered an estimated loss of over 100,000 casualties in this battle, and our First army lost about 117,000. The total strength of the First army, including 135,000 French troops, reached 1,031,000 men. It captured 26,000 prisoners, 874 cannon, 3,000 machine guns and large quantities of material.

The transportation and supply of divisions to and from our front during this battle was a gigantic task. There were 26 American and seven French divisions, besides hundreds of thousands of corps and army troops, moved in and out of the American zone. A total of 173,000 men were evacuated to the rear and more than 100,000 replacements were received.

It need hardly be restated that our entry into the war gave the allies the preponderance of force vitally necessary to outweigh the tremendous increase in the strength of the Germans on the western front, due to the collapse of Russia and the consequent release of German divisions employed against her. From the military point of view we began to aid the allies early in 1918, when our divisions, with insufficient training to take active part in battle, were sent to the inactive front to relieve French divisions, that they might be used in the fighting line.

The assistance we gave the allies in combat began in May, with the successful attack of one of our divisions at Cantigny. This was followed early in June by the entrance into battle of the two divisions that stopped the German advance on Paris, near Chateau-Thierry, and by three others that were put in the defensive line.

In July two American divisions, with one Moroccan division, formed the spearhead of the counter-attack against the Chateau-Thierry salient, in which nine of our divisions participated. There was a total of approximately 300,000 American troops engaged in this Second Battle of the Marne, which involved very severe fighting, and was not completed until the Germans were driven beyond the Vesle in August.

In the middle of September an army of 550,000 Americans reduced the St. Mihiel salient. The latter part of September our great battle of the Meuse-Argonne was begun, lasting through 47 days of intense fighting and ending brilliantly for our First and Second armies, November 11, after more than 1,200,000 American soldiers had participated.

A Time to Forget Hardships.

It was a time to forget the hardships and difficulties, except to record them with the glorious history of our achievements. In praise and thanks for the decisive victories of our armies and in guidance for the future, the following order was issued:

"G. H. Q.
"American Expeditionary Forces.
"General Orders No. 203
"France, Nov. 12, 1918.

"The enemy has capitulated. It is fitting that I address myself in thanks directly to the officers and soldiers of the American expeditionary forces who by their heroic efforts have made possible this glorious result. Our armies, hurriedly raised and hastily trained, met a veteran enemy, and by courage, discipline and skill always defeated him. Without complaint you have endured incessant toil, privation and danger. You have seen many of your comrades make the supreme sacrifice that freedom may live. I thank you for the patience and courage with which you have endured. I congratulate you upon the splendid fruits of victory which your heroism and the blood of our gallant dead are now presenting to our nation. Your deeds will live forever on the most glorious pages of America's history.

"These things you have done. There remains now a harder task which will test your soldierly qualities to the utmost. Succeed in this and little note will be taken and few praises will be sung; fail, and the light of your glorious achievements of the past will sadly be dimmed.

"But you will not fail. Every natural tendency may urge toward relaxation in discipline, in conduct, in appearance, in everything that marks the soldier. Yet you will remember that each officer and each soldier is the representative in Europe of his people, and that his brilliant deeds of yesterday permit no action of today to pass unnoticed by friend or by foe.

"You will meet this test as gallantly as you have met the tests of the battlefield. Sustained by your high ideals and inspired by the heroic part you have played, you will carry back to our people the proud consciousness of a new Americanism born of sacrifice.

"Whether you stand on hostile territory or on the friendly soil of France, you will so bear yourself in discipline, appearance and respect for all civil rights that you will confirm for all time the pride and love which every American feels for your uniform and for you.

"JOHN J. PERSHING,
"General, Commander in Chief.
"Official:
"ROBERT C. DAVIS.
"Adjutant Gen 1."

The experience of the World war only confirmed the lessons of the past. The divisions with little training, while aggressive and courageous, were lacking in the ready skill of habit. They were capable of powerful blows, but their blows were apt to be awkward—teamwork was often not well understood. Flexible and resourceful divisions cannot be created by a few maneuvers or by a few months' association of their elements. On the other hand, without the keen intelligence, the endurance, the willingness, and the enthusiasm displayed in the training areas and on the battlefields, the decisive results obtained would have been impossible.

There is little to add in praise of the spirit of determination that stimulated each individual soldier to overcome the hardships and difficulties that fell to his lot. With fortitude and perseverance he gave his every energy to the accomplishment of his task, whether it required him to charge the enemy's guns or play the less conspicuous role of forwarding supplies. In their devotion, their valor and the loyal fulfillment of their obligations, the officers and men of the American expeditionary forces have left a heritage of which those who follow after may ever be proud.

Third No Score Game Of Season Played On Chilton's Field Last Friday Afternoon

The football eleven of the Chilton County High School, coached by Horton Walker, played its third no score game of the season on the local gridiron on last Friday afternoon. The Holtville team was not doped to give the Chilton boys a hard fight, but they sprang an unlooked-for surprise and fought the Chilton team on even terms for four hard and gruelling periods. The game was played last Friday afternoon on the field at the Chilton County High School at three-fifteen o'clock.

Chilton recovered the ball on the kick-off to Holtville and started a drive which seemed to be going to end across the Holtville goal, but after the first flurry Holtville tightened its defense and held Chilton for downs. The game then developed into a seesawing duel up and down the field with neither team having any great advantage of the other.

Several times during the game Chilton seemed to be on the way to the goal, but Holtville secondary never let them get entirely clear. The ice was almost broken in the second quarter when Burdette filtered through the Holtville line and on into their rear defense. He was only stopped by their safety man. The Holtville team also mixed deception with their power plays and several times broke through the Clanton defense for long gains.

Early in the second quarter Littlejohn left end for the Chilton team lay out along the side and received a long pass. With a clear field ahead of him he was drug down from behind. This ended Chilton's scoring threats and the ball remained in the possession of Holtville during the greater part of the remainder of the game. Combining end runs with smashes at the line Holtville drove again and again at the Chilton team, but met a strong resistance and could never gain suficient yardage to put the ball in Chilton territory. The Chilton line took its punishment well under the pounding of a heavier Holtville line and never gave way entirely to the charge of their opponents forwards. On the line Taylor at center and Jesse Frank Foshee and Left Tackle were the outstanding performers.

Chilton's backfield stood up well, the principal cogs being Burdette, Sumner, Tiffin and Arnold. During the last few minutes of the game Chilton in desperation began to heave a deluge of long passes two of which were completed in succession to place the ball in the shadow of their opponent's goal. These two passes, one to Littlejohn and one to Moore, were tosses by Tiffin and the whistle was all that stopped the ball from going over the line.

Chilton has played eight games so far this season. Of the eight games she has won three, tied three and lost two. Next Friday afternoon on the local field Ramer will play the Chilton Tigers. Ramer will present a strong aggregation and it will be an uphill fight for the Chilton boys if they manage to stay on even terms with their opponents. This is the last game of the season for the Chilton team and all who are interested in a good game should be out to see this one.

Pastor's Report

Clanton Methodist Church

On Wednesday I closed my work as pastor of the Clanton Methodist church. I wish to say to all who are concerned that my work among you has been pleasant. It has been a joy to worship with you, to be with you in your homes and to strike hands with you on the streets. I have never spent a more active year since I have been in the ministry. Am sorry that the fruit of my labor is not more abundant.

Some people think that a preacher has leisure time, and that he lounges about more than other people. The pastor of the Methodist church has eaten no idle bread this year. Here are a few of the things that he has done. He has traveled 12,000 miles, preached 202 sermons, made 437 pastoral calls, made 357 calls to see the sick, held 29 services for children, conducted 62 devotional meetings, made 24 addresses before clubs, schools and gatherings, attended 485 religious meetings. In addition to this he has written 21 new sermons, prepared 129 articles for publication and read 42 books. He has exercised his muscles in much repair work on the parsonage, rather than playing golf, hunting and fishing.

The Bishop and his cabinet will say whether we shall be in Clanton next year. Should we come back, our hands and hearts will be dedicated for continued service. Our blessings upon our flock and friends.

D. W. HASKEW.

Sunday school meets at 9:45 next Sunday, but there will be no preaching services at the Clanton Methodist church.

Postcard Mailed 40 Years Ago Returned To Alabama's Bishop

Forty years ago a young Methodist minister who had accepted his first pastorate at Macon, Ga., mailed a postcard to his mother, telling of his enthusiasm over his work and his need for books. The card never reached its destination, but it was returned Monday to its sender, who has since become a leader in his church.

The Rev. W. N. Ainsworth mailed the card to his mother. Mrs. J. T. Ainsworth at Elko, Ga., in 1892. The card was returned to Mr. Ainsworth, now presiding bishop of the Alabama Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at his home in Birmingham, with a letter of explanation from the postmaster at Elko.

The letter from the postmaster explained that the card was found several days ago in removing an old case. It had slipped into a crack of the oak-finished cabinet and had been hidden there for 40 years.

Bishop Ainsworth's mother died 25 years ago.

The young clergyman's father was a Methodist minister at Elko and he had written for books that he needed in his studies.—Montgomery Advertiser.

PREPARATIONS BEING MADE FOR "EVERY-MEMB. CANVASS"

It is reported that the Baptist churches of the South are making intensive preparations for their every member canvass which they propose to put on November 29 to December 6.

The object of the canvass is to raise forty million dollars ($40,000,000.00) for the total work of the Southern Baptist Convention. Thirty-one million dollars of the amount will go to the support of the local work of the churches and nine million dollars will go to missionary, educational and benevolent objects.

The objects of the Southern Baptist Convention are home and foreign missions, the three theological schools, the woman's missionary training school, the board of annuities and relief which provides for their old ministers, and the Baptist hospital in New Orleans. The objects in Alabama which will get a share of the funds are Howard and Judson Colleges, the Orphanage at Troy, State Missions and the Selma hospital.

Preparatory to making the canvass, many of the churches have on institutes in which stewardship and tithing are being taught and the workers are being trained for making the canvass.

It is said that greater interest is being shown in the proposed undertaking than has been experienced in several years and it is earnestly hoped that they will meet with great success in their efforts.

THORSBY MAY GET BOX AND CRATE FACTORY

Would Furnish Strawberry Crates For This Co. For Crops Next Year

Ever on their toes at some progressive move, Thorsby citizens and those citizens in that vicinity are now formulating plans to erect a large crate and box factory in the town. It is understood at present, that a group of men composed of E. N. Bentley, D. Gentry, Guy Higgins, Sam Pate and John Childress, all of Thorsby, have the plans for the project and presented them at a meeting of farmers and truck growers in Thorsby last Saturday afternoon.

The idea appears to have met with approval among the farmers, business men, truck and fruit growers of the Thorsby section, and the plans will now be pushed to secure more interest, it was stated. The factory will be organized into a corporation, owned by citizens of the county and possibly the major part, by those residing in the Thorsby and Jemison district.

Thieves Return Rings To Curry Thomas

"Please Return To Owner" was the only note contained with two rings sent to Upchurch Drug Co., the other day. The rings had been stolen from the home of Curry Thomas in Clanton last week. Along with the rings, there were approximately fifteen dollars taken from the home, belonging to Little Blanche Timmerman.

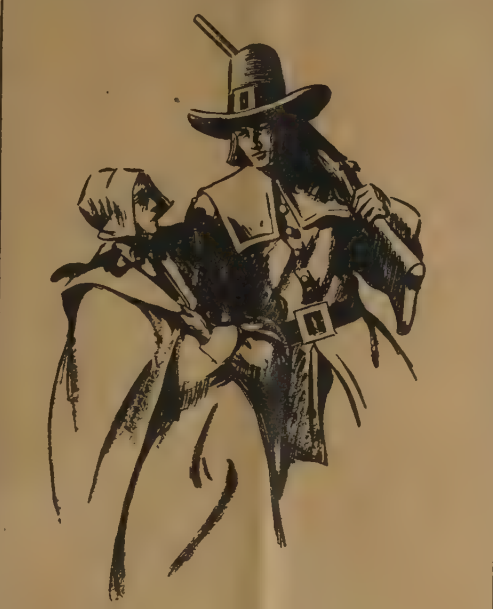
The package containing the rings bore a Montgomery, Ala., postmark. Mr. Thomas stated he wished to thank the person for returning the rings, and was sorry that they did not return the money also. He stated that he believed the robbery was committed during the day while no one was at home. Several desk drawers were also ransacked by the theives. Mr. Thomas is employed at the L & N Railroad in Clanton and the rings were property of Mrs. Thomas, a member of the grammer school faculty here.

GARNIE WILSON DISCHARGED FROM HOSPITAL THIS WEEK

The condition of Garnie Wilson, of Thorsby, who is said to have slashed his throat Monday morning of last week on a lonely road near Thorsby is much improved, according to attendants at the Central Alabama Hospital in Clanton.

Wilson will probably be discharged from the hospital this week as being out of danger. Although it is said he has not admitted having cut his throat, and has not accused anyone else, it is believed that it was his act.

Prof. J. P. Montgomery, of the Jemison High School was called to Starkville, Miss., Sunday on account of the death of a relative. He was to return to Jemison Monday.



Let Us Give Thanks

History shows that the first Thanksgiving in America was observed after the first harvest of the Pilgrims in 1621. The harvest that was gathered that year was a bountiful one and those stalwart. fearless colonists realized that to someone they owed thanks for their blessings in a strange and unexplored country where they were to make their homes.

That was three hundred and twenty-one years ago. Today, Thursday, November 26, 1931, let us think back over the past year—think of the blessings we have received, blessings not only in the way of material things, crops, foods, but such blessings that have been received otherwise from the hand of Him. Truly, we have been blessed through the past year and should take this day of Thanksgiving to express our thanks for such blessings.

Then again, let us go back to that year of 1621, when those pioneers of America braved the innumerable dangers of this great country of ours, then a wilderness, and made it possible for this present generation to have these blessings for which we are to give thanks today. The Pilgrims—they fought for a livelihood against strange foes in a strange land; they suffered those hardships unknown to most of the people enjoying the gifts and blessings of this present age, in order that generations after that first Thanksgiving Day should have a better place in which to live—America.

Let us give thanks to Him who has watched over us through these years, guided us through years of hardships, panics, and years of plenty and prosperity. We are still living and not suffering. Truly, we have plenty for which to give thanks this day.

Volunteer Firemen Entertained at Oyster Supper by Gulf Refining Co. at Matt's Lunch Shop

Members of the volunteer fire department of Clanton were handsomely entertained again last week, when the Gulf Refining Company gave an oyster supper in their honor at Matt's Lunch Shoppe Wednesday night of last week.

W. A. Willis, local distributor of Gulf products sponsored this supper and several guests, other than members of the fire department were present, including Mayor J. Lee Smith and H. G. Heflin, councilman. The long table was well arranged, with nothing lacking in the way of good things to eat so well prepared by the expert cooks at Matt's Lunch Shoppe.

At the head of the table, C. E. Stapp, county agent acted as toastmaster for the occasion and when the sixteen volunteer firemen had satisfied their appetites with the delicious food, the fun opened and several witty talks were made by various ones present. Mayor Smith spoke well of the work being done by the firemen, as did Councilman Heflin, Mr. Willis and other invited guests.

Chief Loren Smith stated in his remarks that the fire department realized it was not up to the best in fire fighting, but they were learning and really studying it. He also stated that the department appreciated the remarks of praise, but at the same time, they wanted it known that they are open to any constructive critism from the citizens of the town, and would appreciate any suggestions. This is the second supper given for the fire department this month.

COTTON REPORT

There were 18,893 bales of cotton ginned in Chilton County from the crop of 1931 prior to November 14, 1931 as compared with 20,797 bales of the 1930 crop prior to November 14, 1930, according to the report from R. J. Jones of Clanton.

The play "Always In Trouble" will be given at the Concord Junior high school Friday night, November 27th, at seven o'clock. Admission will be ten and twenty cents.

REGISTER AND BE READY TO VOTE NEXT YEAR

The Board of Registrars is meeting in this county now. There are persons who should be registered, having become of age in the past year, or have moved into this county recently. These persons should register now and become voters, paying poll tax as required.

For convenience, this paper is publishing the list of places and the dates for the Board to meet for the remainder of the year. This will be found elsewhere in this issue. There is a presidential election on hand next year and many who are to become qualified voters in this county will want to cast their ballots then, so go and register. This is important.

SPUR TRACK IS BEING LAID AT L & N THORSBY

Two Large Tanks Being Installed at Thorsby Garage To Handle Gasoline

Work is now well underway in Thorsby, Ala., for the laying of a spur track from the main line of the L & N Railroad on the east side, in front of the Thorsby Garage, and several men have been busily engaged for several days, digging a huge pit inside the large garage belonging to E. N. Bentley, well known garage man of Thorsby.

This work is being done in preparation for the handling of large quantities of gasoline by the garage, and is under the supervision of Ernie Hanson, contractor and builder, of Thorsby, Ala.

It is understood that gasoline will be handled in car load quantities and piped from the tank cars on the spur track into the two large tanks to be placed in the pit underneath the concrete floor of the garage. Mr. Bentley stated they expected to have it completed in about two weeks.

Chilton Teachers Get Checks For Sept. Work

Monday, the office of the superintendent of education and the bank were mailing out checks to Chilton County school teachers for their past due salaries of September, this year. The total amount mailed out Monday was said to be something over six thousand dollars.

It was also learned that this county is perhaps one of the first, if not the first, county to pay teachers for work done this year. All salaries of the past year have been paid, it was stated.

County Teachers May Take Holiday Thurs.

In a letter to the teachers of this county, the superintendent of education states that the County Board has decided to allow teachers, who wish to, to take Thanksgiving as a Holiday this year. However, the letter stated, all time taken off for Thanksgiving will have to be made up.

Christmas holidays will begin December 18th and schools will resume work on Monday, December 28th, according to B. Lawrence, superintendent of education.

J. T. COBERN DROWNS IN MULBERRY CREEK

Tragedy stalked along with two hunters last Thursday afternoon and claimits victim when John Thomas Cobern fell from a footlog into Mulberry creek, west of Clanton and was drowned.

Cobern, with his father, C. J. Cobern, were hunting and in attempting to cross the creek, the younger Cobern missed his footing on a log and fell into the water. Bushes there prevented him from emerging from the water, which was about five feet deep. His father was unable to help him and a negro boy attracted by the calls of the elder Cobern, assisted in getting the body from the water. Martin & Sons of Clanton prepared the body for burial.

He is survived by his widow, three daughters, one son, mother and father, and three brothers. He was one of the prominent farmers of the Mulberry, and comes from a well known family of this county.

HASKEW WILL REMAIN LOCAL M. E. PASTOR

J. M. Metcalf Also Remains Pastor Verbena Church; Troy Gets Childs

At the close of the 99th session of the Alabama Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, last Sunday afternoon, several changes in pastorates and presiding elder places were made, when the appointments were read by Bishop William N. Ainsworth.

The Rev. D. W. Haskew will remain as pastor of the Clanton Methodist church. This announcement will no doubt be received with no small amount of gladness by the people of Clanton and surrounding communities. Rev. Haskew has served as pastor of the local church faithfully and has made such friendship among those who know him here that much concern was shown over the appointments as the Conference adjourned

Verbena, Alabama will also retain its pastor, the Rev. J. M. Metcalf, who has served that church as well as other

Attempt To Burn Store Frustrated

Information from the office of the sheriff here states that an attempt was underway last Sunday night to burn the store belonging to Mr. Shoults, in the Shoults Community.

It was stated that a Mr. Moore living near the store heard noises at the rear of the Shoults store and investigating, saw three persons engaged at something at the back door of the store. He immediately summoned Mr. Shoults and when they approached the store, the three men are said to have left. A large quantity of pine straw was found on the back porch of the store and some had been pushed thru a hole in the bottom of the door. It was not learned whether the three men were recognized, but it is understood an investigation is underway.

NEGRO IN SERIOUS CONDITION FOLLOWING CUTTING AFFRAY

One negro is in the Central Alabama Hospital in Clanton with severe cuts on his head and body, and another negro is no doubt dodging the law, as the result of a cutting affray last Sunday morning near the railroad, here.

The negro in the hospital is Arthur Calhoun, and is reported as being badly cut up, with knife wounds reaching into one of his lungs, and deep and long gashes cut into his face and upper part of his body. The trouble is said to have started when the negro known as Willie C. went to his home where Calhoun also stays to get his clothes.

Chief of Police J. R. Hardy gave chase to the departing black, but he undoubtedly had made his get-away before officers reached the scene.

Special Services At M. E. Church Clanton

There will be special Thanksgiving services held at the Methodist church in Clanton on Wednesday night, November 25th, at seven o'clock, according to the Rev. D. W. Haskew, pastor.

All denominations are invited to attend these services, which are to be conducted by the pastor.

VERBENA NEGRO SHOOTS OFF TOE ACCIDENTALLY SUNDAY

Berry Varner, negro, of Verbena, is minus one toe now, and no doubt claims himself lucky at not being minus a foot. Varner accidentally shot himself last Sunday, and was in the Central Alabama Hospital Monday.

Farm Bureau Makes Membership Gains

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 25.—The Alabama Farm Bureau Federation membership campaign is progressing throughout the State and several of the counties expect to set a new enrollment record during the present year, according to Walter L. Randolph, director of membership work, who has visited 40 counties this fall in interest of the drive.

"One of the chief reasons for the present plight of agriculture, and of all people in agricultural communities, is the improper distribution of the national income," Randolph said. "At present agriculture is receiving only 17 per cent, industry 55 per cent, and labor 28 per cent. The national income should be distributed as follows: Industry 42 per cent, labor 25 per cent, and agriculture 33 per cent. Increasing the distribution for agriculture is the objective of the organized farmers of America, and it can be done only through organization," he pointed out.

Among the most active counties in the membership campaign are Cullman, Baldwin, Pike, Henry, Madison, Lauderdale, Dallas, Limestone, Henry, Dale, Randolph, Butler Tuscaloosa, Bibb, Clarke, Perry, Conecuh, Franklin, Marion, and others, he reported.

The goal in Cullman is 2,000 members, he added, which is expected to put that county at the head of the entire nation. Other triple A counties in membership are to be Dallas, Baldwin, and Pike, and perhaps Lauderdale, Madison, and Tuscaloosa, it is predicted.

Intensive drives are already in progress in a number of counties, the leading members soliciting the membership of others, and similar drives will be staged in other counties during December and January. The effort to increase the membership will perhaps continue through February or later.

LETTER OF APPRECIATION

Clanton, Ala., Rt. 7., Nov. 23, 1931.
Chilton County News, Clanton, Ala.,
Dear Editor:

Will you please allow us space in your valuable paper to express our heartfelt thanks to our friends and neighbors both far and near for their kindness and help rendered us in our recent loss by fire. Dear friends, we can never live to nor have words to express our deep appreciation to you. May the Lord bless and prosper everyone of you is our prayer.

We wish to thank those who took their trucks and rendered their faithful time and service in our behalf. In fact, our thanks are extended to everyone for your donations, help and service rendered in any way. The Lord said it is more blessed to give than to receive, so we trust that we may live to be of some service to you.

Deeply thanking you again we are your true friends.

Signed: Mr. and Mrs. D. Broadhead.

Gain In Cotton Use Is Expected

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 25.—There will be a tremendous increase in the consumption of American cotton if world business conditions continue to improve, it is predicted by J. A. Beaty, acting general manager of the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association.

Mr. Beaty made this prediction after reading a report of Henry G. Safford, vice-president and sales manager of the American Cotton Cooperative Association, the national cotton marketing organization of farmers of which the Alabama association is a member.

Mr. Safford recently returned from a series of conferences with European spinners in which he visited all the larger centers.

"We all know that we could get an advantage in the price if the present crop were reduced several million bales," Mr. Safford said. "We will have gained, however, if we can win a permanent market for several million bales, for we will have a large crop to sell at low prices, and will have improved our position against foreign competitors."

Improvement in the quality of the American crop was seen by Mr. Safford as an important factor in gaining more foreign trade in cotton.

"The trouble is that local cotton buyers know too little about grade and staple and it is easier for them to buy 'hog round,' he said. He said that the cooperatives passing on to the farmer premiums for better cotton was having a tremendous effect in improving American cotton, and Mr. Beaty said Alabama's crop this year is the best in quality perhaps of any crop the State has produced.

RUBBER

Mr. Edison died just a few days too soon to learn that the goal of the last great scientific quest in which he was engaged had been reached by somebody else. This was the search for a new source of rubber.

Mr. Edison sought it in plants. The new synthetic rubber is a product of the great chemical research laboratories of E. I. Du Pont De Nemours& Company, who have already begun to build a factory for its commercial manufacture. Instead of being made from a vegetable source the raw materials out of which this artificial rubber is made are coal, limestone, salt and water.

It is not yet certain that this new rubber will answer every purpose for which rubber is now used, but for many of such uses it is said to be superior to the natural product. At any rate, it gives the United States an independent source of rubber, from which we can never be cut off again in time of war as we were a few years ago, and the supply of the necessary raw materials is literally unlimited.

BEAVERS

The most interesting thing that has happened in my part of the country in years is the return of the beavers to the Berkshire valley near my farm.

It is pretty nearly a hundred years since the last of the beavers vanished with the last of the Indians from Massachusetts, but a few days ago some of my neighbors, observing that there seemed to be more water than usual in a swampy pond just north of West Stocgbridge village, investigated and discovered that a family of beavers had built a dam across the little stream and were busily engaged in finishing up their winter home. This is a dome-shaped structure of logs and mud, with its entrance under water to protect its inhabitants from foxes, wolves and other enemies. Beavers have never been known to travel over land and how these got into the West Stocgbridge swamp is a mystery.

Unless they multiply and become a pest, these new generations of beavers will have an easier life than did their ancestors. For two hundred years after the settlement of America by the English, beaver skins were the main staple of commerce between the northern colonies and the old country. Literally millions of beavers were slaughtered for their fur, the principal use of which was to make men's hats. Beaver fur is still regarded by hatters as the finest possible material for felt hats, but there is very little of it on the market, and the game laws of New England today impose heavy penalties on anyone killing the beaver.

The biggest problem that confronts President Hoover's conference on home building, which will begin its session in Washington shortly, is the problem of finding a substitute for the present system of second mortage financing. Half the families in the United States own their homes, but most of them have paid much more than they should have paid, because of the high cost of second mortage money.

If the President's conference can work out a nationally acceptable plan under which the young man who has saved up a thousand dollars can buy a home without having to pay exorbitant premiums and interest on the balance, it will go a long way toward stimulating the building industry and all of the other industries that depend on it.

FLYING

Twenty-five years ago only half a dozen people, friends of the Wright Brothers, had ever seen an airplane in flight. Practically nobody else believed it would ever be possible to fly a heavier than air machine. In that year, 1906, everybody was enthusiastic about lighter-than-air craft. The balloon with a motor propeller, what we now call a dirigable, was the thing, but nobody dreamed of anything approaching the United States Navy's new airship, Akron, which took 203 people on a ten hour voyage the other day.

In the last few years there have been wonderful improvements in airplanes. It is probable that every plane flying today will be out of date inside of ten years and that the plane of the future will look and act entirely different from anything we are familiar with now.

GARAGES

This is the time of years when many automobile owners commit unintentional suicide by starting up their cars in tightly closed garages and not getting outside as soon as the engine fires. In the past twelve months the New York State Department of Health reports forty-two deaths from carbon monoxide poisoning in closed garages and forty-three narrow escapes from death from the same cause.

It is seldom safe to let a car run at any season of the year without backing out of the garage as soon as the engine starts. Some of the deaths reported occurred because the wind blew the exaust gases back into the garage although the doors were wide open. Carbon monoxide poisoning comes without warning, as the gas is entirely odorless.

It cost nothing to be careful.

Mt. Pleasant Junior High School News

The Chicken Supper which was sponsored by the P.-T. A. last Saturday night netted the school $36.05. This amount will be added to the balance of the P.-T. A. funds brought over from last year and used in purchasing some new shades and other equipment for the school.

There was very little expense involved in giving this supper as practically all of everything used was generously given by the parents and teachers. Over 125 plates were sold at the building, there being a complete sell-out. This was perhaps due to the unusually large crowd present and the attractive charge for each plate.

Two string bands were there to entertain, and this they did in the most pleasing manner. One of the bands was from Verbena, and was composed of Messrs. Frank Gulledge, Aubrey Robinson, Frank and George Williams.

Mr. Aubrey Robinson, lately of New York, entertained the crowd with some clever tap-dancing. Everyone seemed to enjoy the program very much, and we take this opportunity in thanking the Verbena Band for helping the school, and cordially invite them to visit us again.

The other band was composed of home talent, the players being, Messrs. Lemmie Melton, Corbett Riggins, Hiram Littlejohn and Kermit Lowery. This group of entertainers rendered several selections of popular music which was delightfully received by the large number of listeners.

We are deeply grateful to the large number from Clanton and Thorsby who came and helped us.

This week closes out the second month has been greatly increased over that of last month. Very little illness has been reported in the community.

A handsome gift will be presented to Curtis Traywick and Ilar Massey at the next Chapel Exercise. These two Junior III students being winners in a contest of ticket sales for the Chicken Supper. Curtis led the boys with 17 sales to his credit, and Ilar won high honors for the girls with 25 sales.

Miss Betty Baldwin, attractive and popular member of the Maplesville High School faculty, spent the week end with her sister, Miss Celia Baldwin, at Thorsby.

The basket ball game between Mt. Pleasant and Enterprise teams was called at the half, due to a sudden downpour of rain. The game was proving to be one of the livliest and most interesting games of the season with Enterprise clinging tenaciously to the small margin of one point. The game was called with the count being 6 to 5. Curtis Traywick led the Mt. Pleasant team with two beautiful shots from the field for 4 points; while Burnett, his running team mate, netted the other point through a foul shot. L. C. Cagle for Enterprise registered four of their points with two nifty crip shots. Guy Silas added the other two markers with a shot from the field.

The strong wind that swept over the court made playing extremely difficult for both teams, each missing several free shots which normally would have been made good. At the end of the second quarter, Cecil Traywick, star guard for the Mt. Pleasant team, suffered the misfortune of losing his two front teeth through a scrimmage with several other players for the ball. The accident was unavoidable and drew sympathy from both teams.

The Enterprise team will return in the near future to the Mt. Pleasant Court to play this game. We hope the large crowd will come again.

Conference is over and we are back in Clanton and Chilton county, to do the work of a faithful minister. Will you not let me serve you in every way possible. I want you to let me know when yo uare sick, I want you to attend the services at the church, and I want to be a shepherd to your soul.

Our Sunday school will meet next Sunday at 9:45. Preaching at 11 A.M. and at 7 o'clock Sunday night. Start out now to make the next Conference year better than the last. We crave your presence in all of these services.

I heard of a person the other day who said, "No, I can not go to church because I have no clothes that are fit to wear." It matters not about fine clothes, you come on just as you are able to clothe yourself.. God does not look at your outside, but he is looking at the inside of your soul. Do like your pastor, and many others, wear your old clothes and come on.

Rowena Rides the Rumble

By Ethel Hueston

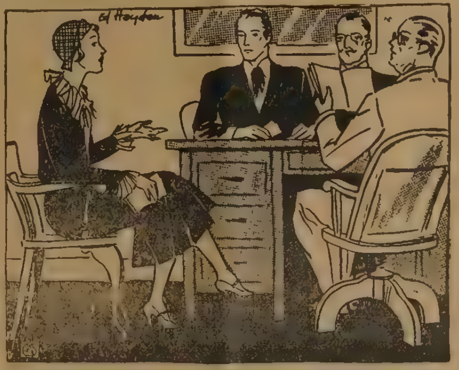
FIRST INSTALMENT

The whole trouble lay with Peter. —Peter Blande.—He was the fly in the ointment, the blot on the escutcheon, the carbon knock in the motor. Things just couldn't possibly have worked out more to Rowena's fancy, except for the persistent presence of Peter. And there was absolutely no hope of getting rid of him—he was too deeply mixed up in everything.

To tell the truth, it was Peter's project in the first place. Rowena herself only got into it at the last minute in answer to an advertisement in the morning paper. It was Peter who put the ad in.

Peter was a commercial artist, one of those thrice unfortunates with a soul for art, a talent for paint and a need for more ready money. He spent his days painting trees, rocks and running brooks, dotted here and there with pretty girls, Algonquin anglers and Broadway golfers, as a background for the Rackruff Roadster, 1931 model, comprising fully half the picture.

It was Peter who conceived the exquisite idea of a Rackruff motor tour across country with the well known artist, Peter Blande, at the wheel. He figured—and converted Mr. Rack, president, and Mr. Ruff, Secretary and Treasurer, to his figures—that it would be the pinnacle of publicity to conduct such a tour, with pauses at all points of prime interest for him to paint a picture of the Rackruff roadster poised on the brink of a precipice, pulling its way pluckily out of a volcano, skidding securely off a racing glacier, or defying the sands of the desert.



Peter said—and Messrs. Rack and Ruff agreed with him—it would be good business to take a copy-writer along in the car to feature the high lights of the trip and apply the proper adjectives both to landscape and motor, in this way insuring a maximum of newspaper publicity that would establish the new roadster once and for all in the motor mind of America.

So Peter advertised for a copy-writer.

"Wanted:" (read the advertisement in the morning papers.) "A pretty woman who can write. One who has had some experience and met with reasonable success. Must be free to leave the city. Expenses paid and moderate salary. Must be good-looking. Apply Rackruff Salesrooms to-day."

Rowena Rostand was one of many women who read the advertisement over her breakfast that morning. It wasn't much of a breakfast in Rowena's case, for she was extremely hard up. She had given up a newspaper position in Ohio in order to be in New York.

It was at eight-thirty that she saw the advertisement. By nine o'clock she was ready to set out for the Rackruff salesrooms. Surveying herself in the mirror she was obliged to admit fairly that in spite of the little thinning of her face, in spite of the dark circles with which anxiety had shadowed her eyes, she was still undeniably good-looking.

Her black and white ensemble was freshly sponged and pressed—Rowena herself had seen to that—her ruffled white blouse was smart in spite of the worn spots here and there. Her black and white shoes were spotless, the fingers of her gloves neatly mended. The collar of her silk coat shone from countless pressings.

"Pick out the best-looking one," Mr. Rack began when the secretary announced the applicants were outside.

"Don't you think," interposed Peter neatly, in his mild, ingratiating drawl, "that you had better look them over yourself? After all, nobody can visualize a lovely face and figure behind the wheel of a Rackruff roadster as you can, you know."

Mr. Rack thought that was a particularly good idea. He called in Mr. Ruff to assist, allowing Peter also to sit by, and had the secretary usher them in, one at a time. And he and Mr. Ruff frowned over them, and asked about their literary efforts, and noticed their eyes and ankles and complexions, jotting down indecipherable comments on their memorandum pads.

The secretary, having some notion of dramatic sequence, saved Rowena for the last. Rowena's hair was a curious chameleon shimmer of gold and bronze and brown. Her eyes were limpid pools of light that swam now blue, now green, and in gentle moments softened to hazel.

"I'm Rowena Rostand," she said, looking at them straightforwardly. "I'm twenty-five years old. I have had one book published and it was so good that practically nobody read it. I worked on a newspaper for three years and I've had eleven stories published in first-class magazines. And you may not think I'm so very good-looking, but lots of people do."

Rackfuff Motors, Inc., in the persons of Messrs. Rack and Ruff, thought so, too. Even Peter nodded his approval.

And so Rackruff Motors, Inc., bound itself by written agreement to finance a motor tour for a party consisting solely of a beautiful young writer twenty-five years old and a commercial artist of thirty years and the opposite sex.

Rowena and Peter were called in for a conference early the next morning, and Mr. Rack, ably seconded by Mr. Ruff, put it up to them squarely. Somebody had blundered, if it came to that. An insurmountable difficulty had been encountered.

"There are no insurmountable difficulties," Rowena said sweetly.

The whole enterprise was deadlocked, plans were checkmated, contracts were canceled. The way Mr. Rack put it, with the full accord of Mr. Ruff, it seemed pretty hopeless. Peter quite wilted under the deadly finality of it all.

"Unless," he suggested tenatively, "we advertise again and get an older author, maybe a married one—I suppose a little less good-looking would be better under the circumstances—would attract less attention."

"But you signed me," protested Rowena quickly. "If you try to put any one else in my place, I'll get out an injunction and tie up everything."

Rowena's eyes at that moment were a clear, cold, business blue. Not one of them doubted for a moment that she would do just as she threatened.

Mr. Rack threw out his hands despairingly. "Well, it's off, that's all," he declared.

And Mr. Ruff nodded his head.

Peter seemed cowed into acquiescence. But Rowena was never one to be cowed into acquiescence. She laughed brightly.

"Why, my dears," she said, "it doesn't make the least bit of difference. This is a business trip. I am a professional writer. Mr. Blande is a professional artist. We are thrown together in a purely business capacity, and our ages and sexes have nothing whatsoever to do with it. Nobody thinks anything of a man spending eight hours a day locked into four walls with his stenographer. Certainly an author and an artist riding the public highways in an open car are far safer."

Unfortunately for Rowena, however, Messrs. Rack and Ruff continued to object. Even Peter did. They made all due allowance for Rowena's purity of purpose and nobility of nature, but Rackruff Motors, Inc., said Mr. Rack, stood firm for the conventions.

"Of course, if you feel like that," Rowena said cheerfully, "Mr. Blande and I will be guided entirely by your wishes. We will have to get a chaperon; that's all."

"We wouldn't care about paying the expenses of a third party," said Mr. Ruff quickly.—Mr. Ruff was Treasurer of the Company.

"It will not be necessary," said Rowena. "We will take a lady with us who will be glad to make the tour for her transportation, paying her own living expenses en route."

"Can you find such a person?" asked Mr. Rack.

"Certainly," said Rowena brightly "Leave everything to me."

"What are you going to do?" asked Peter.

"The same thing you did. Advertise!"

So they went down the street to the nearest Childs' and figured out an advertisement that seemed to suit their purpose.

> "Wanted: Young woman to serve as companion on extensive motor tour of the United States. Transportation provided, but must pay own living expenses."

Peter wanted to put in something about a pleasant disposition being an asset, but Rowena said it would be useless—said all women thought they had good dispositions.

"You advertised for a good-looking author, didn't you? And did you see the mob that answered?—We'll have to trust her disposition to luck. Besides, she'll be in the rumble seat—we won't see much of her."

They received a great many answers to the advertisement and Peter went down to her snug, one-room apartment to assist in making the selection. This proved not difficult.

The letter chosen was written on plain creamy paper of very fine quality.

> "I am twenty-three years old, a college graduate, and can pay my own expenses unless you plan to travel on a very deluxe scale. I can start at any time and stay as long as you like. The only thing I am really interested in is to go—and go at once. I enclose references."

The name was Roberta Lowell.

The references were good so Rowena got the number on the telephone, with Peter standing interestedly by, and talked to Roberta Lowell.

"She has a nice voice," she whispered to Peter.

Miss Lowell said she could start on Monday morning, that she could get all of her traveling equipment in one suitcase and a small traveling bag, and that she had an allowance of twenty-five dollars a week.

"Wait a minute." Rowena put her hand over the transmitter. "She can spend twenty-five a week," she said to Peter.

"Well, that ought to be enough," said Peter. "Except for the car, I'm hoping to get along on less."

Miss Lowell said she would meet them, bag and baggage at the Rackruff show-room at ten o'clock Monday morning without fail, and she thought it was going to be great fun.

"Oh, by the way, Miss Lowell—"

"Oh, please don't call me Miss Lowell. Call me Bobby. Everybody calls me Bobby. Miss Lowell is so stiff."

"Well, by the way, Bobby Lowell," went on Rowena, "you'll have to ride in the rumble seat."

"I don't care," was the brave retort. "I'll be willing to ride a cowcatcher to get out of New York and get out quick."

Now Rowena did not like artists. She said they were so abstract. Rowena herself was extremely concrete. She felt, in her heart of hearts, that it was a shame that such a heavenly opportunity to go places, see things, meet people—and best of all, make money doing it!—had to be all messed up with an artist like Peter. Even Rowena, however, could see that she couldn't very well get rid of him—not under the circumstances. If only she and the Roberta girl could go alone now—ah, there would be a travel tale worth the telling. And how they would photograph, the two of them, in the snappy 1931 Rackruff roadster! The publicity they would get.

Mindful that there would be photographers to record their departure from the Rackruff Salesrooms—the Publicity Department was taking care of all that! —Rowena took extreme pains with her appearance that Monday morning, and that was an unusual thing with Rowena.

When she presented herself at the Rackruff show-room at ten o'clock on Monday morning, Messrs. Rack and Ruff had good reason to congratulate themselves on their choice of author. Photographers and reporters were alike enchanted. A girl like that, now, swinging along the Rocky Mountains in a Rackruff roadster—ah, there was publicity made to your order. And it was all Peter's idea, too.

MORE WORK

Electricity takes a "Wage Cut"

ELECTRICITY is one of the few domestic servants that is doing MORE work for LESS pay.

Alabama Power Company's average rate for electric service in the home has been taking a "wage cut" each year for a number of years—the record is:

Year Ending December 31st, 1926—7.75c per K.W.H.
Year Ending December 31st, 1927—7.56c per K.W.H.
Year Ending December 31st, 1928—7.28c per K.W.H.
Year Ending December 31st, 1929—5.56c per K.W.H.
Year Ending December 31st, 1930—5.05c per K.W.H.
Year Ending October 31st, 1931—4.87c per K.W.H.

National Average Domestic Rate 1930—6.00c per K.W.H.

Thus, during the past 5 years the average rate of this Company has declined 37.1% and was 15.8% lower during 1930 than the National average. While electric service in the home is getting cheaper each year it has steadily become more useful.

Only a few years ago electricity was used chiefly for lighting—and cost more. Today, cheap electricity not only gives better lighting but does countless jobs, brings endless convenience to the home whether for lighting, radio, cooking, cleaning, washing, water heating, refrigeration or the like. A few cents in any of these tasks goes a long way at rates which make the average cost steadily lower as your use and enjoyment increases.

Thorsby's Ever Progressive Spirit

News stories on the front page of this week's News show two progressive steps being taken by citizens in Thorsby in the way of improvements and preparations to increase business.

Thorsby, Alabama, one of the most wide awake towns in the county, has always been composed of public-spirited and progressive citizens. It has the largest and most active fruit and truck growers association in the county and perhaps in this section of the state. They stick and pull together.

Plans now underway, and backed by reliable men, promise to bring to Thorsby and to Chilton County a new industry. A small industry to start with, sure, but an industry that has a wide field in this section of the state in which to work. Another thing about those men and women who compose the residents of Thorsby is that they are usually sure before they undertake a project, thereby making the best of those things presenting opportunities to their community, and instead of waiting for opportunities, they usually make them.

No doubt, citizens in and around other towns in the county will be called upon to aid in one of the latest improvement projects for Thorsby and the county as well. Of course, such a proposition will necessitate investigation, but let every citizen interested, investigate the matter and if possible, give assistance to put it over.

Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving Day has become such a universally observed national holiday that few people realize that its general observance is quite a recent development. All of the states of New England and some of the other northern states, had an annual day of thanksgiving by the proclamation of the Governor, but while this custom came from the earliest colonial times, it seldom happened that more than two or three states picked the same day.

The real "mother of Thanksgiving Day" was Mrs. Sarah Joseph Hale, who was the editor of the first magazine published especially for women, Godey's Lady's Book. Mrs. Hale, before 1850, tried to get the President of the United States to issue a proclamation for a national Thanksgiving Day. Mrs. Ruth E. Finley, in her new book, "The Lady of Godey's," tells how she bombarded president after president with her demand until in 1863. President Lincoln issued the first national thanksgiving proclamation, naming the last Thursday in November as its date. From that time on every President has issued such a proclamation, and since the 1870's the Governor of every state has also proclaimed the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day. Since there has never been an act of Congress on the subject, Thanksgiving Day is not technically a national holiday, but it would be difficult to keep the people of any state from observing it, even if the Governor forgot to issue his proclamation.

In recent years there has been a tendency to take Thanksgiving Day lightly. We are all too much inclined, in good times, to take credit to ourselves for our blessings, whatever they may be, while in times of distress it is a very human inclination to ask "what have I got to be thankful for? [illegible] asking that question this year, but [illegible] one of the best cures for pessimism is to stop thinking of your hard luck and try for one day to think of all the good things that have come your way since last Thanksgiving.

There is, perhaps, small consolation in that for people who have lost their faith in spiritual things. But we believe that the great majority of Americans, by whatever name they may call their religious creeds, still believe that there is a Divine Providence which has guided and still will guide our nation, and when we consider the state of most of the people of the rest of the world, we feel that there is ample ground for a National Thanksgiving Day.

Something Radically Wrong

Alexander Paterson, His Majesty's Commissioner of Prisons, in England, spent several months investigating prisons in this country some time ago. His remarks comparing penal conditions here and in his country are hardly flattering to us, but they are well worth listening to.

Mr. Paterson was especially impressed, and unfavorably, by the size of prisons here and the number of inmates. Overcrowding is the rule in American institutions rather than the exception. Much of this he blamed, not on "crime waves" but on our multitude of laws and severity of sentences. He says that at one institution he watched the checking-in of twenty new prisoners, nineteen of whom, in England, would have been dealt with under the probation act or been fined.

Here is expert testimony in support of the fact that the United States, through its zeal in passing laws, is manufacturing criminals on a wholesale scale. And it is certainly not a coincidence that this has been accompanied by a break-down in the processes of justice, so far as crime prevention is concerned. When we send twenty men to a penitentiary, nineteen of whom would have been kept outside in England—one of the most law-abiding of countries—there is something radically wrong with the system. It needs quick attention.

Glad to be back in my column again, dear folks. Sorry that I had to be away for such a long time. That's about all I should say about it, but you know me, I can't get by, and feel right about it,—if I say just a little. I understand from the ed that he got along all right so far as he is concerned, and got this column filled up without any too much trouble every week I was out.

But I believe I know why he consented to let me come back again. If you'll pardon the ego—there were too many people fussing about this Round Town column being out of C. G. N. Now, I've gone and started with my egotistical manner the very first pop out of the bottle, or box, or something.

Speaking of boxes, I see that Dief has been storing some automobile tires in a vacant building across from his service station. Dief must think that folks are going to start buying Goodyears soon. Pardon me, I meant to say that folks are going to buy more Goodyears soon. What that has to do with boxes is beyond me.

While I'm down in this neck o' the woods, I might say that recently I've noticed that our friend Reed Mullins from out on Battle Creek—I mean Yellow Leaf—seems to be pretty busy doing things these days. Wonder why he wanted to wait until now to get to showing up. Seems we might have needed a man like him around town for sometime. I like the way he gets about and does things.

Thanksgiving comes around again this year and on Thursday. I've had the Thanksgiving spirit for several days and will be glad when Thursday is here so I can shoulder the old trusty and sneak up on a squirrel or something.

Wonder how our school teachers are faring these days. Being away like I have for sometime, I kind o' lost track of them and have to get busy and stir things up a bit. You know, things become somewhat slack when I'm not around. Pardon me, again.

Hear the volunteer firemen have been eating heartily lately with others taking care to see that they were well fed. Arthur Willis is to be commended for his arrangement on the supper for the fire boys the other night. They looked like a jolly bunch of good fellows when I passed Matt's Lunch Shoppe. Matt seems to be one who knows how to touch a man's appetite with good food.

Perhaps you dear reader friends of mine are wondering where I have been. Perhaps you haven't and are not—but I'll believe you are, now anyway. Well, there's no use trying to keep it a secret, because once the newspapers get hold of it, it will spread like wildfire.

I've been off in Coosa County for awhile, then over in Tallapoosa, then down in Elmore, then over in Chilton, then back in Coosa, over in Talladega and then—none of your business. My clothes began to show signs of wear and my shoes were beginning to look like a sack wrapped round my feet. I was having a hard time of it. But I have the ed to thank for letting me come back to see you all again, and try to get my dignity oiled up and straightened out again. There's no place like Chilton for me.

Wonder how the golf boys are getting along now. Noticed several out knocking the little old pill around the other afternoon, but didn't have time to stop to see who it was.

There are a lot of certain people I'd like to thank right now for telling the ed and others that they missed this column while I was away, but I won't thank them publicly, I'll just say I'm much obliged to you, and that's sincere.

Didn't have much time to get this column up this week because the paper goes to press Tuesday, so might have to cut it short. But I'll be with you next week, and we will all see what we can see, or something. In the meantime, take care of every little thing, and I'll be legally investigating matters, pro my bono.

What's the Matter with America?

We have not seen any more intelligent or biting explanation of the economic depression from which the country seems now to be beginning to emerge than that which was written a little while ago by Miss Emily Woodward, editor of the Vienna (Ga.) News. This is what Miss Woodward said about it:

A people, for the most part accustomed to living moderately and even frugally prior to the war, we launched into an orgy of spending such as has never been known in the history of man. Although endowed with a modicum of reasoning power, we have deliberately thrown discretion to the winds changing our standards of living from quiet simplicity to frenzied luxury. Equipped with sufficient mathematical knowledge to know that four from two leaves minus two, men and women with incomes of $200.00 a month have spent at the rate of $400.00. This has applied quite generally whether the income has been $25.00 or $2500.00.

Farming and other businesses are more or less demoralized, but it is not due altogether to 5 cent cotton and the tariff. It is due in part to our waste, abuse of credit, poor business management and laziness.

Before we see the end of this many of us who are now riding may be walking, but that probably would be as it should be. The men and women who honestly work their ways out of the present economic labyrinth will be those possessed of the proper intestinal stamina. For some time now, we have needed something to divide the sheep from the goats. Crooks and deadbeats have been sailing along in the vanguard of society and the church, enjoying all the privileges and often more than those who make up the ranks of honest citizenry. If the present crisis serves as a leveler in the business and social realms, much will be gained. The seeming success of the dishonest during the reign of extravagance through which we have just passed, has had a baneful effect, serving to give sanction to the theory that the way to win is through shady paths.

Letters To The Editor

ABOUT KILBY'S PRISONERS

Dear Editor the Chilton County News:

Will you please give me a small space in your valuable paper to say a few words in regard to an article that appeared in the Birmingham Post on last Saturday, the 21st.

The article was as follows: "Montgomery, Nov. 21st—Special,—Of 5,475 prisoners placed in Kilby prison during the fiscal year ending Sept. 30 almost half, 2,588 are under 25 years of age records show. 2232 are Baptists and 822 are Methodists, one Mormon and four Jews. A total of 1725 are serving for violation of the prohibition law, while several hundred others are in prison for offenses related to dry law violations."

It appears that more than half of the 5475 are serving for violation of the prohibition law, and that 3059 are church members.

Is it a fact that the church is furnishing the state prison more prohibition criminals than the outside or underworld is furnishing. What encouragement has the church to offer the worldly people to come and join them when the records at Kilby Prison show that the church is furnishing more criminals than all other institutions combined, including the entire outside world.

If our preachers would take Christ's teachings and preach what Christ told his followers to preach, and not dispute with Christ as did the Pharisees and scribes when Christ told them that there is nothing from without a man that entering into him can defile him. Do ye not perceive that whatsoever thing from without entereth into the man it cannot defile him.

Christ did not propose to remove a single temptation, but taught his followers that if they did not overcome and resist temptations that they were not worthy of the good things he had in store for them.

Christ never did send delegations to confer with the law making powers to have laws passed to make people to be Christians. Is the church yet without understanding.

Let the church exclude its drunkards and bootleggers and be a fit subject to preach and teach Temperance and shut up about prohibition and quit asking that bunch to make laws to make people good that Christ said woe unto they had takened away the key of knowledge ye entered not in yourselves and them that were entering in ye hindered.

Let the Church seek for that old time religion that comes by the grace of God and when she gets in possession of it she will then fail to furnish our state prison a majority of criminals. Just think, the Baptists and Methodists alone in the great State of Alabama are furnishing Kilby prison more criminals than all other institutions and worldlings combined. Preachers, what are you doing.

Respectfully,
A. A. JACKSON,
Lomax, Ala., Nov. 23. 1931.

Ermete Giani of Empoli, Italy, standing before the altar at which he was to be married for the seventh time, halted the ceremony and deserted his fiancee, shouting "no" when asked if he took the woman as his wife.

HER THANKSGIVING SURPRISE PARTY

"One, two three and a half minutes yet." Alicia was counting. Counting the minutes until she would go to the party, do you think? Really you might guess a long time and never come near the right. Alicia was counting the minutes until a freight train should whistle and rush past her window.

Not much of a sight you think; just a common freight train with cars full of wheat and lumber and maybe some loaded with squealing pigs. But listen! If you are twelve years old and lived on a lonely farm and had not been able to get out of your bed and walk for six long years, not since you were six years old, and you couldn't go to school, of course, and few people lived near enough to come and see you—well that would be different, wouldn't it?

It did not matter whether it was a freight train or a passenger train, when it came by she would wave her little flag at the engineer and the trainmen and always get a cheery wave in return.

Often the trains stopped for some time on a long siding near the house and switched off cars to be loaded with grain or cattle, and then one of the men would run over to the house for a pail of milk; so they knew why the girl could not walk like other children.

Even at night when the trains passed Alicia would flash her electric torch three times and see the answering bobs of lanterns.

Alicia's father and mother loved her very dearly, but the farm did not pay well enough to let them get money ahead so they could leave it for a better place. The ground was poor and Mr. Smith did not understand farming as well as he ought; so they had not been able to send Alicia to the hospital for the particular sort of care she needed.

Sometimes when a train would have quite a wait on the siding one of the men would run over to her window with a little gift of a book or candy. She did not know that the men had passed the word along to all the train crews that a committee had been appointed to consult a noted surgeon about her.

And then one day, just three days before Thanksgiving, a wonderful thing happened. A special train stopped on the siding; and instead of one man coming over for the milk she saw a regular procession coming.

"One, two, three, four," she counted. "Why, Mother," she called, "there are ten big men coming and they are bringing a lot of things with them!"

It was true. Very much amazed, Mrs. Smith opened the door, and in they came and saying, "We have come to bring a glad Thanksgiving to little Alicia."

And you should have seen those gifts—a comy wheel chair, a box with soft rose colored blankets for Alicia's bed, another box with a soft, fuzzy, rose-colored bathrobe and slippers to match, two beautifully colored pillows, the most beautiful doll any little girl could ever want and a doll trunk full of dainty clothes for her dollyship, and, last of all, a most mysterious sealed envelope not to be opened until the 10:40 freight passed the next morning.

With cheeks flushed from excitement, she thanked the men, holding close in her small arms everything they could hold; and when the men had gone her interest was divided between the wonders she could see and the mysterious envelope.

That night she could hardly sleep, she was so excited over the mystery, and she whispered a great deal to the dear doll cuddled in her arms; but morning really did come at last, and after such an age, the long sharp whistle of the 10:40 train. It had barely passed when the envelope was opened. There was a bright Thanksgiving card and an extra note saying that the next day she would have a call from Dr. Slocum, whose special business it was to help little girls get well.

Wasn't it fine? All those trainmen had raised a fund to pay all expenses. Alicia was shy when Dr. Slocum came, as promised, but he quickly gained her confidence and assured her that it would not be very long before she could walk and run and climb up on the fence to wave at the trains instead of doing it in the bed.

"You have been a brave girl for a long time, Alicia," said the kind surgeon, "and you will be ready when the nurse comes for you in three days."

Alicia looked at him anxiously, "Doctor, must I leave all these lovely things at home?"

"No indeed!" he replied quickly. "Bring them all with you if you like, especially that fine doll. And I don't know who is going to be the happiest when you come home all well, you or your parents or the trainsmen or I."

"I know," said Alicia, "it will be all of us, every one. Never, never could anyone have such a beautiful surprise party. I will be ready when the nurse comes, Doctor, and I will be brave, truly I will, and I will be glad every day always."

And so you see, the loving gifts of many hearts. For it all came through as Dr. Slocum thought, and Alicia was able to walk like other children. And, of course, she often climbed up on the fence to wave greetings to her loyal friends, the trainmen, and they were happy always.

Things in General

Almost everyone is through gathering and filling his storehouse with the blessings of our King and Saviour. Now what's the use to think of a depression with plenty to eat and health preserved for us by our King.

Now as Thanksgiving is nearing, let us sit down and see what we have to be thankful for. First, let me see, am I crippled? Am I blind? Have I made anyone happy this long year? Now, let us remember all that are crippled, blind, etc., and let him remember it must be "all for the best." Don't we remember Lazarus and how Jesus could have prevented it, but it all was to the Glory of God to show His power to those that believe.

We all think those for this blessed writing in explanation of the Bible.

Boys Under 25 Crowd Prison

Of a total of 5,475 prisoners entering the Alabama penitentiary during the fiscal year Sept. 30, 1930, to Oct. 1, 1931, 1,725 were sentenced for violating the prohibition law directly while several hundred additional prisoners entered the penitentiary for offenses relating to prohibition.

The annual statistical report on the prison population of Alabama for the past fiscal year has been completed and is in the hands of W. F. Feagin, director of the State Board of Administration, and it shows that on Nov. 18, 1931, the penitentiary population in Alabama numbered 6,133. Of this number 5,005 were State prisoners and 1,128 were county prisoners.

While violations of the prohibition law made up the largest crime for which men and women were sentenced to the penitentiary during the last fiscal year, burglary came second with 472 entrants on that charge.

An interesting feature of the report is that 2,588 prisoners are in the penitentiary under 25 years of age.

Of the State prisoners, 2,232 list themselves as Baptists while the next denomination in point of numbers is the Methodists with 822 prisoners. There is one Mormon in the penitentiary. There are no Christian Scientists or Pentecost in the penitentiary and only four Jews.

The figures show four electrocutions during the year and five commutations.

GREELEY'S HANDWRITING

Many stories have been told about Horace Greeley's notoriously poor handwriting, which was a constant nightmare to his associates, and especially to the printers, on the old New York Tribune.

One printer, being given a Greeley manuscript to set up for the first time, exclaimed: "My God, if Belshazzar had seen this writing on the wall he would have been more terrified than he was." Later it is said, Greeley wrote to the foreman, directing that the printer be discharged because he made so many typographical errors. The printer got hold of the note before leaving, and carried it to the foreman of another newspaper as a recommendation—and got a job immediately.

Once Greeley was invited to lecture in Sandwich, Ill. He wrote that as he was overworked and would be sixty years old on the following February third, he felt unable to take the engagement. After much labor in deciphering the letter, the committee replied that they would be glad to have him lecture on February third, and that the fee of sixty dollars would be satisfactory.

EFFECTS OF VITAMINS HAVE BECOME KNOWN

Vitamins, what are they? This is a question often asked but not answered. Everyone is interested because everyone eats and needs to be nourished properly.

Vitamins are about as puzzling as the fourth dimension, but Miss Helen Kennedy, extension nutritionist, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, says that much is known about the effects of different vitamins, known as A, B, C, D, E, and G.

Vitamin A, she said, prevents infection and promotes growth. It is found in all naturally yellow foods such as butter, egg yolk, carrots and milk.

Vitamin B prevents nervous disorders and promotes growth. It is found in all naturally green foods such as turnip greens, collards and spinach, in whole grain, and in citrus fruits.

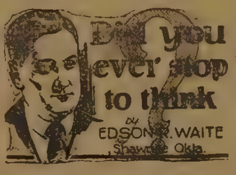
Vitamin C, which prevents and cures scurvy, is found in all fresh growing parts of plants and all fresh fruits.

Vitamin D promotes the development of bones and teeth and is found in milk, butter, egg yolk, cod liver oil and sunshine.

Vitamin E is essential in reproduction and found in meat, lettuce and cereals.

Vitamin G prevents and cures pellagra. It is found in all natural foods such as milk, eggs, meat, fruits, and vegetables.

Since all six vitamins are needed the daily diet should be planned to include all of them, Miss Kennedy said.



Hon. J. T. M. Anderson, Premier of Saskatchewan, says:

That few elements contribute more to human happiness and well being than "Loyalty."

In its personal application it is the epitome of the doctrine of the Nazarene, and in its general acceptance it is the buckler and bulwark of nations. There is no virtue more splendid, and few more universally esteemed. Without it there can be no true patriotism, nor can there be personal fidelity. It may be mistaken in its attachments, but the spirit of its very mistakes may have virtue.

Its practice builds nations and cements the whole fabric of human relationship. Its application to ideals adds a spiritual leaven to life and justifies faith in humanity.

It is admirable alike in the family and in the council chamber of the nation. It elevates the humble, and nothing so becomes those in the seats of the mighty.

It was his recognition of this inherent British quality which led Napoleon to exclaim: "Had my people been British, I could have lost Waterloo and still been Emperor."

Loyalty safeguards the state and develops the country. It surmounts difficulties and generates the patriotic faith that "moves mountains."

It achieves more than the most skillful materialism. It will suffer anything and come from the ordeal refined like a tempered sword blade.

It was loyalty that builded the British Empire—loyalty to high traditions of honour, justice and integrity, worked into the woof and warp of this stubborn island race for a thousand years.

Never were true loyalties so much needed as now. Many of the peoples of the world are passing through conditions which are causing widespread distress and suffering. It is by loyalty that we shall come to our own again—patient unswerving loyalty to our friends, to our country, and to our obligations, in respect to people and nations, who although sometimes alien to our blood and race, occupy their own place in the great scheme of common humanity.

With the Alabama Law

This is the second of a series of questions and answers regarding the Alabama law pertaining to Agriculture.

Q. Is it permissible to sell cold storage and preserved eggs in Alabama without labeling them as such?

A. No person, firm or corporation, by himself or his agents, shall sell, agree to sell, or advertise for sale any cold storage or preserved eggs without making it known to the purchaser, or prospective purchaser, that the eggs are cold storage or preserved eggs, and all boxes or other receptacles in which cold storage or preserved eggs are displayed for sale, sold or delivered, in wholesale or retail, shall be marked or lettered in a conspicuous manner with the words "cold storage eggs" or "preserved eggs."—Agricultural Code.

Q. Does the law permit the selling of rotten eggs in Alabama?

A. No person shall sell any eggs unfit for human food. unless the same is broken in shell and then denatured so that it can not be used for human food. An egg shall be deemed unfit for human food if it be addled or moldy, a black rot. a white rot, or a blood ring, or if it has an adherent yolk, or a bloody or green white, or if it be incubated beyond the blood ring stage; or if it consists in whole or in part of a filthy, decomposed or putrid substance.—Agricultural Code.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Thomason, of Lay Dam, were visitors to Clanton Friday. While in town Mr. Thomason was a caller at the News office.

THE FIRST PHONOGRAPH

In a letter written a few years ago, Thomas A. Edison said: "I conceived the idea of recording and reproducing human speech and other sounds on July 18, 1877."

Mr. Edison went on to say that he worked on his first model of the first phonograph during the following two months and that "this first model was entirely successful." He also declared that this model comprised all the basic principles which are still used in all phonographs and talking machines.

Many will remember the early phonograph records made on wax cylinders. These were greatly inferior to the later disc records, besides they were very fragile and short-lived. Still the principles used in recording and reproducing the sounds were the same as those employed up to the present.'

The world owes much of its enjoyment and instruction to the idea born in Edison's fertile brain fifty-four years ago. It is gratifying that he was permitted to enjoy a long life in which to develop and witness the universal employment of this and other epoch-making inventions which he gave to mankind.

NATION'S FINANCE STANDS TEST WELL

Economic Policy Commission of Bankers Association Points Out How 22,000 Banks Protect Public Interest

OVER 22,000 banks all over the United States are "quietly and efficiently serving their communities, helping tide many business enterprises over their difficulties, helping many concerns to earn money, helping create the economic activities that mean payrolls and spending power in their zones of influence, and faithfully keeping guard over the working capital and savings funds of their depositors," the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association says in a recent survey, adding:

"It surely stands strikingly to the credit of the banking profession that, during a period of unparalleled international economic depression, this vast majority of bankers have so competently, so courageously and so successfully met their difficulties and obligations. The effects of the drought, the demoralization of agriculture, the stagnation of industry, the breakdown of trade, the inability of so many heretofore desirable customers to meet their obligations to the banks, the impairment of public confidence by mob-scares and false rumors resulting in unreasoning runs, the abnormal depreciation of quoted security values even in the most wisely conceived investment accounts, the utter collapse of real estate values—all these things have occurred on a nationwide and worldwide scale with unprecedented severity.

"The effects of every one of them have assailed the banks with destructive forces because they are of the very essence of a bank's economic substance. Yet, as we have shown, the great bulk of our banking deposits has been protected without harm, and our banks in a vast majority have continued to serve, support and strengthen their customers and their communities with unflagging and unconquered devotion."

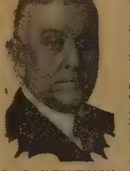
Former President American Bankers Association.



R. C. STEPHENSON

THE most constructive action that can be taken toward bringing about greater stability in our business life is the development of a more balanced attitude in the minds of all of our people in regard to the right relationship between saving and spending. There is more practical, workable economics in the sentence: Save during prosperity so as to be able to spend during depression: than in a whole library full of charts and tables and books on political economy.

I do not believe it is an impracticable dream to bring about an era of more intelligent saving and spending on the part of our people. It is not impossible to change the habits of the population. It has been done in many lines. The habits of our people have been improved and the health of the nation promoted in many ways by consistent programs of advertising and education that have brought about better hygienic understanding and practices.

The medical profession has virtually banished the scourge of some diseases by persistent, intelligent campaigns of preventive sanitary measures and inoculations, requiring new understandings, new habits among many millions of our people. Also a large part of this evolution of public health improvement has naturally developed through the intelligent advertising of many products that have to do with bodily care. I refer to the manufacturers and distributers of such things as more healthful shoes, more effective toothbrushes, food products with more wholesome values of nutrition and countless other practical ideas that have become commonplaces of our daily business life,—and that have become a part, too, of the very texture of the personal habits and health of great masses of our people.

If it has been good advertising and good business for so many of our national producers to spend millions of dollars thus to inculcate new habits of personal hygiene and personal care, is it not good business and good advertising for our banking interests to lay similar stress during the next period of prosperity upon better financial habits and customs of our people?

Bankers above all are interested in stable, wholesome business. They have much to gain by a state of sound financial health among the people, and most to lose by epidemics of economic maladies such as have swept the country during the past two years.

The man who has in better times been favored with too much credit rather than not enough is finding it is hard to pay his interest now with low prices for his products or labor.

LAMAR JEFFERS TO HAVE CHOICE OF COMMITTEES

Alabama Congressman Ranking Democrat In Two Groups

Being the ranking Democrat on two committees, Congressman Lamar Jeffers will have an opportunity to select either of the two for his chairmanship in the event the House is organized by the Democrats when Congress convens in December.

Congressman Jeffers is the ranking Democrat on the Civil Service Committee and on the Committee on the Election of President, Vice President and Representatives in Congress. He also is the second ranking Democrat on the Veterans Committee and a member of the Committee on Revision of the Laws.

Congressman Jeffers has decided that he will accept the chairmanship of the Civil Service Committee in the event the Democrats elect the Speaker, he said today.

Should something turn up that the ranking Democrat does not accept the Veterans Committee chairmanship and Congressman Jeffers becomes next in line, he will accept that post, he says, being particularly interested in veterans of the World War.

Congressman Jeffers, who has been on the Civil Service Committee for several years, stated that the committee handles all proposed bills and amendments relative to Federal employes, pensions, salaries, etc. Much of the work of the committee consists of investigations similar to insurance company actuaries.

The other committee of which he is the ranking Democrat has bills and amendments before it concerning the election of the President, Vice President and Representatives in Congress. Proposed legislation that affects the "lame duck" session of Congress and which would bring the date of the inauguration of the President nearer to the date of election comes before this committee.

The following appeared in The Washington News regarding Congressman Jeffers' likelihood of becoming chairman of the Committee on Civil Service:

"Lamar Jeffers, the Alabama Democrat who is likely to be the next chairman of the House Committee on the Civil Service, has represented his district for 10 years; is entitled to wear the Distinguished Service Cross for military service in France, where he was twice wounded; is 43 and is a large plesant-appearing and approachable person.

"Jeffers' membership on the Civil Service Committee has shown an interest in and sympathy for the problems of Federal employes, tempered by an inclination to follow his own judgement when he did not agree with all forward-looking measures. On the basis of his record, he is credited with an intention and the capacity to understand Civil Service problems and to deal with them on the basis of efficiency and fairness rather than on the basis of political expediency."

AGE AND EFFICIENCY

The late William James, reputedly the greatest of American psychologist, is said to have declared that most men are old fogies at the age of 25. Bruce Barton interprets this statement to mean that by the age of 25 most men have formed permanent prejudices and have closed their minds to all new ideas.

If this theory be correct, which we do not believe, there are certainly many striking exceptions. Many men long past the age mentioned have struck out into new fields of endeavor and have developed abilities in later life of which they gave little promise in their youth.

As to the continuance of executive and creative activities to ripe old age, innumerable examples may be cited. Consider Oliver Wendell Holmes, an active member of the Surpreme Court at 90; President Hindenburg of Germany at 84; Andrew W. Mellon holding one of the most important cabinet positions at 76; Thomas A. Edison, who continued at work until a short time before his recent death at 84. The list might be continued almost indefinitely.

Some former notables who prolonged their activities far beyond the allotted span of three score and ten may also be mentioned. Sophocles finished his "Oedipus at Colonus" at 90; Titian continued to paint almost to the time of his death at 99; Michaelangelo did some of his enceau wrote his memoirs at 84; Tennyson wrote his lyric masterpiece, "Crossing the Bar." after he was 80; Goethe completed "Faust" at about the same age.

But if these grand old men ever heard of psychologists it is evident that they did not take them too seriously.

It's hard to get a concrete idea through a concrete head.

They Married; Took Separate Hotel Rooms

They really didn't want to get married, to begin with, but it was the only thing to do, apparently. So in order that everything would look all right, they married, and in traveling took separate rooms at hotels, so that the marriage could be annulled.

That is part of the story that Rowena Rostand and Peter Bland have to tell after they decided they wanted to be married. Of course the story has hundreds and hundreds of interesting and amusing incidents in it to make you laugh.

The story, "Rowena Rides The Rumble" starts in this issue of this newspaper, and is truly a modern piece of work.

GROWTH OF OIL INDUSTRY

It's just a little more than 72 years since the oil industry was born, by Drake's achievement of drilling the first oil well at Titusville, Pa. Figures alone cannot show how this giant industry has grown in that time, or what it has meant to the growth of scores of other basic industries.

In 1859, when the first well was brought in, only two wells were drilled. By 1929 the total number of wells drilled amounted to more than 800,000 and had yielded 8,638,505,000 barrels of oil. Since the discovery of oil in Pennsylvania, the petroleum industry has spread to the four corners of the earth.

The first well's output sold for as high as $20 a barrel the first year, although two years later it had sunk to as low as 10 cents a barrel. These fluctuations are interesting in the light of recent events in the oil industry, especially the spectacular mobilization of military forces in Oklahoma and Texas to force the price of crude up to $1 a barrel. The Pennsylvania grade fields, not so long ago regarded as petered out, demonstrated the fallacy of this idea when they were forced to prorate their production because, like other parts of the country, they had been producing too much oil.

With all the fluctuation in prices since 1859, the Pennsylvania grade product has always commanded premium prices due to the fact that the crude oil of this region has been endowed by nature with superior lubricating qualities.

Awakened by strange noises, Adalbert Chowaniec of Buffalo, N.Y., called the police who found two stray ducks deep in conversation the back porch.

Positive Proof of FORD ECONOMY

City of Detroit purchases 137 new Ford cars
Hundreds now in use prove low cost of operation

THESE 137 new Ford cars represent one of the largest deliveries ever made to a municipality at one time.

21 radio-equipped Ford scout cars were traded in on this purchase. They had been operated day and night for two years in heavy traffic and all kinds of weather.

Their individual records ranged from 78,434 miles to 143,723 miles with a grand total of 2,283,097 miles. The operating cost of the 21 cars was 2.284 cents a mile — less than 2 1/3 cents. This cost included all fuel, oil, tires, repairs and every other item except depreciation and insurance.

Of 577 Ford cars in Detroit City service, the 300 in the Police Department traveled a total of 6,591,937 miles during the past fiscal year, at an average cost of 2.9 cents a mile.

Many claims have been made on operating costs, but here in the carefully kept motor car records of the City of Detroit is positive proof of Ford economy.

In the paragraphs above, it is seen that 21 Ford scout cars averaged less than 2 1/3 cents a mile and 300 Ford cars in all branches of Detroit police work averaged 2.9 cents a mile!

Day and night, twenty-four hours a day, these Ford cars are in operation. Few branches of transportation demand such grueling service. The records show that low fuel and oil consumption is but one of the Ford's many economies. Ford materials, simplicity of design and accuracy in manufacturing provide unusual strength, stamina and freedom from replacements and repairs.

The individual car buyer as well as the purchasing department of a city or a business cannot afford to ignore the proved economy of the Ford car.

CHILTON COUNTY HIGH PLAYED LAST GAME OF SEASON FRIDAY

Montgomery County High Plays Hard To Bring Defeat To The Local Boys Who Have Shown Fine Coaching Here

The football team of the Chilton County High School played its last game on its 1931 schedule last Friday afternoon on the local gridiron against the fast and scrappy eleven from the Montgomery County High School at Ramer. Chilton played its best game of the season against this team from Montgomery County and was defeated by the breaks of the game. An intercepted pass on Ramer's twenty yard line and a run of eighty yards for the single tally of the game defeated the Chilton boys and robbed them of their deserving laurels.

Chilton and Ramer both have good teams this year, but Ramer was doped to defeat the Chilton boys by a larger score than she did. Ramer kicked off to Chilton on the first play a long pass good for almost twenty-five yards was completed by Chilton. Joe Moore substuting at left end for Miller lay out along the side lines and after taking the pass with a clear field ahead of him he was drug down from behind.

Chilton then began a driving attack through the Ramer line that carried them to Ramer's two yard line. On the next play Chilton was penalized for pushing and the ball was carried back to the twenty yard line. This seemed to take the heart out of the Chilton attack and they did not seriously threaen the Ramer goal again during the game.

The Chilton boys out played the Ramer team during the first half, but during the second half a more determined team from Montgomery County held the edge. In the third quarter Arnold full back, dropped back, prepared to pass the ball. He was rushed and let the ball go into the hands of a Ramer back who juggled it and carried it down the sidelines for a run of eighty yards and Ramer's lone score. The point after the touchdown was made by carrying the ball across a line plunge.

Chilton fought bitterly during the last part of this quarter and the fourth period and stopped the attack of the Ramer boys but could not score on their opponents.

The entire Chilton team played their best game of the season against this team. Particularly outstanding in the backfield was the work of J. Tiffin, Burdette. Sumner and Arnold.

It was behind the line plunging of Tiffin and Burdette and Sumner that the ball was advanced to the shadow of the Ramer goal. Time and again on line plunges Tiffin or Burdette carried the ball through the Ramer line for gains of seven and eight yards.

Sumner did not carry the ball as much as the two previously mentioned players, but his blocking and hard tackling were particularly outstanding. Sumner did the punting for the Chilton team and his kicks were all high and far down the fields giving the ends time to get down under them.

The Chilton line bore the brunt of the game the last half. The work of Frank Foshee left tackle for Chilton, was the outstanding feature of the game. The majority of the Ramer plays were stopped by the hard tackling of Foshee. Often he was ahead of his ends in getting down under punts and succeeded in bottling up most of their returns.

Taylor, who is playing his last year at center for Chilton, was the other outstanding lineman for Chilton. He shared honors with Foshee in stopping the attack of the Ramer boys. Several times he succeeded in breaking thru and stopping the Ramer play for a loss before it reached the line of scrimmage.

Littlejohn and Moore, ends, and Jones, M. D. Foshee, and Popwell, in the line, deserve commendation for the game they played.

The Chilton line slightly out-weighed the Ramer line and used this weight to a great advantage in breaking through and blocking Ramer punts. Chilton blocked several of Ramer's kicks, but Ramer did not succeed in getting thru to block those of Sumner.

This is the last game of the season for the Chilton team. Their record stands as follows for the year:

Chilton-Isabella	18-0
Chilton-Marbury	0-0
Chilton-Prattville	0-0
Chilton-Selma	0-13
Chilton-Plantersville	0-13
Chilton-Bibb Co. High	0-6
Chilton-Isabella	19-0
Chilton-Montevallo	32-0
Chilton-Holtville	0-0
Chilton-Ramer	0-7
	69-29

A GRIDIRON THRILLER

Many thrilling plays have thrown football fans into a frenzy of excitement this season, as in past seasons, but perhaps the most sensational exploit of the year was that of Buster Mott of Georgia, who took a New York University kikoff on his own 4-yard line and raced 96 yards to a touchdown.

Such a feat is not unprecedented, by any means, but the conditions under which it was performed made it especially noteworthy, because aside from this brilliant stunt Georgia was outplayed throughout the game.

To illustrate: New York made 15 first downs against Georgia's 6; gained 103 yards in passing, against 20. Yet Mott's one perfect run upset all this, and with the aid of Catfish Smith's trusty toe, which kicked goal after touchdown, the Southerners emerged triumphant by the score of 7 to 6.

All of which merely emphisizes the well-known fact that in football, as in other earthly affairs, anything may happen.

ABOUT BOY BABIES

Researchers and statisticians are digging into everything imaginable nowadays, figuring out the possibilities and probabilities of this and that. Dr. A. J. Lotka, a specialist in life insurance statistics, has been studying the prevalence of boy babies, and these are some of his conclusions:

When a boy baby is born he has two chances out of three to grow up and become a father. He has even chances to become the father of a son, but only one chance in four to become the father of two sons. A few grow up to have 10 sons, but there is only one chance in 2,000 that this will happen.

Many other more or less interesting conclusions with respect to the perpetuation of a family name are set forth by Dr. Lotka, who finally estimates that in about nine cases out of ten the name of any particular family branch will eventually die out.

He fails, however, to state whether he thinks this is a fortunate thing for the human race. We venture the suggestion that in most cases it probably is.

THANKSGIVING DAY

Thanksgiving Day, as we know it, is a distinctively American institution, although festivals of similar import may be traced back many hundreds of years. The Hebrew Feas of the Tabernacles, the Greek Thesmophoria, the Roman Cerealia and the English Harvest Home all appear to have had something in common with our national holiday.

Immediately after the first harvest of the Pilgrims in 1621 Thanksgiving was first observed in America. Similar observances were instituted by other colonies—by Massachusetts in 1630, by Connecticut in 1639, and by New Netherlands in 1644. During the Revolution several Thanksgiving Days ware appointed by the Continental Congress.

President George Washington designated November 26, 1789, as "a day of public thanksgiving and prayer," and in 1795 he made a similar designation. President Madison appointed a day of thanksgiving at the close of the War of 1812. Various states observed the day irregularly during succeeding years, but it was not until 1864 that the day become a fixed, annual event.

In that year President Lincoln appointed the fourth Thursday of November as a day of national Thanksgiving by official proclamation, and the example thus set has been followed by all succeeding Presidents.

Washington's original Thanksgiving proclamation is preserved in the Library of Congress. The precious document was lost for more than 100 years, until it was discovered among some Washington manuscripts being auctioned in New York in 1921, when it was purchased for $300 and restored it to the government archives.

PAUL'S LETTER TO PHILEMON
Philemon 4-20

This is the time you will surely read an entire book, and without asking "What chapter, please," as did a certain thealogue when Prof. Purves indicated a verse for special study. Then you will need to make certain of the pronunciation, which is on the long "e".

Onesimus is a slave who stole from his master Philemon, and then ran away. Finally he turned up in Rome and dropped in at one of Paul's meetings. Now Paul knew Philemon well and may even have recognized the slave. At least Onesimus was a totally different man following his conversion. Then he consulted with Paul about the right way to recompense Philemon, for he was still the chattel of the owner. Obviously, only one person could be the judge, but Paul made the approach easy by the gracious letter which he wrote and of which Onesimus, possibly with Tychius, was the bearer.

Art in letter writing is splendidly set forth in this short letter. Some people just write bare facts in their letters and others make themselves vivid both in direct expression and as you read between the lines. It is a joy to get a letter from such a friend.

Much is packed into the salutation. The family of Philemon is included in the greeting. The commendations will be pleasing to the received, and it must be kept in mind that Paul is writing for a purpose: to gain kindly treatment of runaway Onesimus.

Slavery today is all but over in the world. There are obligations still with reference to enslaved humanity which rest on each one of us. The Golden Text is sweeping in its scope: "There can be neither bond nor free—for all are one man in Christ Jesus," Galatians 3:28. How do you think Philemon received Onesimus?

Dief Says Radio Program Is Fine

Without doubt the new Goodyear radio program is probably the most elaborate, fastest moving presentation of its kind ever staged by a commercial organization, according to Dief's Service Station, Goodyear dealer at Clanton.

"With two nationally known bands directed by John Philip Sousa and Arthur Pryor; an internationally famous male quartet and a full concert-dance orchestra, the outlay of talent is nothing short of being really wonderful," declared Mr. Diefenderfer.

"There's another feature, too, that's important, the programs come each Tuesday evening and Saturday evening over NBC Network at a convenient hour, 7:30 o'clock on Tuesday, and 8:00 o'clock on Saturday, and you don't have to wait up all night to hear it."

Mr. Diefenderfer also pointed out that the announcement of November 10, which told of the Goodyear prize contest, staged weekly, was certain to be of interest to every car owner and urged local fans to tune in on that date.

The programs are broadcast every Tuesday and Saturday evening from WEAF over the 54-station network of NBC. The bands will alternate evenings but the quartet and dance orchestra will be on both evenings.

"With Goodyear's airship building program and small fleet of non-rigid airships, its position in the tire manufacturing industry and now on the air, we Goodyear dealers can truthfully say that Goodyear is on the highways and both in and on the air," concluded Mr. Diefenderfer.

Humorettes

Gazipp—In the two miles between Hickville and Bumtown I drove by 18 hot dog stands.

Gazoop—You don't mean to infer that you stopped at all the others?

Mother—Tommy, take your castor oil before you go to bed.

Tommy—No, I won't take it tonight!

Mother—Tommy, you're impudent!

Tommy—No, I ain't, Ma, but the bottle's empty and the drug store is closed for the night.

Algernon—Eusebia, what is it your father sees in me to object to?

Eusebia—He doesn't see anything in you, Algernon; that's why he objects.

Oysterpuff—Did you hear that young Dr. Bitterdose has made his mark already?

Fogg—Why, that's extraordinary!

Oysterpuff—Not so very. You see, he vaccinated a baby.

LABOR AND LOVE
By Edmund Gosse

Labor and love! There are no other laws
To rule the liberal action of that soul
Which fate hath set beneath thy brief control,
Or lull the empty fear that racks and gnaws;
Labor; Then like a rising moon, the cause
Of life shall light thine hour from pole to pole,
Thou shalt taste health of purpose, and the roll
Of simple joys unwind without a pause.
Love! And thy heart shall cease to question why
Its beating pulse was set to rock and rave;
Find but another heart this side the grave;
To soothe and cling to,—thou hast life's reply.
Labor and love! Then fade without a sigh,
Submerged beneath the inexorable wave.

POOR KINGS
By William H. Davies

God's pity on poor kings,
They know no gentle rest;
The North and South cry out,
Cries come from East and West—
"Come, open this new Dock, Building, Bazaar or Fair."
Lord, what a wretched life
Such men must bear.

They're followed, watched and spied,
No liberty they know;
Some eye will watch them still,
No matter where they go.
When in green lanes I muse,
Alone, and hear birds sing,
God's pity then, say I
On some poor king.

MAIN STREET Looks at BROADWAY

The Prize Exhibit—

New York has three Zoos, the most famous being the Bronx which is famous all over the world. The Central Park Zoo is the oldest and is even smaller than the Prospect Park one in Brooklyn. The one in Central Park draws many thousands of visitors, even with its small collection of wild animals. The hippo and giraffe are really about the only valuable animals in that Zoo.

The exhibit which draws the most visitors and is hard to get near on Sundays is one that is nothing less than an ordinary farmyard, rather smaller than usual for the number of denizens it contains. Inside the fence are a mule cow, goat, donkey, turkey, a few hens, geese, ducks and so on. And the public most of them foreigners, stand and stare and dream, unless there are children along, in which case there is an outpouring of all varieties of languages.

New York Signs—

In certain neighborhoods certain languages take precedence over the English lanbuage, both in street conversations and in signs. The Williamsburg Bridge that connects lower East Side with Brooklyn, has sofe signs entirely in Jewish. Others carry Italian and English. This same condition obtains in the southern portion of Central Park. On the north end, where the population is mostly black, straight English is used.

Up in the Bronx there are quite a few places where German is used alongside of English. In other parts of town one can see signs in Arabic, Greek and one eating place bears a sign in the Hindustani language, one of the oldest in the world. Nearly all of these foreign places are eating places. The Russians have dozens of cafes, all bearing signs in their funny looking language.

Lingual Shock—

Away down town the other day we were strolling through the Persian district. Several small boys were playing ball in the narrow street and using typical tough New Yorkese to express themselves. One of them had just yapped at another:

"Gee, chase yourself. We're gonna play ball," when a third story window opened and a pretty Assyrian woman looked out and saw the boy. He was wanted apparently, as a musical stream of language issued from the woman's mouth and the little boy looked up, grunted just like any other American boy and yelled up at her, "Oh, alright. I'll come up," and the window closed softly.

Syrian Shops—

Within a cats jump of Wall Street there are lots of Syrian shops devoted to lingerie. For many centuries the women of the near East have been noted for their needlework and these shops carry a certain amount of such importations. But the mainstay for most of them are "importations" from New York sweat shops and look like very ordinary stuff. Even the prices are just about what one would pay in any shop in the land.

The district is one of the few disappointing ones in the whole city to us. That is, except for the wonderful bakeries the Syrians operate along Washington street, just around the corner from the underwear shops.

BORROWING THE LOCAL WEEKLY PAPER HAS ITS DANGERS

The practice of borrowing has its advantages but it also has many disadvantages, thinks P. O. Davis, editor at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute Auburn. It works on some things but not on others.

"When it comes to borrowing the weekly newspaper I am of the opinion that subscribing is much better than borrowing," said Mr. Davis.

"Borrowing is not as good for the reader and it is bad for the editor who realizes that borrowing is a tribute to his paper but he is unable to show names of borrowers on his audited subscription list; and here is where he suffers in addition to losing the subscription money which he needs to pay his bills and give his readers a good paper."

So far Mr. Davis has not been able to offer a solution; but he calls attention to a paragraph which has been going the rounds of the press for many years, and will bear reprinting:

"A farmer, rather than subscribe to the paper, sent his boy to borrow a neighbor's. The lad knocked over a stand of bees. His father, hurrying to help him ran into a barberd wire fence, gashing his leg and ruining a new pair of overalls. Hearing the noise, his wife ran out, upsetting a four-gallon churn of cream into a basket of kittens drowning the litter. At the same time she dropped and broke a new set of store teeth. During the excitement the daughter eloped with the hired man, the dog broke up eleven setting hens, and the calves got out and chewed up a line of washing hung out to dry. All to save one or two dollars, the price of a subscription.

A TRAGEDY RECALLED

A rivalry for the affections of a beautiful young actress still in her teens, which led to one of New York's most noted tragedies in high life nearly sixty years ago, was recalled by the recent death of Mrs. Helen Josephine Mansfield Reade in Paris, at the age of 78.

For "Josie" Mansfield was the woman in the case. Jim Fiske, Jr., a powerful figure in Wall Street, was one of the suitors, while Edward S. Stokes, his one-time partner, was the other In 1872 Stokes shot Fiske to death on the stairway of the old Grand Central Hotel. Through powerful political influences Stokes was let off with a four-year sentence. When he died in 1901, Tammany friends gave him an elaborate funeral with a band of 200 musicians.

Miss Mansfield married Robert I. Reade, a New York lawyer, in 1891. Reade, an incorrigible drunkard and drug addict, was declared insane in 1897 and died shortly afterward.

Mrs. Reade's death was due to a fall while shopping in a department store in Paris. Thus ended a long life filled with many and varied experiences, including stage triumphs, romance and tragedy, which made big news in the days of long ago.

CHANGE IN COTTON POLICY ANNOUNCED

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 25.—Members of the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association will no longer have to pay warehouse charges which have accumulated on their cotton prior to the time it is pooled, according to an announcement by J. A. Beaty, general manager.

Formerly the Association form of receipt was dated on the day the member had his cotton changed to the Association and the member was required to pay all warehouse charges up to that time, but this is no longer the case, Beaty said. Under the new regulation, unless the cotton was stored prior to August 1, 1931, the Association form of receipt will be dated back to the date of the original receipt and the member will not be required to pay accumulated warehouse charges when pooling.

Taylor Bros. Buy Smith Grocery Co.

It was learned last week that the Taylor Wholesale Grocery Co., of Clanton has purchased the wholesale grocery company of J. Lee Smith, of Clanton.

The report stated that the consolidation of the two large businesses will take place on or about January 1, 1932. Tom Taylor and Roland Taylor have been prominent in the wholesale grocery business in this section of the state for a number of years, however, J. Lee Smith was the pioneer in the business in Clanton, and has built up a splendid trade.

It is understood that after January 1, the two places, Taylors and Smiths, will be consolidated and operated in the large building now occupied by J. Lee Smith, and under the firm name of Taylor Wholesale Grocery Company.

that the factory will without a doubt be erected. It is planned that it be located on the site of the planing mill, just north of the town. The factory will manufacture strawberry crates, baskets and other farm produce containers from timber of the county, and it is expected that if possible the factory will manufacture crates for the 1932 crop of strawberries in the Thorsby section, as it will not be underway well enough to furnish the entire county at that time.

It was specifically stated at the meeting last Saturday in Thorsby that no outsider has any connection with the idea and that the mill, or factory, would be owned by citizens of the county who are interested enough in the plan to aid in putting it over.

The group of men named above are now making preparations to show more definite plans in regard to the project, and it is expected that within a few weeks things will be looking up in that section.

Maplesville News

The entire town and community was shocked last Thursday afternoon over the death of Mr. John Cobern. He and his father were walking a foot log across Mulberry creek and in some way Mr. John Cobern fell in and drowned. His father, Mr. Charlie Cobern, called for help. His son, Mr. Jeff, was breaking cane near by and ran to his assistance, and got the body out, but he was dead.

Dr. Hayes of Clanton was called, but couldn't do anything, it was too late.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Cobern and was reared here, 40 years old. He leaves three brothers, Mr. Jeff Cobern, Maplesville, Mr. Ernest Cobern, Birmingham, and Mr. Burr Cobern, Tennessee. He leaves a widow and four children, Lucile, Johnnie Mae, Sara Nell and James. Their many friends extend to them their deepest sympathy. Interment was in Mulberry Cemetery, Rev. Grady Williams officiating. The Woodmen had charge of the body with Martin Funeral directors. Mr. Cobern had a host of friends who mourn his passing.

Industries Seeking Southern Locations

Within the past 60 days a larger number of industries have been seeking southern location than at any time during the past several years, according to a survey of the general industrial prospects made by the Alabama Industrial Development Board, Birmingham.

Industries have made $52,000,000 additional capital investments in Alabama since the Industrial Board began functioning three years ago. This has increased the industrial payroll in the state by $5,000,000 annually.

Mr. Orrin Williams, publisher of The Jefferson County Herald, was a pleasant caller at the News office Saturday. He and Mrs. Williams, with Mr. and Mrs. Kelly, were on their way to Rockford to visit relatives and friends over the week end.

BAPTIST CHURCH IS SCENE OF BRILLIANT SOCIAL EVENT HERE

Annual "Bosses Night" Brings Out Some Of Best In Witty Remarks, Stunts, Songs; First Event Of Its Kind Ever Held In Clanton

What will no doubt be acclaimed by those fortunate enough to be present, the most brilliant social event of the season took place in the basement of the Clanton Baptist church last Monday night when the Pilot Club of Clanton, a business womans organization, gave what is called "Bosses Night."

The basement of the church was artistically decorated and the long banquet tables were spotted with favors, as well as presenting a sight that was more than pleasing to the most critical eye, bespeaking of the fine manner in which the Pilot Club usually conducts an entertainment or business project.

Each member of the club was to have as her guest, her boss, however, several of the members had as their guests men who were not their employers. The entire program was given for bosses, in a true form. The menu for the affair included such dishes to please the palate as, Ship of State, The King, His Dress and Accessories, The Blush of A Pilot, The Spoils of The Pilot, The Golden Nervous Assistant, Sweets From Many Lands, and Meditation. Each dish, served in course style and in a most elaborate manner by one of the Circles of the Baptist church, was named to speak of Pilots.

The program, with Mrs. Lillie Stapp, president of the Club, presiding and acting as toastmistress, opened with the song, "We're Here For Fun." Mrs. Stapp, gowned in a most becoming evening gown of white, made a lasting impression on those present with her splendid manner in which she conducted the entertainment. The song was followed by invocation, given by Mrs. Sophia Jones, a member of the club. This was followed by the welcome address from Mrs. Stapp, with "Boss" Omar Reynolds, responding in behalf of the bosses.

Miss Bess Thomas, a Pilot, then arose and in her usual artistic and pleasing manner rendered "Why I'm A Pilot" followed by a very delightful violin duet by Misses Jane and Helen Roberts, the two charming and talented daughters of Mrs. Elna Roberts, a Pilot, who also accompanied them on the piano. Little Martha Higgins was introduced, and standing in her chair with sweetness radiating from her face gave two readings.

The song by the members of the club standing, "There Are Bosses Who Make Us Happy," to the tune of an old favorite, was given, followed by much applause. One of the features of the entertainment was the impersonation of a modern lawyer by Miss Madelyn Orr who had as her inefficient stenographer, Miss Margaret Brown, members of the club. The scene was in an office and carried out in a most amusing and entertaining manner.

Miss Nell Wells, Miss Zora Guy and Miss Madge Scarborough followed the office scene, singing "Beautiful Maidens" showing Miss Alma Allen as the "Beautiful Maiden." This was followed by a Who's Who voting contest among the Pilots, which ended in the selection of the Vainest Man, The Biggest Flirt, The Cutest Man and others with Miss Dewey Branch presiding. The closing song, "Pilot Club, Oh Pilot Club," was given, with all present standing.

Several out of town guests were present.

WEASEL IS CAUGHT NEAR TEEL'S SERVICE STATION

"Pop Goes The Weasel" said the little rat terrier dog last Monday night that caught a weasel near the Teel Service Station in Clanton.

Just where the furry little creature came from has not yet been determined as they are seldom seen in this section The weasel, not a large one, made his appearance at the service station Monday night and attracted the attention of a small dog, who caught it. Many persons made wild guesses as to what it was. Some thought it a rat of some species, while others just didn't know. However, after quite a bit of deliberation, it was finally decided to call the animal a weasel.

FIREMEN WILL PLAY CITY MEN IN FOOTBALL

Game Friday Afternoon Creating Wide Interest Among Fans Of The Gridiron

The members of the volunteer fire department will have a fight on their hands Friday afternoon, and it won't be fire either, when they play a team of football players on the high school gridiron.

The opposing team will be composed of various young men of Clanton, some of them former players and others not. It is hard to tell just how the bets are running, but it is believed the odds are on the fireboys. This is due perhaps to the fact that there are several former high school stars who are members of the department, including Doodle Gore, Milton Smith, Ruphus Brown, Red Wagoner, Arthur Broadhead and others.

However at the same time it is understood that several of those who are being counted in on the team to oppose the firemen were at one time considered high school stars on the field. These include such men as Jack Hayes, Osmond Grant, (Mayor of South Clanton), Earl Parrish, Louie Smith, Phillip Foshee, and others.

The game will be played on the high school field at three-thirty o'clock Friday afternoon. Tickets have been on sale for several days and are selling fast. Proceeds from this game will go to the Firemen's Equipment Fund, according to Loren Smith, chief. The people of Clanton should turn out to see this game, ladies as well as men.

Mrs. Dick Hayes and children, and Miss Katherine Hayes spent Thanksgiving in Clayton with Mrs. Hayes' parents, Dr. and Mrs. Floyd.

LOCAL SENIORS TO STAGE PLAY FRIDAY NIGHT

"That's One On Bill" Promises To Be Entertainment Out-of-the-Ordinary

The Senior Class of C. C. H. S. will present a three act comedy, "That's One On Bill," at the high school auditorium Friday, December 4, at 7:30 p.m.

Herman Harris plays the roll of Uncle Jimmie, who is very wealthy and has promised to leave part of his fortune to his nephew, Bill Hailey, if he will marry as instructed and part to Battling Bennie Bozo, if Bennie remains unmarried. These parts are fittingly portrayed by Joe VanDerveer and Ottis Miller. Charlsie Pyron plays the part of Bill's sister, Lil, who seeks to have her brother marry Mae, Ethel Mae Jones, and plans to make him tired of his romantic desire for a motion picture bride. Lil gets her friend, Patricia, to visit their home in guise of a motion picture star. Jane Roberts as Patricia Pansy LaGloria, loses little time in enamoring the hearts of all the boys in the neighborhood, and Bill even steals money from his uncle Jimmie's trunk to make an impression on the "movie queen." Earl Ellis plays the part of Harvey Roder, who is engaged to Lil. Leroy Martin as Ned Collins, who always knows a good joke, and Sallye Mahan, the maid, furnish the comedy.

This play is being coached by Miss Berniece Williams, a member of the high school faculty, and who has had experience in this kind of work before. She and the cast of characters are fitted for their parts, and the play promises to be outstanding. The proceeds will go toward paying for the electric clock which the Senior Class of this year has presented to the school as a memorial. Admission will be 25 and 35 cents.

Clanton Offers Entertainments During Coming Week of Wide Local Interest

The holiday spirit is in the air and even the climatic conditions are beginning to do their part in making folks feel that Christmas is not far off—just twenty-three days to be exact. During the next several days, Clanton is offering to the amusement seeking public some real interesting programs in the way of entertainments.

Each of the entertainments being sponsored by local organizations are being put on to raise funds for various worthy causes. Perhaps the most important is the musical comedy to be presented on next Tuesday night at the Wadesonian Theatre, by the Clanton Pilot Club, however at the same time the Volunteer Firemen's football game is being given in order to raise funds for the Firemen's Equipment Fund of Clanton, while members of the senior class of the Chilton County High School are in need of funds to complete payment on work of improvement at the high school, and will stage a play tomorrow (Friday) night.

The Pilot Club's play is titled 'Oh, Professor," a Wayne P. Sewell production, with its cast of characters being composed of local people. The high school's play "That's One On Bill" promises to be good. The Firemen's football game for tomorrow afternoon on the local field will draw a large crowd.

Now is a good time to see some real amusements, getting value received for your money, at the same time doing your part to aid in good work.

Along with the entertainments for the week, comes the splendid program of pictures at the Wadesonian Theatre. To the management of the theatre of Clanton goes the thanks and appreciation of all interested in the Pilot Club work. The Wadesonian Theatre gladly gives the use of its large stage and auditorium for the club to present its play, "Oh, Professor."

CHEVROL'T SAYS SOMETHING IS COMING HERE

Polk Bros. Say Tell Readers To Keep Their Eye On Chevrolet

Considerable speculation was aroused here this week by the appearance around town and on the highways of posters, streams and placards bearing the advice to "Keep your eye on Chevrolet."

What this leading manufacturer plans in the way of follow-up to the preliminary announcement could not be learned from Mr. W. M. Polk of the Polk Brothers Motor Co., Inc., local Chevrolet dealers.

"Tell any of your readers interested," Mr. Smith, "to watch the next week's edition of your newspaper for any further details and to visit our showroom on Saturday of this week. I can't tell you any more just now," Mr. Polk stated when asked what it is all about.

"We have done a fine business during the past twelve months, and thruout the country the Chevrolet six is leading every other make in registrations. Met, good as that showing is, we expect to do better during the coming months. Just "Keep your eye on Chevrolet" Mr. Polk concluded.

NO PRODUCE ACCEPTED THIS MONTH ON SUBSCRIPTIONS

As was stated in last week's issue of the News, the offer of accepting farm produce as payment for subscriptions to the News expired November 30th, and no produce will be accepted as payment during this month.

OVER ONE HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS for Wages Materials and Properties

DURING the last 10 years additions have been made to properties in the amount of $120,316,675.50, including power plants, transmission lines, substations, distribution systems and other facilities. This money has gone mainly into wages and materials —has furnished employment—to supply electric service in Alabama. Keeping pace with the growth of Alabama and its industries—to bring dependable electric service to hundreds of towns and villages and to thousands of farms.

Twelve million dollars represents the average yearly amount of additions and betterments for the 10 year period.

This Company has never curtailed its service to any customer nor failed to meet any power demand placed upon it. Its service is available to 66 of 67 counties of the State, and, under the orders of Alabama Public Service Commission power rates have become uniform throughout the territory. Thus the smallest community served is given equal opportunity to compete with the largest city for the location of new industries in so far as the rates for power are concerned.

BEWARE

Smooth-worn tires skid on winter roads

Don't wait for accidents—get new rubber on every wheel now. New tires mean safety—you need them more right now than at any time in the year. It's a fact, good tires show almost no wear in cold wet weather—they'll still be "new" next spring.

In a certain Chilton county community two neighbors had a difference, and they were about to go to law. Each one was very determined to carry his point, and had gone so far with their dispute, that a court cost was involved. There was a man in that community in whom each one had confidence, and he lamented, "How bad it is for neighbors to fall out," and this man sought to bring about an understanding and a settlement. The two men were called to meet him at a certain time. This peace maker talked and plead with them to bury the hatchet, and finally it was agreed that the difference should be forgotten. Then the question of the seven dollar's cost was brought up. One man consented to pay half, but the other refused to pay any of the cost. The man who called the two neighbors together to make peace, quietly paid the cost, and then admonished his friends to go home and live in peace. That is what I call a noble Christian act. "Blessed are the peace makers for they shall be called the children of God."

All my life I have been preaching that a man who faces a red flag, a flag of danger, should turn to the right, and avoid the harm that is just down the way. On last Saturday I seemed to have learned that it is not always the right thing to do. I came to a red light at a street crossing in Montgomery, and I did not stop my car, but pushed it around the corner to the right and went on my way. I thought that a man had a perfect right to turn into traffic and go to the right, but the watching police thought differently. When my car was parked a half block away, the officer of the law stepped up and ordered me to police headquarters. I did not exactly argue with that policeman, but I told him I was from the country, and he let me off for that time. I promised him never to do it again. In spite of police I am still saying, "When you see danger ahead, turn to the right and go straight ahead."

They have strange laws down in Montgomery. In order that I might be a law abiding citizen, I hunted out a place where I could park my car, and leave it there for hours, and not fear the visit of the cops. Last Saturday I drove my car into this place, locked the doors and left it in contentment. Two hours later I came back and found it tagged. The tag kindly said that I had broken every law of the city, county, state and nation. I felt all out of luck. I hurried to a hardware man who stood near, and I asked him to tell me what crime I had committed. He informed me that the place where my car was parked was held in reserve for wagons on Saturday. He said that I could park there any day, except Saturday. That was news to me. I hunted the policeman of that street, and told him that I was from the country, and did not know that they had Monday and Saturday laws, and he was "Mighty light" on me, God bless his great big fat form. To say the least, Montgomery is modern. You know that in our religious life we have Sunday laws and Monday laws. I like a steady law in civic affairs, as well as in religious matters. If right is right on Monday, then I want the same thing to be right on Saturday.

When I was a boy I was party to the flying of a kite. The thing was lifted into the air until it was just a speck in the sky. Since then I have wondered who was really flying that kite. "Who flies the kite?" The boy answers, "I fly the kite." The wind says, "No such thing, I fly the kite." You are both dead wrong," replied the string, "I fly the kite." "Do not be so quick to speak," replied the tail of the kite, I fly the kite." Each one was right and each one was wrong. The kite would not fly without a boy, without the wind, without the string, without the tail, but not one alone could fly that kite. They all had to work together. When you pat yourself on the back saying, "I fly the kite" just remember that you are not doing it alone. You may have wrought wonders, but somebody helped you wonderfully. It takes car loads of co-operation to fly the kite.

The old hound came from behind the meat market with a bone between his jaws. He walked like the lord of creation to a vacant lot, and then crouched down over his bone. He put in an hour of the hardest gnawing that I have ever witnessed. He would shut his eyes and grind his teeth on the bone. Occasionally it would crack like a broken stick. That old hound gnawed long and hard, but he never packed away much. The bone had been well picked, and there was nothing for the hungry dog. I have often wondered what fun a human could get out of a dry bone. We get them and we whet our teeth on them for hours at a time. We have seen the select meet in the sitting room, and gnaw on a scandal bone for hours. Hambone said, "I saw my old dog gnawing on a dry bone, but he did not lay much in."

The other morning I stood by the rail road track and saw a freight train with 83 empties going south. The engine was boiling its smoke, and the train made more noise than a thunder storm in July, but I saw nothing but empties going south. Not many nights ago I heard much noise coming from a car that went rumbling by and I wondered why so much loud talk, and then it occurred to me, "Just a load of empties out on a joy ride."

IDEAL GIFT FOR THE BOY

What glorious adventures boys between the ages of ten and twenty have reading THE AMERICAN BOY—YOUTH'S COMPANION. As if by magic, this well-known magazine carries boys to distant parts of the world, introduces them to strange people, lets them experience queer customs and revel in the adventures of foreign lands.

In a single issue, a boy will battle the frozen Northland with sled and dog team, cross Indian-haunted plains in a prairie schooner, zoom over war-torn lands in an army plane or on dangerous routes with a U. S. mail pilot, hunt wild animals in Africa atop the swaying back of an elephant, go cruising in a battleship, fight Arab raiders with the Foreign Legion and participate in many other thrilling experiences that come to readers of THE AMERICAN BOY—YOUTH'S COMPANION.

It is such experiences as these that sharpen a boy's wits, kindle his imagination, strengthen his character, develop his understanding of the world in which he lives and of the people that inhabit it. Here, indeed, is the ideal gift for that boy in whom you are interested—that son, nephew, cousin, neighbor, or, perhaps, the son of a business associate. An attractive gift card bearing your name will be sent to the boy if you request it with your order. Then every time the mailman brings the magazine to his door, the boy will think of you gratefully.

Subscription prices are only $2.00 for one year and $3.00 for three years. Mail your order direct to THE AMERICAN BOY—YOUTH'S COMPANION, 550 W. Lafayette Blvd., Detroit, Michigan. Service on your subscription will start with whichever issue you specify.

In 1931 the average American boy and girl is receiving two more years of schooling than did the child of 1914, or 17 years ago. His (or her) chances of going to high school, which were only one in ten in 1900, are now even; and his chances of college, which were one in thirty-three in 1900, are now one in six, according to the U. S. Education Bureau at Washington.

TODAY AND TOMORROW

FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

HAPPYLAND

If I were asked to name the spot in the United States where the general industrial and business depression has been felt least, I would say, at a guess, that it is Leonardtown, Maryland. There may be, and probably are, other communities as happily situated but I don't know their names.

A young man who has been working in New York, and consequently has his head full of nothing but hard times talk, visited his old home in Leonardtown recently. He asked folks there how severely the depression had hit them and the unanimous response was "what depression?" They had not heard about it in Leonardtown.

When I knew Leonardtown as a boy, there wasn't any railroad, and there isn't now. But there were a lot of contented farmers, raising watermelons and oysters and tobacco.

Everybody had enough to eat and to wear, and most had a surplus besides, and my young girl friend tells me that that is exactly the situation of Leonardtown today.

These Maryland country people never bothered about industries, never tried to make their county seat a second Baltimore or Philadelphia, never got the idea that money brings happiness. I think they are pretty sensible people.

In a good many parts of the country the effort to restock fields and forests with game birds and animals in order to provide sport for hunters is meeting with considerable success. It has been going on for a long time. I saw the other day a letter written in 1820, from a town in Vermont, saying that red foxes were beginning to be seen in that territory. All the red foxes in America originated with a few that were brought from England late in the 1700's and turned loose on Long Island to furnish sport for huntsmen. Today the red fox outnumbers the native American gray fox in most of the Atlantic Coast states.

Sentimental people look upon hunting as a cruel form of sport. Their imaginations endow animals with the same emotional and reasoning qualities as human beings. Those who know most about wild life say that animals have no fear of death because they are unable to imagine it, that they run when pursued purely from instinct.

The most amazing results of the nation-wide effort to take care of the unemployed is not the disclosure of large numbers of people who would rather beg than work, although that is surprising enough, but the revelation of human greed furnished by the spectacle of folks who are very far from being poverty stricken, but who unblushingly call upon the relief agencies for money.

I saw a paragraph the other day in the Wayne (Neb.) Herald saying that the county commissioners had adopted a resolution that no county aid should be given to paupers who own automobiles or radios, smoke cigars or loaf in poolrooms. In New York City it has been disclosed that hundreds of men holding steady jobs have been drawing regular incomes in addition from the unemployment relief funds, through the connivance of politicians.

We have got to change a good many of our assumptions as a result of the unemployment investigations. One of those assumptions is that everybody would rather earn money than take charity. And another apparently false assumption is the old belief that graft is confined to politicians.

Beyond doubt one of the powerful reasons behind the reluctance of capital to embark in new enterprises or furnish additional money for established industries in the past two years has been the fear of Communism.

I am convinced that the overwhelming overthrow of the Labor Party in England, and the recent revelations from Russia of the failure of the Soviet program at a dozen different points, have had more to do with restoring confidence among capitalists and industrial leaders than almost anything else which has happened.

No intelligent person will contend that our capitalist system of government and industry is perfect, but no intelligent person can deny that it works better than any other system which has ever been tried on a large scale.

I haven't any way of proving it, but I have a notion that a lot of the unemployment and consequent distress, especially among the so-called white-collar workers, is due to the fact that their parents had the idea that there was something degrading in manual work, and brought up their children to be bookkeepers, stenographers and office workers generally, instead of being miners, carpenters or factory workers like themselves.

It is human nature to think that the other fellow's job is better than your own. It is also a praiseworthy spirit that makes parents ambitious to have their children occupy a better social and economic position than their own. But when hard times come the white-collar workers are the ones who feel the effects first and hardest.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT, DEATH OF D. H. GENTRY

—o—

Silently, ruthlessly, death moves among us. It is with sadness that we report the death of one of our charter members, brother D. H. Gentry.

Brother Gentry was faithful to the last and always ready and willing to do his part in any Eastern Star duties.

Therefore, be it resolved, that the Thorsby Chapter, No. 154, Order of the Eastern Star, express their sorrw in the loss of their faithful member.

Be It Further Resolved, That our chapter express our brotherly and sisterly love and sincere sympathy to our sister, Mrs. D. H. Gentry, in her bereavement.

Be It Resolved Further, That a copy of this resolution be sent to each of the county papers, one copy be sent to Mrs. Gentry, and one placed on file in our chapter.

ROME AND BEYOND

II Timothy 4:6-18

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

The historical record of Paul's life does not go beyond the first Roman imprisonment. Probably Luke planned to write a third book and complete the account of this apostle to the Gentiles. After the release, return was made to Asia Minor and Timothy was left at Ephesus as Paul proceeded to Macedonia. Titus was sent to both Corinth and Crete. In the interim, Paul wrote two more letters: I Timothy and Titus.

The burning of Rome took place after Paul was released from prison. Emperor Nero was the incendiary but the Christians were charged with this dastardly deed. Wholesale arrests began and it is likely that special favor was gained by some officials who again apprehended Paul and had him taken to Rome. This time the freedom of his own hired house was not granted and confinement, according to tradition, was in the underground dungeon of the Mamertine prison which was visited by the writer a few years ago.

II Timothy is Paul's farewell and it is addressed to the young man who must take up the responsibilities of the apostolic office.

With calmness and assurance in faith Paul faces whatever may take place. His self audit is best expressed in the Golden Text: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith," 4:7. There is no question about the beyond as he faces the Judgment.

Only Luke was with him. Others who would have been helpful had deserted the Cause or were away on indicated missions. Timothy is sent for and also John Mark, who once failed but later made good in the ministry. Of one thing Paul was constantly certain: "The Lord will save me unto his heavenly kingdom." According to tradition, release came by beheading.

FEW ARE BORN BLIND

By Dr. Christmas Seal

A young man who was born blind has just been given sight by surgery. Although many people are "blind from birth," very few are born blind. They become blind because infection occurs at birth. To prevent such infection the eyes of every newborn child should be treated by the doctor with "anti-septic drops."

The Alabama Tuberculosis Association warns you that children do not all see alike. Some are born with eyes in which defective eyeball construction does not permit the right focus. Some have muscular defects. Do not expect the child to discover his weakness. If his vision is poor he supposes that all people have just such stumbling vision. On entering school, or before, every child should have a simple test of vision. This can be given by a school teacher using a visual chart or a Snelling Test Card. It is still better to have your child's eyes tested by a doctor. If your county has an organized Health Department, the Health Officer will do the work. Be sure to have this simple test of vision made of your child.

COTTON DELEGATES ADOPT TEXAS PLAN

Southwide Conference, Jackson Quickly Agrees On 50 Per Cent Cut

Without a dissenting vote among eighty accredited delegates at the Governors' South-wide Cotton Conference at Jackson, Mississippi, November 23, seeking uniform legislation on acreage reduction, an acreage control law similar in effect to the law now in force in the State of Texas, was chosen as the legislative star to which the cotton growers should hitch their hopes for better days.

Active in the calling of the conference and present taking part in its proceedings were Governors Parnell of Arkansas, Bilbo of Mississippi, Blackwood of South Carolina, and Russell of Georgia. Governors of other states sent specially appointed and personal representatives.

The states of Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas were represented in the conference, while messages of co-operation came from the governors of Arizona, Florida and New Mexico.

Resolution Unanimously Adopted

WHEREAS, the conservation of soil fertility, the elimination of plant disease and the prevention of insect damage, as well as the prosperity and happiness of the people of the Southern States, demand a reduction of the acreage now planted to cotton and other soil exhausting plants; and

WHEREAS, the only method of securing such reduced acreage now being generally considered, is by state laws of cotton producing states bearing equally upon all cotton producers; and

WHEREAS, it is imperative that such laws, if adopted, shall be uniform in effect and adopted in states producing not less than 75% of the cotton crop of the entire South; therefore

BE IT RESOLVED, by the Conference of Governors and Members of the Legislature, and other representatives of the Southern States held in Jackson, Mississippi, on November 23, 1931, as follows:

SECTION 1. We recommend that an acreage control law similar in effect to the law now in force in the State of Texas be adopted by all cotton producing states, with such modifications of administrative features as will prevent grave injustice to citizens of sections of such states, and we further recommend that the independence and sovereignty of other states in adopting laws securing, at least a fifty per cent reduction of cotton acreage, be respected.

Section 2. We recommend that cotton producing states adopting laws securing a reduction of at least fifty per cent in cotton acreage during the years of 1932 and 1933 shall repeal such laws unless laws of similar effect are adopted prior to January 20th, 1932, by states producing at least seventy-five per cent of the cotton crop of the South, as shown by the reports of the Federal Census Bureau for the year 1930.

Section 3. We urge the Governors of those states that have not enacted laws similar in effect to the law recommended herein to immediately convene their Legislatures for the purpose of enacting laws as provided for in this resolution, to the end that all of the cotton growing states may enact such laws on or before January 20, 1932.

RESOLVED, FURTHER: That the Secretary of the Mississippi conference furnish a copy of this resolution to the Governors of all the cotton growing states and to the press.

Executive Committee Named

To carry on the work of the conference an Executive Committee was named, consisting of Dr. Tait Butler of Memphis, editor of the Progressive Farmer, chairman, and Harry D. Wilson, Commissioner of Agriculture of Louisiana, J. E. McDonald, Commissioner of Agriculture of Texas, E. F. Creekmore, general manager of the American Cotton Co-operative Association, and W. H. Hodges, chairman of the Louisiana Relief Committee. The committee was directed to follow up actively the work of the Conference.

Governor Proclaims Arbor Day

Governor B. M. Miller has designated Friday, December 4, for general observance throughout the state as Arbor Day. The text of the Governor's proclamation follows:

WHEREAS the forests of Alabama constitute one of her fundamental resources upon which is founded the economic structure of the commonwealth, and

WHEREAS under normal conditions the woodlands furnish regular employment and means of livelihood for many thousands of citizens and in times of stress they contribute readily available shelter material, inexpensive fuel and various natural foods for mankind, and

WHEREAS the growth of trees is more rapid in the South than in other sections of the country, thereby affording more steady progress in the development of forest communities, and

WHEREAS millions of acres of Alabama land, which will not when cultivated grow more than enough in farm crops to cover the costs of production, will pay for itself many times over if fully stocked with timber trees, and

WHEREAS the existence of trees on poor areas serves to rebuild soils and increase fertility, as well as to prevent the erosion and gullying of the land, and

WHEREAS trees growing along the highways and town and city streets afford comfort and beauty to the traveler and to the community, and

WHEREAS on account of the numerous benefits derived from the culture of trees in the forest, rural and even urban communities, their growth should be promoted by all practicable means,

THEREFORE, I, B. M. MILLER, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby designate and set apart the day of Friday, December 4, 1931, as Arbor Day, and I do commend to the people of this commonwealth, individually and in association, the planting of trees in suitable places and the further observance of Arbor Day through participation in exercises designed to increase the interest of both young and old in the advancement of tree growth within the state.

The State Commission of Forestry has prepared suggestions for an Arbor Day program in pamphlet form, copies of which may be obtained by writing to the State Forester, 500 Dexter Avenue, Montgomery, Alabama.

County Agent Stapp To Stage County-Wide Rat Control Campaign

Early in December, Mr. Roy Moore, of the United States Department of Agriculture, wil lbe in the County to help Mr. Stapp and the Vocational Teachers conduct a county-wide rat control campaign. The plan is to mix poisoned bait at one central point and on a specified date distribute it at the following points: Clanton, Thorsby, Jemison, Cooper, Verbena, Isabella High School, Maplesville, Stanton Mr. Moore advises that fifty cents worth of poisoned bait will be enough for the average farm. Farmers interested in the campaign are requested to get in touch with Mr. Stapp this week and make a deposit for their bait and give instructions as to their most convenient place to get it on the specified date.

Mr. Stapp states that the Jemison Town Council has already agreed to cooperate in the campaign, and that he hopes all of the town councils will do likewise as rats destroy annually thousands of dollars worth of produce in the towns as well as in the country.

The School Teacher's Twenty-Third Psalm

Coosa County has one of the most loyal group of school teachers in its history. How many of us could always wear a smile and put our best into our work when we weren't getting our pay check? That's exactly what the teachers of Coosa County are doing and they are certainly to be commended for their splendid work, but we fear that even though they do always wear a smile that deep down in their hearts they have the same feeling as a long suffering school teacher in the rural schools of Jones County, Miss., did, when he had gone two and a half months without pay. He wrote the following parody on the Twenty-Third Psalm:

"School teaching is my occupation: I am in want.

"It maketh me to lie down without supper: it leadeth me beside empty tables.

"It increaseth my debts: it leadeth me from the paths of society for the lack of clothes.

"Yea, although I walk through life barefooted. I will fear no evil for maybe my friends will feed me.

"Thou prepareth a reduction in my salary before me in the presence of my creditors: thou faileth to anoint my head with a hat; my expenses runneth over.

"And if I do not get a pay day, misery and poverty will follow me all the days of my life and I will live on credit forever."

History Repeats Itself

"It is a gloomy moment in history. Not for many years—not in the lifetime of most men who read this paper—has there been so much grave and deep apprehension; never has the future seemed so incalculable as at this time. In our own country there is universal commercial prostration and panic, and thousands of our poorest fellow-citizens are turned out against the approaching winter without employment, and without prospect of it.

"In France the political caldron seethes and bubbles with uncertainty; Russia hangs, as usual, like a cloud, dark and silent, upon the horizon of Europe; while all the energies, resources and influences of the British Empire are sorely tried, and are yet to be tried more sorely, in coping with the vast and deadly Indian insurrection, and with its disturbed relations in China.

"It is a solemn moment, and no man can feel an indifference (which, happily, no man pretends to feel) in the issue of events.

"Of our own troubles no man can see the end. They are fortunately, as yet, mainly commercial; and if we are only to lose money, and by painful poverty to be taught wisdom—the wisdom of honor, of faith, of sympathy and of charity—no man need seriously to despair. And yet the very haste to be rich, which is the occasion of this widespread calamity, has also tended to destroy the moral forces with which we are to resist and subdue the calamity."

The paragraphs quoted above were not written yesterday, although they are very much the same sort of thing that many people are saying today. They were printed in Harper's Weekly on October 10, 1857, seventy-four years ago.

If in these seventy-four years there had been no change we would have good ground for pessimism now. But everybody knows that during most of that time this country has experienced good times steadily getting better.

What happened before will happen again. From all that we can see and hear we believe that the worst of the present situation is over and that conditions are on the mend. And we are certain that the pessimists who are still frightened out of their wits have no more basis for their gloom than did our grandfathers in 1857.

War On Hunters Who Kill

As one reads of the deaths of those mistaken "for deer," and other game, the decimation of animals is of less importance than the safety of individuals. It has almost come to the place where the question is whether the hunter or the hunted will be killed

Seth Gordon, President of the American Game Association, is outspoken in declaring that most hunting accidents are not accidents at all, saying: "Any man who takes a loaded gun, usually upon someone else's land, and handles it so carelessly that he kills or injures another person, should certainly be held criminally liable." He insists that the first duty of the hunter "is to observe the rules of caution in handling a gun and to fail in this is criminal negligence of the most inexcusable sort." He thinks that sportsmen themselves would do well to press charges against hunters whose accidental shootings are the results of carelessness.

In several states penalties are provided for such carelessness by refusing for a specific number of years to license hunters who have been convicted of careless shooting. Along the same line is the [illegible] of George B. Slobie, commissioner of Inland Fisheries and Game Department of Maine, who declares he will revoke for life the licenses of hunters who have shot other gunners and he will do it without waiting for convictions.

Hunting fatalities, like those caused by the automobile, seem to be taken for granted by the general public and are practically always explained by the all-encompassing "unavoidable" accident. It is about time for the authorities in Alabama, as well as in other places, to do something more than render perfunctory verdicts in the cases of deaths such as these.

If---

"Quit cussing the newspapers," says The Enterprise Ledger. "You're not half as careful about what you say as they are."

Which is all too true. If the average newspaper printed a tiny fraction of the gossip floating around in its community, it would be sued immediately out of existence.

Newspapers are responsible. They have to be. And realizing the responsibility, newspaper men make sincere and eternal efforts to get facts before writing every story, from the smallest item to the biggest.

If individuals exercised the same vigilance in seeking the truth before they ventured a statement, it would be a much lovelier world in which to live.—Dothan Eagle.

Read in the papers where some learned man of a certain college says that an ugly face can be covered with personality. He meant by that that one who does not have a good looking face could overcome that trouble by developing a wonderful personality whereby members of the opposite sex would be some infatuated by the personality, the physical defects would be overlooked. But he didn't say for how long.

Max von Oppenheim once said, "Americans and Arabs are the most courteous people in the world." Now all you Americans should make your best bow. Americans are courteous to strangers that is true, but once the majority of Americans become familiar, then a certain amount of courtesy is lacking. Don't know about the Arabs, but that word brings to my mind a letter once addressed to me in which was contained an Arab statement. Do you remember it?

Heard that a fellow got sore at this paper the other day because nothing was said about his place of business going to be closed on Thanksgiving. I've been wondering how he expected the ed to know he would close when he didn't tell about it. That is the way with a lot of folks. They want to cuss the newspapers because they didn't have a story about something the person was interested in. How do newspapers know anything except when they are told?

Newspapers are a darn sight more careful about what they say in print than persons are. They have to be.

Am glad to see that the firemen are going to have a football game to raise funds with which to purchase rain coats and hats. It has just occurred to me that it takes two teams to have a football game. Understand that the firemen are going to have some real fighting to do to win this game Friday afternoon, and on the other hand there are some former high school football stars on the firemen's team. Let's all go down to the high school Friday afternoon and see this game.

Then here is the Senior Class of the high school putting on a play, "That's One On Bill." This comes off Friday night of this week.

The Pilot Club women of Clanton are going to pull another "big 'un" right away, so they say. Listening to talk over the fence and telephone, I have just about decided that it is going to be a big one all right. Their play "Oh, Professor" will be staged within the next few weeks. I understand that the young lady coach who is here to help has arrived and is ready to put the ladies and men through their nightly dozen.

Well, Jane Anne, have you decided to let me have the last word? Seems that way. I understand that you took a slap at me the other night in the Coal Bin, and my friend The Kid reprimanded you for it. Serves you right.

Let us hope that those who are cutting prices on work, material, etc., will soon realize their mistake before it is too late. I get wind of some real price cutting going on in Clanton and apparently it is being done just to get the sale, because I can't see for the like of me how any profit is to be realized by cutting prices to the bone.

The buying public will soon learn where they can secure value received for their money, and that by buying an inferior article at a low price, they are much worse off than by buying a better article at a slightly higher price.

Hear that the Thanksgiving program given at the Kiwanis Club meeting Wednesday of last week was a most enjoyable one. Samuel J. Ezell had charge of the program and with the assistance of Dan W. Haskew, another preacher, they certainly made those fellows do a little thinking, so I hear.

BANKERS DEVELOP NEW FINANCE AID

President of American Bankers Association Describes Plan and Services of National Credit Corporation

NEW YORK.—The National Credit Corporation, a billion dollar cooperative institution, is the method worked out by bankers to put into practical effect the central point in President Hoover's plan for renewing the commercial and industrial activity of the nation as proposed in his statement to the nation of October 7, Harry J. Haas, president of the American Bankers Association stated in a recent interview.

The corporation is strictly cooperative in character, he said, to unite the entire banking system and increase the effectiveness of the financial services of banks to their communities in rural districts as well as the cities. The plan will marshal the banking resources of the country, he explained, by creating a national institution whose funds will be loaned when necessary to banks which have assets in their portfolios that are thoroughly sound but are not eligible for loans at federal reserve banks.

To Benefit Everybody

"There is no citizen in the United States but will benefit in very practical ways from the results of the operation of this forward-looking plan of cooperation, which may be regarded as one of the most constructive steps that have been taken toward revival of sound business activity," Mr. Haas declared, adding:

"The National Credit Corporation represents an instrumentality that should have far-reaching effect in restoring the confidence of the public. The plan not only has been formulated by the country's leading banking authorities, but also will be carried out locally as well as nationally by banking representatives who have given their time and thought to this undertaking as a real public service.

"The American Bankers Association convention was in session at the time the plan was proposed and unanimously endorsed it in principle. I have examined the detailed formulation of the working plans as developed by the incessant labors of some of the Nation's leading bankers who have undertaken to put it into practical operation in single-minded devotion to the national welfare, and I am able to say without reservation that the National Credit Corporation as set up by them constitutes a practical, sound and efficient means for carrying out President Hoover's proposal."

HARD TIMES RENEW BANKER'S OPTIMISM

Former Bankers' Chief Finds Much in Past Year to Inspire Confidence in Financial Reliability

ROME C. STEPHENSON, retiring president of the American Bankers Association, declared in an address on the expiration of his term of office that, in travelling about among the banks from one end of the country to the other during the past year, he had "come out of it with a renewed faith in the strength of our banking structure and our banking situation, and a renewed faith particularly in the spirit and courage of the men in the banks that have enabled them to rise unconquered over difficulties such as men never had to face before, or to accept with fortitude misfortunes that were beyond human power to prevent."

When he reflected, he said, that the "entire human economic structure has been brought to the verge of ruin under the difficulties that have swept over not only the nation but the entire world, and that the results of events of this kind react with particular directness upon the stability of our banks, and yet how few have succumbed, we may well renew our confidence in the banks of America; when we think also of how many of our bankers have stood up under the stress and storms of these times and how relatively few of them have been proved wanting in the series of crises that have assailed them, we may well feel a sincere pride in our fellow bankers." He added:

"So I come out of this year of somber experiences not as a pessimist, but as an optimist—as one with a renewed faith and confidence in the spirit of his fellow men under overwhelming difficulties. And particularly do I come out of this year as a banker who is proud of his fellow bankers for the undaunted way in which they have met their part of the great test through which the times have put the nation. I believe that this year has brought new honor to our banking traditions and our banking profession and has won for the banker new title to the faith and trust of all classes of his fellow citizens."

Wise Spending

Careful and wise spending will help solve our economic problems and will be of untold benefit to the farmer. Our troubles are not caused by the spending of money, but because it was spent unwisely.

LOCAL TELEPHONE CENTRAL BEING MOVED TO NEW PLACE

Mr. A. L. Giles is being engaged this week in the moving of the lines preparatory to moving the central office of the Peoples Telephone Company into the John Giles home on the east end of Third Avenue North. When all of the lines are put in their new position, the switchboard will be disconnected and moved. This will take about a day, during which time no central service can be given. It is expected that this work will be done one day next week.

A large new lead covered cable will be installed between First Street and the Giles home, which will greatly help the connection between the switchboard and the mail lines.

Now just a word to the phoneholders: It takes money to do this work, notwithstanding the fact that the Board of Directors are getting every bit of the value possible out of each cent spent. And comparatively few have as yet paid their central fees. Mr. Giles is working this year at a salary that is just as low as anyone could expect him to work. But he is going to run the office and give the best service that he possibly can with the equipment at hand. Not one cent of the money is going to be wasted—you may rest assured of that.

possible now is the time for all good m

So, all phoneholders are urged to pay up your fees just as hastily as possible. The business can't run without some money, and it is hoped that you will come on and help us out by paying your fees.—Jesse Baker, President; T. E. Wyatt, Secretary-Treasurer.

NATIONAL FARM MEET DRAWS ALABAMIANS

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 25.—Many Alabamians are expected to attend the annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation in Chicago, December 7 to 9, says E. L. Deal, executive secretary of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, who will be this State's official delegate.

Of chief interest to the Alabama farmers attending will be the election of officers, since Edward A. O'Neal, for eight years president of the Alabama organization and now president of the American organization, will be up for re-election. Arrangements have been made for Alabamians who attend to purchase reduced fare tickets, upon presentation of identification certificates which can be had from Alabama headquarters here.

During protracted periods of trade depression the virtue of economy is acutely realized, though it is not always wisely practiced.

Forced by circumstances to curtail expenses, many firms immediately commence drastic pruning work on the amount set aside for advertising. In some cases they cut it out altogether.

The unwisdom of this step is quickly realized when trade brightens up again.

It is then appreciated that there is more need for advertising during a cycle of depression than there is in times of prosperity.

Advertising your business is letting everybody know what only you know about your goods or service.

Advertising is going to all the people with a wholesale offer of what you have to sell.

Letters To The Editor

Jemison, Ala., Nov. 27, 1931.

Editor, Chilton County News:

Discussion of various kinds seem to be in order, so I decided to try and let off some of the surplus gas that has been accumulating on my system for some time.

Everywhere you go these days the great cry is, "Fight for this, fight for that." Almost every organization, sect and creed seems to want to be militant. A great many individuals are prone to go among their fellows with a chip on their shoulder and their bristles standing straight up. Why should we have so much strife amongst us just at this time when we need the united effort of every right seeing and right doing person to bring us through the doubts and uncertainties of the times and help us to obtain again the progress and prosperity that speed and thoughtlessness and extravagance have lost for us?

I know that a purpose or an ideal that has not enough nerve to support itself will not amount to very much. It is a great quality to have noble purposes in view and nerve and ability to defend them, but don't forget that your fighting should be in defense of your own good purposes and not offensive campaigns calculated to tear down the good purposes of others.

No institution, public or private, which has been built on others that have been wrongfully torn down can endure. No individual that has risen to fame or fortune by trampling his fellows that he has humbled in his own selfish rise can expect to enjoy continuously the emoluments thus wrongfully gained.

Let us realize that all the noble characters this country has produced were greatest in times of peace. That they were noblest when they went forth, not with a great cry of battle or thirst for turmoil and blood, but calmly to attain if possible, the purpose in view through justice and right.

All the lasting steps of civilization have been attained in times of peace and good will. Don't forget that the word peace applies more closely to individuals than to nations. Where there is enduring peace among individuals there cannot be devastating wars between nations.

Let us get acquainted with our neighbor. Let us talk and think over our weighty problems together. President McKinley said in his last great public address, "Let us realize our interests are in concord, not conflict. Come, let us reason together," then in our multitude of councils maybe some one of our own kind will be able to light a candle that will dissipate the darkness and show us the naked truth, so that we may in all faith know and do our duties. Then we can climb out of the pit without pulling others down to climb upon. Then we, as we climb upward can slap our fellows joyously on the back and wish them God speed.

If you want your tax burdens lightened quit voting for political ticks and vote for honest men of your own kind that have always earned their bread by the sweat of their brows and know the crying needs of their own kind.

Respectfully,

HOWARD ROPER.

Editor, Chilton County News:

My letter would be too long to tell you of all the earthly promises that God made to His chosen people, Israel. And of the many blessings they received, and how God fed them on manna, and quails and God caused their shoes and clothes to last, and of the evils that came to them when they disobeyed God, and of them working six years and resting the seventh year, and every fifty years to be a Jubilee Year. (Lev. 25th chapter) and in (Col. 2:17) we see that the Sabbath was a shadow of things to come and of the law being a shadow of good things to come (Heb. 10:1) and of their last King who was taken to prison and his eyes put out which was 1207 years after Jacob's death.

The birth of Jesus was 606 years later. When Jesus was 32 years old he rode into Jerusalem and offered to be their king. They rejected him and later they crucified him. So by their unbelief the Gentiles were grafted in, which is explained in the 11 chapter of Romans. Through their fall salvation did come unto the Gentiles (11 verse).

Abraham looked in four directions and God said all the land thou seest I will give thee and thy seed forever. (Gen. 13:14:15).

Therefore, knowing that Jesus gave himself a ransom for all, (a corresponding price, for all) and that God is the Saviour of all men, and a special Saviour to them that believe (Tim. 4:10) and that the Great Salvation was first spoken of by our Lord (Heb. 2:3). Jude 3 speaks of the common salvation and to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. We see in (Acts 17:31) that God hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained. I fail to see where the church, the true followers of Christ, will be in the judgment of the world, for they must make their calling an election sure, and lay aside every weight of sin. They are also to suffer in order to reign with Christ (2 Pet. 1:10 Heb. 12:1 Sec. Tim. 2:12). They must do the Lord's will in order to keep a living faith and press toward the mark of the prize of high calling, and be a partaker of the divine nature (2 Pet. 1:4). All such will be in the first resurrection (Rev. 20:6) and be like Christ is now, a spirit being (and will reign with him.)

Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world. Know ye not that we shall judge angels (I Cor. 6:2-3). There is a great company that will wash their robes and many that were faithful B. C. will be princes in the earth for a time and all the obedient ones of mankind will gain life as Adam had before he sinned. Perfect human beings for God will make a new covenant with Israel (Jer. 31:31 32) and Paul says in Rom. 11:26-27, and so all Israel shall be saved as it written. There shall come out of Sion the deliverer and turn away ungodliness from Jacob. For this is my covenant unto them when I take away their sins.

After all the wilfully wicked and the Devil is destroyed (Heb: 2:14) all the earth will be filled with the glory of the Lord (Num. 14:21) for to this end Christ both died and rose and revived, that he might be Lord, both of the dead and living. Christ will be the life-giver and the church the mother.

A large audience enjoyed the stunts given by the four classes of Thorsby Institute Saturday night. The decision was rendered by popular vote of the audience, not including teachers and students at the Institute. The Freshmen won first place with their Toy Shop and a dramatization of the story of John Smith and Pocahontas. Miss Klingelhoefer was in charge. The Juniors won second place with a group of six stunts. The last was a group of tumbling exercises by the Junior boys. These tumbling exercises were very good and appreciated by the audience. Mr. King was in charge. The Seniors gave an interesting dramatization, "The Truth About the Sleeping Beauty," and a comical representation of the story of William Tell. A special feature of the Senior Class stunt was the dance of the Mascots between the two main acts. The Sophomores gave an old fashioned spelling bee. The costumes were very good and added much to the stunt. Teachers in the audience had opportunity to secure some fine points in discipline and school administration from Charles Croker, the professor. Mr. Maddox was in charge.

The stunts were all very good. Stunt night is an annual affair and is one of the most enjoyable programs of the year.

On Thanksgiving Day the dormitory students and teachers and Mr. and Mrs. Norton, Rev. and Mrs. E. W. Butler, Miss Marguerite Davison, Rev. Frank E. Jenkins and Mrs. Jenkins, and Miss Hardy from Wadley, Ala., enjoyed a bounteous turkey dinner at the Dining Hall. The Dining Hall was prettily decorated with vines and chrysanthemums. The place cards were autumn leaves. After the dinner a trip was made to the Poor Farm where songs were sung and Rev. Jos. E. Each gave a short talk. On the way home supper was eaten around a bon-fire at Mr. Butler's.

Teacher—Unselfishness is voluntarily doing without things we need. Give a living example.

Jimmie—Pa. He goes without a bath when he needs it.

MacSponger — Come here, Billie! Don't you know who I am?

Billie—Yes, I've heard daddy speak of you often. You're mother's cousin who stayed here two months one time and never offered to pay a cent for board.

Umptediddy—The gunman ordered me to get on my knees and pray before he killed me.

Pastor—So you were saved by prayer, my son?

Umptediddy—Yes, Reverend. I said the long one you make on Sunday mornings, and he fell asleep.

Guide—Why didn't you shoot at that tiger?

Timid Soul—Er-er, he didn't have the right kind of expression on his face for a rug.

Her—You used to say that you were unworthy of me.

Him—Well, what if I did?

Her—Nothing. Only you seem to be spending your married life trying to prove it.

First Rowena sat at wheel then Peter, then the two toer, each bravely trying to conceal worm of fear that gnawed at the of his being—fear that the chaphad changed her mind and would come. Eleven o'clock—eleven thir-The reporters were getting restive. Rack had his watch in his hand and Ruff was talking business off at side of the room.

taxicab pulled up at the side ence and a little brown mouse of a slipped out and crept timidly in ugh the rear door and sidled up to cashier's cage. She had to stand iptoe to be seen from within.

Where will I find Miss Rostand?" asked and her voice was a rippling whisper.

What name, please? Are you from of the papers?" asked the cashier kly.

No I'm Miss Lowell—Roberta Lo- I—I am the chaperon for the or tour," explained the little brown se with a roll of brown eyes and a lay of deep dimples.

Oh, Mr. Rack," called the cashier, re's the chaperon."

The little brown mouse looked ready to sink into the floor in shy confusion as the tide of photographers, reporters, automobile executives, and salesmen—and Rowena and Peter, you may be sure—surged swiftly toward her.

"The chaperon!" ejaculated Mr. Rack.

"The chaperon?" echoed Mr. Ruff.

She had told Rowena she was twenty-three years old, but standing timidly as she did at barely five feet two, with little brown curls framing her dimpled face, she did not at first glance bear testimony to such weight of years. Her small hands fluttered nervously with gloves and chain. Her big brown eyes gazed out, appalled and appealing, at the crowd that surged her way.

"Are—are you Roberta Lowell," gasped Rowena.

"No wonder they call you Bobby." said Peter.

Rowena rallied first. "Never mind, never mind!" she announced with a quick assumption of severity. "This is Bobby, and I'm the chaperon."

A few minutes later, the Rackruff roadster swept into Broadway and turned south, and the cheers of the assembled witnesses rattled the plate-glass windows of the show-rooms.

"You were right, Peter," confessed Rowena kindly, when they slowed for the first traffic light. "We should certainly have looked her over."

They were rolling steadily along the Jersey side of the river when Rowena and Peter had their first argument. Rowena considered the ideal plan for them to tear along at a high rate of speed, stopping for nothing until they reached the Rocky Mountains.

And Peter didn't agree with her. Peter's idea was to drive along at a fair speed. He said that if they tore furiously along over roads, good and bad, through boiling heat and chilling rain, they would reach a point of interest, tired, cross and worn out, hence unable to turn out the high-class work that Rackruff had a right to expect of them.

Rowena said that for her part she always worked best under pressure, that something in her responded strongly to hard driving, and that she enjoyed working when she was breathless, almost panting with haste. Peter, in that annoyingly gentle, almost disinterestedly lazy voice of his, said he didn't; said he couldn't work at all unless he had a breathful of fresh air in his lungs and quiet comfort in his heart.

"And of course," said Rowena cuttingly, "we will do it your way. Naturally you think good pictures are the most important part of the whole business."

"Of course," said Peter simply.

Rowena was speechless with rage. She was glad she had always hated artists anyhow, it made hating Peter now so much more natural. He was telling himself that he was very glad Rowena was pretty. It would be pleasant painting her. He didn't care in the least about her disposition. This was a business trip.

It just goes to show the sort that Peter was that he never even suspected that Rowena was furious.

A sudden gulping sob close at hand startled him from his comfortable revery. He looked sharply at Rowena, who sat rigidly erect and stony-faced beside him, blue eyes glittering ice cold.

"Are—are you crying?" he asked doubtfully.

"Me?—Most certainly not! I hope you don't think for a minute you could make me cry!" ejaculated Rowena.

Peter listened. It came again, low and unmistakable, the gulping sob of a weeping woman. They looked back over their shoulders. The little brown chaperon was slumped deep in the rumble seat, her head bowed low, small shoulders rising and falling with great sobs. Peter pulled to the side of the road and stopped the car, and both he and Rowena leaned back through the window.

"Why, what's the matter, darling?" asked Rowena solicitously. "Don't you feel well?"

The small brown head shook vigorously from side to side.

"I—I'm lonesome," confessed a sad small voice. "C-Carter—didn't come to see me off."

"C-Carter?" asked Rowena and Peter in chorus.

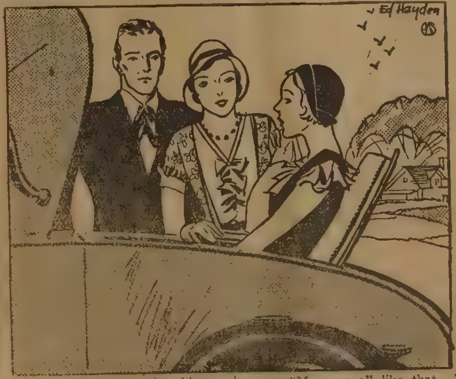
"We're engaged. I thought surely he would come to see me off, and he didn't. I wish I hadn't come. I feel very badly. Maybe I had better go back."

Stricken each with sudden fear that the chaperon might fail them—and they no farther west than the Hudson River—Rowena and Peter got hurriedly out and ran back to her, standing on either side while Rowena tenderly wiped the tear-stained face with a wisp of handkerchief and Peter patted both small brown hands with great vigor.

"I wrote him a very formal note," Bobby went on, "and said good-by, and told him he wouldn't need to bother taking me out places any more and sending me presents and flowers, for I was going on a long motor trip with some dear friends and would be gone a long time, and was starting on Monday morning at ten o'clock from the Rackruff salesroom on Broadway, and of course I thought he would be there to see me off, and he wasn't."

Grief quite overcame her; and she would have slip clear off the rumble seat into the bottom of the car if Peter hadn't caught her firmly and drawn her back.

"Don't you care, darling," said Rowena. "Men are all like that. They aren't worth crying about."



"You mustn't feel like that," said Peter gently. "He was probably so ashamed he couldn't bear to face you. That's the way I am. The more ashamed I feel the more—the more——"

"The more away you stay, I suppose, said Rowena coldly.

"Exactly," assented Peter.

"But he knows how dangerous motor trips are," sobbed Bobby. "He knows I'm likely to be killed any minute, or at least maimed for life."

"All alike," repeated Rowena grimly

"That's probably why he didn't come," said Peter comfortingly. "He realized that at thought of you going away into such terrible danger he would lose his self-control and break down before all those people. And then think how he'd feel."

Bobby thought of it. "But Carter's not like that," she said. "I don't believe he'd break down. He's not at all the breaking-down kind of man. He's got red hair——"

"Well, he might pretend he broke down," insisted Peter.

"All pretense, every one of them," declared Rowena sweepingly.

"It's terribly lonesome, going off on such a long trip without having Carter there to be ashamed of himself and feel sorry," said Bobby.

"I tell you what, darling," suggested Rowena brightly. "You come around here and sit with Peter and let him cheer you up. He's very good company. It's too lonesome for you back there alone."

"But you said I had to sit in the rumble seat!"

"Well, I've changed my mind. You see, I thought then that Peter and I would want to talk business and discuss our plans, and I never dreamed that every time I made a suggestion it would just lead to a bitter argument."

"Why, I didn't argue with you," protested Peter.

"I'd much rather sit in the rumble seat where I can think my thoughts in peace and not have my most innocent ideas contradicted before they are out of my mouth," continued Rowena.

"Why, I wasn't contradicting you," protested Peter.

But Rowena insisted, so Peter helped Bobby gently out of the rumble seat and was just turning to give Rowena a hand when he saw that she was already in, sitting very erect, chin high and eyes extremely blue. So he got in behind the wheel and they started off again.

Rowena settled back in the rumble seat with a malicious little grin. After listening to Bobby's chatter about Carter for an hour, she leaned forward

"Do you mind if I close this window?" she asked sweetly. "I'm trying to think out the plot to a story and I must have perfect silence to decide whether I want to have Bobby's Carter commit the murder or be committed."

From that moment the rumble seat was Rowena's own

She seemed to take a morbid pleasure in providing comfort for her privacy, and often smiled to herself in complacent and not unmalicious satisfaction when she heard the steady soft roll of Bobby's voice regaling Peter with vivid accounts about Carter and their last quarrel which caused her to apply for the trip.

Peter was in possession of a complete biography of Carter long before they reached Buffalo, where they were to pay their first official visit to the Rackruff salesrooms, and where he was to make his first picture of the roadster and Rowena.

For all the seclusion of the rumble seat, Rowena was able to break in on Bobby's love-affair long enough to voice her disagreement with Peter's plans when she wanted to, which was pretty often. It went without saying that they did not agree about the financial management of the trip. Rackruff Motors, Inc., had agreed to pay all expenses for the car en route, and had allowed Peter and Rowena a joint salary of one hundred dollars a week—an expense allowance, it was really.

Peter's idea of the way to carry on was obviously the simplest and most natural. He said he would pay expenses for both of them and then divide equally with Rowena whatever was left of the hundred dollars at the end of each week.

Rowena said it wouldn't do.

In the end, Peter agreed to divide each week's allowance with her immediately upon its receipt every Monday morning, each thereafter paying his own bills, bearing his own responsibility, and saving what he could from the amount.

Even before they reached Buffalo he realized it would have been money in his pocket to have stuck to his original idea. Certainly it was no great drain on the expense account buying food for Rowena. While motoring in the fresh air made both him and Bobby ravenously hungry, so that they wished to eat often, fully and expensively, it seemed to have no effect whatsoever upon Rowena, who ate so rarely and so little that Bobby accused her of trying to reduce

"Well," smiled Peter good-naturedly, "if you carry on like this for the next three months you will get rich off your share of the expense account."

Mr. Phillip Franklin has been ill now for some time. It was at first believed to be flu, but was a mistake. He left for Woodlawn hospital at three o'clock Monday morning. He was taken by Mr. Emmett Miskelley and Mr. Eddie Childress.

Mrs. Alice Franklin has been suffering from astham this week due to the unclean air.

Little Cecil Franklin has been ill for about two weeks, but is lots better.

Mr. Wilson Clements spent Thanksgiving with our home economics teacher, Miss Leacy Newell. Miss Newell lives in Camden, Alabama.

Miss Mary Clements was a visitor at our church Sunday.

Mr. Charlie Miskelley and Mr. Ershel Spivey spent Saturday night with Lance Franklin.

Pat Clements spent Saturday night with Albert Earl Foshee.

Mr. Dock Hodgen has been working in the Pleasant Grove community this week.

As it will be admitted by all this year of 1931 is drawing to an end. To many it has claimed some of our loved ones, but be it as it may, we all have something to thank our Lord for. First we have the good clear and free water from God to drink, that we might quench our thirst. Next we have good cool air to draw into our lungs for no other purpose than to maintain our lives. Yet who had not ever thought that we have something else to be thankful for, other than these vain and worldly goods. Now what else can we be thankful for besides money, food, clothes, etc.? Can anyone be thankful for anything else more than for Jesus, our slain king, whose red blood trickled down Calvary's Cross for you and me, that we might have life through eternal Ages. Let us all kneel on our knees and thank God for His Son who came and died for all.

"JOHN BULL'S" BIRTHDAY

An exhibit of early railroad equipment is being held in the Hall of Transportation of the Smithsonian Institution in celebration of the 100th anniversary of America's oldest locomotive, the "John Bull," built in England and brought to this country in 1831.

This engine pulled the first train over the pioneer Camden & Amboy railroad, the event marking the first operation of a steam locomotive in New Jersey, and one of the first in the United States. "John Bull" did continuous service until 1865, when it was presented to the Smithsonian Institution by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

But this veteran of the rails has made a few trips for exhibition purposes. In 1892 it ran to Chicago under its own steam to appear at the Columbian Exposition, and in 1927 it was a feature of the Baltimore & Ohio's centennial celebration at Halethorpe, Md.

BK09300 and BK09955, respectively, of the $6.00 preferred stock of the Company are in the hands of some unknown party who secured them by gross misrepresentation and fraud from their owner, Sam C. Bain, of Helena, Alabama.

The Company also states that it has notified its transfer agent of this fraudulent transaction and has put a stop order on the transfer of the certificates. It is understood that Mr. Bain has sworn out warrants and every endeavor is being made to apprehend the party guilty of this gross deception and fraudulent practice. TUSCALOOSA TO PLAY LANIER HIGH ON DECEMBER THE 5TH

On Saturday, December 5th, at Cramton Bowl, Montgomery, the High School of Tuscaloosa will play Lanier High School of Montgomery.

This is truly the high school football classic of the South. The Game is not being played for State championship, but for the Unemployment Fund.

One Hundred Per Cent of the gross receipts will be used for the Unemployment Fund. Transportation of the teams, hotel bills, printing, advertising and everything connected with the Game is being paid for by Montgomery citizens who are interested in the great cause for which this Game is played.

This Game should be of interest to the people of the entire State.

A WOMAN SENATOR

For the first time in its history, the United States Senate is to have a woman member who will actually take part in the proceedings of that body, in the person of Mrs. Hattie Caraway, appointed to succeed her late husband, Senator Thaddeus H. Caraway of Arkansas.

One other woman, Mrs. Rebecca Latimer Felton of Georgia, was Senator for one day, under a complimentary appointment, but performed no actual service.

Mrs. Caraway will serve under her present appointment until a special election is held in January, in which she is a candidate for the unexpired term of her husband, and for which she will probably have no opposition. She will then serve until 1933, and has agreed not to ask for re-election.

The growing custom of appointing or electing wives of dead officials to succeed them in public office is sentimentally fine, but whether it is always in the public interest is open to question. When the wife is really fitted for the office concerned there could be no legitimate objection, and in the case of Mrs. Caraway it is said that she is fully capable of performing the duties of Senator.

Almost any bright woman would be an improvement on the average present-day occupant of a Senate seat.

$100 Reward

The conditions of payment of the above reward are as follows:

First. That this lawless, piratical pair declare their identity through the columns of the Chilton County News, and Union Banner.

Second. That the following interrogatories with true answers, satisfactory to the undersigned be then published in said newspapers:

Clanton Methodist Church

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

A good lady was on her way to church last Sunday, and meeting a man with the morning paper in his hand she said, "Come and go to church with me." "I have got to go back to the house and help my wife cook dinner," replied the man. The woman knew that man was telling one. He was going home to read that daily. If all the men in Clanton, who claim to be so good to their wives on Sunday, would come to church, they would be better husbands during the week.

We made a good start for the new Conference year last Sunday. We had good crowds at all the services. Rev. E. C. Evans has been elected to teach the Men's Bible class, and he is going to make it worth while to attend. We have many splendid teachers in our Sunday school. Come and bring the whole family.

Preaching at 11 A. M. and 7 P. M. by the pastor. A warm welcome for all.

Former Kaiser Wilhelm of Gern is said to have become deeply relig of late. In his exile at Doorn, Holl he lives a most austere life, with votional exercises occupying much his daily routine.

According to reports, he reads Bible the first thing in the morn and has religious services at 8. The ternoon is largely devoted to the re ing of religious books, while the ev ing is marked by a season of pra

He attends services at a local chu with unfailing regularity, an odd f ture of which is that he writes ma the sermons which the pastor at ward preaches to him.

All this is in striking contrast the characteristics which the w saw in the rather arrogant war lord a few years ago, although Wilhelm ways professed to be on friendly te with the Deity. An American adm once got in bad by satirizing the Kaiser in a poem called "Me and G in which Wilhelm was represented claiming a partnership in which he g the Almighty second place.

Anyway, the exiled Kaiser is a g boy now, and at the age of 72 is likely to further endanger the peace the world.

A PROCLAMATION

GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama at its last session ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which proposed amendment is herein set out, and ordered that the election be held on the Second Tuesday next after five months after the date of the final adjournment of the regular session at which the said Amendment was proposed, and

WHEREAS, the Legislature adjourned on Saturday the 25th day of July, 1931, and Tuesday, the 5th day of January, 1932, is the second Tuesday next after five months after the date of the final adjournment of the said Legislature at which the Amendment was proposed, and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, B. M. "The City of Mobile shall be and it is hereby authorized and empowered, without an election, to annually levy and collect a tax on the property situated therein, to pay the expenses of the City Government, at such rate as may from time to time be fixed by the governing authorities of said city, but unless and until an amendment to the Constitution of Alabama shall be adopted, permitting said City after an election or elections to levy and collect taxes amounting in the aggregate to more than one and one-tenth (1.1) per centum of the value of the property situated therein, as assessed for State taxation during the preceding year, the total of the ad valorem taxes levied in any one tax year by said municipality for all purposes (including any tax levied to pay the debt existing on the 6th day of December, 1875, with interest thereon, or any renewal of such debt) shall not exceed in the aggregate one and one-tenth (1.1) per centum of the value of such property as assessed for State taxation during the preceding year."

I further direct and proclaim that notice of the election, upon the above set forth amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, be given by publishing the same once a week for eight successive weeks prior to the 5th day of January, 1932, in each County of the State of Alabama in a newspaper published in said county.

New York's Street Cars

This time of the year, when the wind blows cold, one can still see many "summer cars" in the big city. Thirty years ago one could see the same cars in any city of the country but New York is almost the only one where they still are being used. They are the kind with a wide footboard running the full length of the car, on which the conductor clambers back and forth and collects fares.

There's no protection from the weather except for curtains that are supposed to be let down in the rain. They are rarely used and most of them would probably crack if let down. But the main point is that they keep on running after the first frost. It takes hardy folks to enjoy a ride on them then.

Park Avenue Slipping

Real estate in New York is a gambling proposition as a general thing, although property rarely loses its value, except in hard times. One can never tell when a neighborhood will change. Fifty years ago Fourteenth Street was the swagger shopping place. Then it began to edge uptown and since then has gone north about a mile every ten years. It has finally verged on Central Park and it is unlikely to pass that barrier.

Years ago Fifth Avenue was the ultra fashionable street. It still is, for those able to afford a residence alongside Central Park, but below that it is strictly a business street. The fashionables had to move to Park (Fourth) Avenue. For ten years that was the swagger street.

A couple of years ago the society folk of this town suddenly struck on a new idea. They bought the slum property along the East River and have erected enormous apartment buildings there where plenty of homes cost $25,000 a year for rent alone. That is where nearly all the descendants of the original "400" are living now.

Theatrical Rivalry

One of the big producers of girl shows here recently figured out a scheme to get publicity for his really pretty stage people. To emphasize their youth, he gave a dinner for the girls' mothers.

A lot of pictures got into the papers and the theatre magnate was feeling rather well satisfied with life until a rival producer gave a dinner to his girls' grandmothers. He had seventy-five of them present and the seat of honor was given to the lone great-grandmother who horned in on the party.

Such things show the outsider that competition here is keener than anywhere else on earth.

papers and wait patiently for the car to start up again. As a sample of the running time the Broadway line can be cited. It is five miles from the Battery to Central Park and the schedule

One-Man Cars

Only a few of the surface lines use more than one man on their cars. The motorman collects your fares as you clamber aboard, holding up the car while he does so. Then you take your seat and the car proceeds. The cars here are slower than in any city in the country, but nobody seems to mind. The fare is the lowest in America, five cents for any distance.

If a long blockade occurs the passengers keep their noses buried in their calls for a one-way trip in forty-five minutes. That's just nine minutes to a mile.

It has one advantage. It's perhaps the best way of all to see New York.

A New Woman's Wrinkle

Beauty shops, which are supposed to remove wrinkles, have actually started a new one this year. Some of the more swagger places found it difficult to handle women forced to wait their turn, so they installed card tables and other games and now one can find the reception rooms crowded at all hours.

A lot of strangers to New York have found such shops a fine place to make acquaintances, and an ever better place in which to rest their tired feet after a morning's shopping tour.

AUTHOR OF "DIXIE"

Whenever the stirring tune of "Dixie" is played, particularly in the South, it is met with hearty applause. Thus, do Southerners pay tribute, unconsciously as a rule, to an Ohio Yankee.

For "Dixie" was composed by Daniel Decatur Emmet, born in Mount Vernon, Ohio, in 1818. Emmet, like that other writer of Southern songs, Stephen Fotser, never lived in the South.

Emmet was one of the organizers of the first negro minstrel company to tour the country, formed in 1842, when it opened in Chatham Square Theatre, New York. He was afterward associated with Dan Bryant, and in 1865 he formed his own company. He retired in 1878 and died in 1904 at the age of 89.

The song "Dixie" was written in 1859 and instantly became popular. The South adopted it and now after 72 years it stirs its hearers with undiminished enthusiasm.

In 1927 a tablet to Emmet's memory was unveiled in the churchyard of the Calvary Episcopal Church at Fletcher, N. C., the first memorial erected for him in the South, marking another link in the chain which binds the reunited country.

It is estimated that every seventh person lives in a city with a population of more than 100,000.

The Southern Farmers

Besides showing his name and address, the business card used by Farm Agent G. C. Smith, of Baton Rouge, La., bears the following good humored by very-much-to-the-point comment:

" 'The average Southern farmer gets up to the alarm of a Connecticut clock, buttons Chicago suspenders to a pair of Detroit overalls, washes his face with Cincinnati soap, sits down to a Grand Rapids table, eats Chicago meat and Minnesota flour cooked on a Sears-Roebuck stove, goes out to his barn and puts a New York bridle on a Missouri mule fed with Colorado alfalfa and Kansas oats; plows impoverished land covered by a Vermont mortgage with an Indiana plow, in an effort to make cotton for New England gamblers to speculate on. When bedtime comes, he reads a chapter in a Bible printed in Boston, says a prayer written in Jerusalm, crawls under a New Bedford blanket, only to be awakened by the bark of a hound dog, the only home product on the farm. Then he wonders why in the hex he can't make money raising cotton.' "

"A fertile soil means a prosperous people. Get greater yields from smaller fields. . . . Improving the soil is like courting a widow, you cannot overdo it. . . . Insane people do not cooperate, neither do shiftless farmers. . . . It is no harder to farm than it is to hunt or fish and there is as much sport in the one as there is in the other if we take that view of it. . . Safe farming—safe eating."

Helen really has a splendid voice and is mighty pretty in "Oh, Professor."

Knut Hamsun, one of this year's Nobel prize winners, once ran a street car in Chicago.

Brief News Notes

Second prize in the national health activities contest was won by 4-H club girls of Baldwin County, Alabama. Thousands of counties throughout the United States participated in the contest which was sponsored by the National Dairy Council.

The Federal Farm Board says that, "The operations of the Grain Stabilization Corporation during the winter of 1930-1931 had the effect of maintaining wheat prices in all United States markets at 15c to 30c per bushel higher than the comparable price in Liverpool, Antwerp and other markets which reflected importing values."

During October the total exports of tung oil from Hankow, China, was 10,426,000 pounds, of which 6,384,000 lbs. came to the United States and 4,042,000 pounds went to Europe. The European consignment represents a very substantial increase. Tung oil growers in Florida, in south Georgia, and south Alabama are competing with Chinese growers.

Miss Beverly Hester, Of Clanton, To Be Complimented by Birmingham Music Study Club

Below is a clipping from The Birmingham News of last Sunday, November 29th, telling of Miss Beverly Hester, pianist. Miss Hester, this newspaper is proud to say, belongs to Clanton rightfully, although her studies and work has been done elsewhere. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Hester, of Clanton.

The Birmingham Music Study Club has long anticipated the return of Miss Beverly Hester, pianist, who will this week arrive as the house guest of Mrs. J. W. Luke. She will appear in recital before the Music Club on Thursday, December 31, at 11 o'clock at the Southern Club.

Miss Hester is well remembered in the musical circles of the city. She was for several years a student here, under Mrs. Flourney Rivers and was studio accompanist for Mrs. Ruth Chandler and the late Mrs. Clara Harper Steele.

A graduate of Judson College, Miss Hester is now on the faculty there, in the music department.

Following her graduation at Judson, Miss Hester studied under the famous Thalberg at the Cincinnati Conservatory and then went to New York to spend four interesting industrious years studying "accompanying" with Richard Hageman, piano with Betah Ruder and later with Arthur Newstead, who is at the Jouilliard School. During this period Miss Hester was accompanist for the late Oscar Saenger, and she held an excellent position as organist with the Keith and Loew Motion Picture organization.

Miss Hester's program will include several beautiful groups in which Schumann, Chopin, Debussy, Ravel and Liszt are to be featured.

Mrs. Cecil Self active member of the Music Club and president of the Birmingham Speech Arts Club, is to speak to the club on the program and personality of Grace Moore, soprano, who is to be presented here soon.

Following the program the board members of the club are complimenting Miss Hester with a luncheon at the Tutwiler Hotel.

The Badge Of A Freeman

If a man has a sort of sheepish look when you ask him how he is going to vote in the next election, if he yammers vaguely or speaks with forced emphasis, it is frequently the case that he is simply not qualified to vote and is ashamed to expose himself. Perhaps through forgetfulness he has overlooked paying the poll tax or meeting the laws of registration; and his embarrassment at not being a full-fledged citizen is accompanied by a non compos mentis sensation.

Sadder than the absent-minded man or woman, however, is that resident of a state who has never realized the meaning of the ballot, and who, thruout the years of maturity, allows himself or herself to remain in the class of those legally and therefore actually incompetent to take part in the affairs of government. Most such people are uneducated and are unable on account of lack of training to perceive the significance of the simple act of voting; but there are a number who seem to have adopted a sort of attitude, a mental complex, which keeps them from helping to operate the republic. Possibly in the beginning the payment of the small poll tax, or the red tape of registration bothered them; and an unfortunate mind-set was begun.

The right to cast a ballot is the badge of a freeman; and every possible agency should urge our people to qualify. Newspapers, schools, amusement houses, pulpits, and every public official should stress this primary duty. It is not idle talk to say that the safety and permanency of the government of the United States can be adequately cared for only when the whole body of people are learning the art of government as practiced through the medium of the ballot. It was a graceful act when legislators of Alabama decreed that every penny of the poll tax fund should go into the public school treasury to help build a better trained citizenship; but after all this is a minor consideration.

Next year and every other year there will be important elections. Measures of government will be approved or rejected by the legal voters, officials will be chosen, taxation will be fixed i some places by the ballot. In Ma every school district in Alabama wi choose three trustees to handle loc school matters; and every trustee mu be a voter. From the remotest community to the greatest city, the need i the same for a body of citizens ful prepared to help in government. A c needs to be sounded that will reach every home in Alabama, a call that wi say to each adult, "Be ready! You ar one; and the weight of your pers action is essential to affairs of state and witness the presentation of this car.

Twenty Millionth Ford To Visit Clanton, 8th

Its tour of the country completed, the Twenty-Millionth Ford will be returned to Greenfield Village for preservation near the first Ford—the "gasoline buggy" in which Henry Ford astounded his neighbors and demoralized horse traffic when he chugged noisily through Detroit's cobbled streets at the dizzy speed of nearly 20 miles an hour.

The first Ford—built in 1893 and one of the first three automobiles the world had ever seen—odd, indeed, by comparison with its 1931 descendant resembled a buggy mounted on bicycle wheels and its little two cylinder engine boasted four horsepower. Its gasoline tank held three gallons and its uncomfortable seat held two people. Mr. Ford was given a verbal permit, by the mayor, thus becoming the world's first licensed chauffeur.

Such was the precursor of the long line of Fords that have since revolutionized the automotive industry, made the automobile a common-place within the reach of almost every family and tremendously aided the development of good roads systems everywhere.

In December, 1915, more than 1,000,000 Fords had been produced. Thereafter, as a result of the development of Ford manufacturing methods and processes which have since been adopted as standards of efficiency and economy for industry the world over, the total production reached 2,000,000 in June, 1917; 5,000,00 in May, 1921; 10,000,000 in June, 1924; and 15,000,000 in May, 1927.

Cucumbers for Company

By Jane Rogers

To the woman who takes a real pride in her skill as a cook, no words of praise are more sweet than those called forth by one of her culinary masterpieces. This, together with her conception of true hospitality, stirs in every good hostess the ambition to please her luncheon or dinner guests with some out-of-the-ordinary and particularly delicious dish.

Stuffed cucumbers are sufficiently out of the ordinary routine, and more than sufficiently delicious, to arouse the admiration of the most difficult-to-please guest. Here the proper use of seasonings found in every kitchen is the most important factor in assuring success. Particularly interesting is the use of sugar as one of the seasoners; a fairly recent development in American cooking, but one that it has been found points up and blends the flavors of almost all vegetable dishes.

Try your hand at the following recipe the next time you want to serve your guests something extra-special in the vegetable line. It's certain, though, that this won't long remain a "company" dish. Once your family has tasted it, there's bound to be a demand for its regular appearance.

Stuffed Cucumbers

Cut three good-size cucumbers in half lengthwise, and cook until tender in salted water. Scoop out the centers, and fill each half with a mixture consisting of three cups cooked rice, one cup chili sauce, one tablespoon vinegar, one tablespoon sugar, two tablespoons tomato ketchup, one teaspoon paprika, salt and pepper to taste, and one large onion which has been chopped fine and cooked in melted butter. Serve immediately, being sure that the portions are very hot.

Press reports from Washington stat- Tuesday morning that without even suggestion that he stand aside tem- rarily until the contest over his elec- n may be investigated further, Sen- r John H. Bankhead was sworn in onday as a senator from Alabama.

Titanic Struggle Witnessed On School Gridiron Last Friday Afternoon

The nameless bard who penned these lines

And gory was that field for after the battle was o'er, after the end of that titanic struggle, the casualties included several broken ribs, one broken nose, one broken foot and innumerable bruises and sore muscles.

UNEMPLOYMENT AID IS SOUGHT BY KIWANIANS

Local Situation Is Discussed At Recent Meeting With Action Looming Here

The last meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Clanton, held at the local Methodist church brought forth the question of an unemployment condition that is existing, or will possibly exist in Clanton and Chilton County during the coming few months.

This matter was placed before the club by Louis Reynolds, who had Mayor J. Lee Smith present who also discussed the question with members of the club. This meeting proved very interesting and J. Mell Martin, president of the club appointed a committee composed of Dan W. Haskew, Sam J. Ezell and Billy Smith, to appear before the Commissioners Court of Chilton County last Tuesday afternoon.

At the meeting of the Commissioners Court Tuesday afternoon Mayor J. Lee Smith, with members of the city council and other citizens appeared also to discuss the matter.

At the meeting of the Commissioners, this committee presented proposals and plans for the aiding of the unemployed of Clanton. This proposal was not in the form of work of charity, but was to devise means whereby those heads of families, who are unemployed and were needy, would be given work of some kind during the coming few months. Other plans for the aiding of the unemployed in Clanton this winter will probably be taken up and discussed by the Kiwanis Club at a later meeting.

SPECIAL SESSION UNLIKELY UNTIL LAST OF WINTER

Education Forces, Idle at Last Legislature, Gird For Battle Next Time

Extra session talk for 1931 has subsided and the best information that can be gleaned at the Capitol is that if there is a call for an extra session in this administration, and many believe there will be one, it will not come before February or March, 1932.

Gov. Miller still has under consideration the request of certain of those interested in cotton to call a special session at once to enact cotton reduction measures either through taxation or by direct prohibition. However, it is generally believed that if Gov. Miller acts favorably on this suggestion he will not issue the call before the first of the year.

Embodying silent syncro-mesh trans- ission in combination with selective ee-wheeling, a twenty per cent in- ease in power, top speed of 65 to 70 iles an hour, streamlined bodies and wealth of other new features, the new r remains in the price range of the rrent series, the lowest at which a hevrolet has ever sold.

Miss Kathryn Hayes And James Wade United In Marriage At Methodist Parsonage Tuesday

A marriage that united two prominent families of this section took place last Tuesday afternoon, December 8th, when Miss Kathryn Hayes became the bride of Mr. James Wade. This marriage came as a result of a long courtship between these two popular young people of Clanton, and as somewhat of a surprise to their countless friends over the state.

The ceremony was performed at the Methodist Parsonage in Clanton by the Rev. D. W. Haskew, pastor of the Methodist church, and in the presence of a few intimate friends of the couple.

The charming bride comes from one of the most prominent families of this county, the attractive daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Wade of Clanton, and considered one of the promising and popular young business men of the town. He has been connected with his father in the ice business in Clanton and other towns in the state for sometime.

WASHINGTON'S LOST THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

Few Americans, we are told by the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, know that the first National Thanksgiving Proclamation was issued by our First President, George Washington, in 1789; and still fewer people know of the interesting history of that priceless document. On October 3, 1789, George Washington issued his Presidential Proclamation calling for a National day of Thanksgiving on Thursday November 26.

This proclamation went into effect and was soon forgotten. No one apparently attached much importance to the Document itself. It was completely lost sight of. Most likely it was misplaced or attached to some private papers in the process of moving official records from New York to Philadelphia or from Philadelphia to Washington. All we know is that the original document was not in the official archives of the Government until it was "found" in 1921 by Dr. J. C. Fitzpatrick, then Assistant Chief of the Manuscripts Division of the Library of Congress, and now Editor of the forthcoming George Washington Bicentennial Commission series of Washington's Writings.

It was at an auction sale being held in the American Art Galleries of New York City. Dr. Fitzpatrick, an expert on Washington, examined the document and found it to be authentic. It was written in long hand by Wm. Jackson, Secretary to President Washington .at the time, and was signed in George Washington's bold hand. Dr. Fitzpatrick purchased the document for $300.00 for the Library of Congress, where it is now kept as a treasure. And no amount of money could remove it.

New Chevrolets Now Displayed Aid Employment Throughout U. S.

Right: Head-on View

Chevrolet's new car for 1932 embodying silent Syncro-Mesh transmission in combination with selective free wheeling as standard equipment at no extra cost, and practically every proven automotive advance of recent years, is now displayed at dealer showrooms throughout the country.

While remaining in the price class in which it won world leadership this year, the new 1932 models offer features heretofore considered exclusive to the high price field, as well as a new front end mounting never before shown on any car.

Called "The Great American Value for 1932" the new line offers in support of this claim a twenty per cent increase in power, faster acceleration, top speeds of 65 to 70 miles an hour, new Fisher bodies with a modern streamline styling, down-draft carburetion, counter-balanced crankshaft, finger-touch front seat adjustment and many other refinements over the 1931 models which, from the standpoint of public acceptance, were the most successful in the history of the company.

In addition to interest centering on the cars themselves, the announcement at this time has national significance in that activity brought on by production of the new cars is expected, at conservative estimates, to add materially to the earnings of 200,000 people throughout the country just before the holiday season and before the severe winter season sets in.

The company's 21 domestic plants all are busy producing cars as fast as precision manufacturing limits will permit so that deliveries may be made with the least possible delay. More than 30,000 of the new cars already have been built for dealers' showroom displays, and more than that quantity are expected to roll off the assembly lines during the present month.

The new car is the first in the low-price field to offer the combination of silent Syncro-Mesh transmission with selective free wheeling as standard equipment at no extra cost. A control button on the instrument panel enables the driver to use the free wheeling device only when he desires, and he is thus able to utilize the full braking power of the engine when desired.

The front end offers a radically changed appearance, with a new type radiator, a radiator grille built integral on all models, a double tie-bar arching gracefully between the fenders, on which are mounted bullet-shaped headlamps and a trumpet-type horn just beneath the left headlamp. All models have adjustable hood ports chrome plated on all the sport and de luxe models, and all have cowl ventilators controlled from the driver's seat.

With the new streamlined bodies, the external sun visor has been eliminated, and its purpose is now served by an internal visor adjustable to any position in front of the driver. The left front window also has an equalizer built in so that the driver may adjust the window with little effort. On the top rail of the instrument panel is a removable ash tray for the convenience of front seat passengers.

Robe rails, silk assist cords, window shades, arm rests and ash trays on both sides of the rear seat, dome light, foot rests, large door pockets and many other big car refinements are standard with various models in the new line.

LABELS ON CANNED BEANS

Canned beans are put up in many different ways. A label saying "baked beans" or "baked pork and beans" means that the food was cooked, before canning, in an oven with dry heat. "Canned beans" and "canned pork and beans" are blanched, sealed in cans, and processed with steam. The terms "Boston" and "New England" on cans mean beans flavored with molasses. Canned beans, pork and beans, and baked beans other than Boston or New England style are usually packed with plain sauce or tomato sauce. Plain sauce is made with salt, sugar or molasses or both, spices, caramel, and water, and sometimes with a little vinegar or onion juice. Tomato sauce is usually made from tomato pulp and some water, and is sometimes spiced and sweetened.

Why the Voters of Alabama should Vote for the Mobile Amendment Tuesday, January 5th, 1932:

It applies only to the City of Mobile, and does not affect any other city or community.

It will not raise taxes at Mobile or anywhere else, but permits the transfer of a 3½ mill tax from payment of an old debt to the payment of present day obligations and interest thereon.

It will save the City of Mobile the loss, expense and embarrassment of a possible receivership, with coincident receivership fees which our citizens would have to pay in the long run.

It will enable the City of Mobile to pay its just debts, incurred for public improvements by which its citizens and property owners have greatly profited; investments made upon the demand and with the approval of the people.

The Mobile Clearing House and all of the banks, familiar with the City of Mobile's present necessities, are in favor of this amendment; which is unanimously endorsed by the Board of City Commissioners of Mobile.

The City of Mobile is required to pay the expense of this election.

Vote for the Mobile Amendment January 5, and Permit Mobile to Continue to be an Honest Debt-Paying City.

Thorsby Institute News

Miss Onita Klingelhoefer spent the week end in Birmingham. On Sunday she attended the new community Congregational Church there of which Dr. Mordecai is pastor. She was invited to speak to one of the women's Sunday school classes about Thorsby Institute. The women expressed a desire to visit and to help the Institute. This church has about 500 members and an even larger attendance.

Monday night Miss Fairbank, Miss McKee and Miss Klingelhoefer of the Institute faculty and Miss Jennie Robinson attended the Shakespearean play "Hamlet" given at the Temple Theatre, Birmingham, by the Thurston Players. They enjoyed it very much.

Next Saturday night at the Institute the Christmas program of the Helen Keller Literary Society will take place. There will be a Candle Lighting Service with the beautiful Christmas Carols sung; also a Christmas play, "Why the Chimes Rang," will be given. Admission will be ten cents.

On Saturday Principal Fogle of the Pleasant Hill Academy, Tennessee, visited the Institute. He was formerly County Superintendent of schools in Maryland. He reported that in Maryland football was banished from the Public schools several years ago and Soccer was substituted.

Another visitor on Saturday was Rev. W. R. Kedzie, D. D., one of the Secrataries of the Congregational Education Society.

The second term of the Institute closes Friday of this week. The new term begins Monday. School closes for the holidays on the 17th, reopening on the 30th.

The Institute appreciates very much the various canned fruits, canned vegetables and other vegetables not canned that have been donated at various times since school opened. Such gifts are most welcome, especially at a time when the school needs every bit of help it can get.

The Christian Endeavor met last Sunday evening at 6:30 P. M. The leader was Miss Odie Lee Arthur of the Missionary Committee. The topic was "India." Much interesting information was given on the subject. Several first hand bits of information were read from letters from Dr. and Mrs. Edward Fairbank, Missionaries in India, by Miss Fairbank, who is a cousin of Dr. Fairbank.

The programs were printed and given to each person as they entered. This made the meeting quiet and reverent. The topic was followed by pictures on India by Rev. Each, the pastor.

The topic for next Sunday will be "Making Christmas Christian" led by Evie Lee Rowe. All young people who do not attend Young People's meetings at the other churches are invited to worship with us.

"Hopping John" is an old fashioned country name for a dish made of dried blackeyed peas and rice. Wash one cup of the peas well and cook them in a covered pan in 3 or more cups of water with ½ teaspoon of salt until they are tender but not broken. Cook ½ cups of rice for about 20 minutes in 2 quarts of boiling water, to which 1 teaspoon of salt has been added. The Democrats And Bankhead

Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, says that the Democrats of the Senate have unanimously agreed that they will vote to seat Mr Bankhead. The Democrats are unanimously agreed that "there is no justification either in fact or in precedent for any movement to defer or delay the seating of Senator Bankhead."

It is apparent that the blood of the Senate Democrats is up and they are squaring off for a fight. They will vote to seat the Alabamian, and we have no doubt that a number of Republicans will vote with them. In that case the Alabamian will be seated without difficulty. But the matter will not necessarily end there. The Senate can seat Mr. Bankhead and then in its own time consider the questions about which the dubious Hastings professes to be so much exercised. If a majority of the Senators agreed with Hastings, they could then vote to vacate the seat held by Senator Bankhead.

But once Mr. Bankhead is seated we believe the sorry mess will come to an end and we shall hear little more about it. It is easier to deny a Senator admission than to expel him after he is admitted. Once seated Mr. Bankhead will be in position to meet his attackers face to face and battle with them on even terms. His moral position would be materially improved if he should be given his seat in the beginning.

The Advertiser has never believed for a moment that Senator Bankhead would be denied the fruits of his honest victory, but it has been plain for a year that he would be harassed as much as possible and that a studied effort would be made by some of the Republicans to besmirch the Democratic party of Alabama. Naturally there are some Republicans, close to the administration, who would go rather far to discredit the Democrats who beat Tom Heflin, and it possible open the way for Heflin's re-election. They need Tom—but it might interest them to know that even if they should deny Bankhead his seat Bankhead would be promptly reelected by the Democrats of Alabama, and that even if he were not a candidate Heflin could not win. Some of the Republicans want their Heflin back, but there is not a chance to get him. Montgomery Advertiser.

The Spirit of Christmas

The pleasing custom of using living, outdoor trees as Christmas trees is becoming more and more popular every year. We hope to see some trees in our town this Christmas decorated with colored lights connected to the house circuit, so that everybody can share in the jubilation of the Christmas season.

Nobody knows, so far as we can find out, where the idea of a decorative tree as a symbol of Christmas originated. But like many another ancient custom, the source of which is lost in the dim past, it is a beautiful and time-honored custom which arouses sentimental reflections and happy memories in the mind of everyone, no matter how old, in whose youthful life the Christmas tree formed the center of the family gathering on Christmas Day.

But the feast of Christmas and the Christmas tree imply very much more than merely pleasant recollections.

There is no race or religious creed which does not believe, in some form or other, in a divine promise of a better world. Science may never be able to prove the existence of God, but the faith of the truly religious is not a matter of proof. No one can live very long in this world without discovering that the forces which make it, from generation to generation, a better world to live in, and which are steadily making human beings more kindly and tolerant toward each other, are not the forces which science has discovered and industry has harnessed, but are forces which come from within the human soul and that spirit of tolerance, of kindliness, of "peace on earth, good will to men" is, to all Christians, a spirit flowing directly from the Heavenly throne. And what we celebrate at Christmas is the manifestation of that spirit on earth.

Compulsory Voting

We sometimes wonder what would happen if everybody who is entitled to vote at a Presidential election were compelled to go to the polls or go to jail. The first thing we would have to do would be to build a lot more jails. For at the last Presidential election, in 1928, only just a bare half of the citizens who were entitled to vote took the trouble to do so. According to a recent report of the Census Office, there are 72,943,624 persons more than twenty-one years old in the United States. The total vote cast for all candidates for president in 1928 was 36,724,625.

We are not sure but what there is some merit in the idea of compulsory voting. Something of the sort is being tried, we understand, in some of the smaller republics of Europe. We believe it would be a very good thing for the nation if some way could be found to make it absolutely necessary for every citizen of voting age to go to the polls, at least once every four years, and cast some kind of a ballot, whether intelligent or not.

We believe that the forces of corruption in public offices retain their main power because such a high proportion of people who regard themselves as good citizens do not take the trouble to cast their ballots. We believe that it would be an effective way of making our people recognize that they are really a part of the government, if we could figure out some way of making it worth while for everybody to go to the polls on election day, or uncomfortable for them if they did not. And when election was over there would be no question in anybody's mind as to what the nation as a whole really thought about the candidates and the issues.

"ROUND TOWN"
---by Doug

Diogenes lighted a candle in the daytime and went around saying, "I am looking for a man."

—o—

That fellow Diogenes must have had ideas in his head about a man. That reminds me of what they say about some old maid school teachers who look under the bed each night before retiring to see if they can find a man.

Just what they want with a man, I don't know. Neither can I fully decide whether they are expecting to find a man, or hoping. And I suppose I'll never know unless I try getting under some old maid's bed and let her find me there. But I don't believe it would be worth the chance.

But really, laying off jokes, there is undoubtedly a story attached to the one about Diogenes looking for a man. To many the word man involves quite a bit. Just because a person wears trousers and has the appearance of the male, is no reason why that person is a man—to some. There are several of the type above I could name in Clanton—that is, I mean those who are really men, and not just persons wearing trousers and having the appearance of men.

In my opinion there are many who wear trousers and look like males, who could really be Men, if they would take a second thought or so, before acting or speaking, sometimes, or something.

Was looking through some files the other day and found my credentials as Chilton County's Certified Critter-Sizer. So now, if I should wish to do some crittersizing, or something, I have my credentials. Have been somewhat putting on the soft pedal lately until I could find those certified credentials from Dooker Pooker, the International Authority.

It won't be long now until I'll have to be naming my Who's Who for Clanton for this year. 'Twill be rather difficult this time as I have been out several weeks and kind o' lost track of who's who. But by staying out late at night for the next week or so, no doubt I will be able to learn a thing or two, or three.

Had a question asked me the other day, and I haven't yet discovered, located, found or invented an answer to it. After giving quite a lot of time to thinking it over, as well as considering it from both sides, I am still at a loss. The question was, "How did 'sin' get in kissing?"

Isn't it funny how the man who doesn't go to church on Sunday mornings, will stand on the street corner and talk about the people who do go?

Understand that the Kiwanis Club is making preparations to make some step to aid in the unemployment situation that will face Clanton during the next three or four months.

Teachers in the schools of this county met at the courthouse yesterday afternoon. Out of this meeting I understand that something important will come. Don't know whether this newspaper got a story on it or not. However, the question, "Will Chilton's schools close next month?" was supposed to be answered.

To me there seems something rotten in Denmark about this local school situation that I can't understand. I'm afraid that somebody has misrepresented the truth about their opinion on this matter. Nope, I don't mean you. It's somebody else.

Heard that the meeting held at the church the other night to discuss the local school situation led up to discussions from most everything from a Justice of The Peace to the President, saying nothing of the one or two speeches made that apparently had as their subject "I" or "Me", and got away off the local matter which was to be discussed. I don't like to hear that men will take advantage of such things to pull a little political stunt. If they could hear the comments from those who hear them, then I imagine it would stop.

Well, well, well, who'd a thought it. Jim Wade and Kitty are married. 'Twasn't a surprise to me because I started once to predict their wedding within a very short time -but it did happen sooner than I thought. To Jim and Kitty I extend best wishes and congratulations. I'm just wondering where they are right now—it's Tuesday night.

Did a crowd gather to see that twenty millionth Ford? I'm telling you that a little publicity went a long way when it comes to that. The streets were so crowded in town Tuesday at the Ford place that a fellow could not get through, and it was raining at that. My hat's off to Miss Ruth Sessions with her blonde beauty, taking the part of official sponsor for Clanton Motors in welcoming the car here. She did it up in fine shape.

Wondering what to say about the play the Pilot Club put on. I see no reason why I should not say that it was fine, and regardless of the many handicaps they had to work under, the cast did exceptionally well.

Special Session Unlikely Until Last of March

session of the Legislature until he is in disposition in the past on the part of any politician to incur the ire of the educational interests of the State. When properly aroused, the educational forces can wield a power in State politics that would play havoc with any aspiring politician. These interests did not become aroused when Gov. Miller was striving to levy an income tax and other taxes at the regular session of the Legislature but they are becoming aroused now and some express the belief that in the event of an extra session they may come around to the assistance of the Governor in his efforts to do something to relieve the financial stringency facing the State. This would mean an increase of taxes in some way or on some interests. Certainly, those familiar with the educational forces point out, there will be no disposition in these ranks to cut educational appropriations. On the other hand there will be a disposition, it is believed, to tax somebody further to get money to keep the schools running and pay back some of the $20,000,000 deficit the schools have caused the State to incur.

The Alabama situation has been likened to the United States Government situation. There is a heavy deficit and the Treasury is running behind daily.

possession of the report of outside auditors who will determine the exact financial condition of the State. And after he receives this report, which is not expected to be ready before late in December, it will take some days for him to study it and ask for supplemental data if it is found necessary.

Fiscal Matter First

Whatever special session of the Legislature is called, unless a short one for specific cotton relief is called, will be devoted practically entirely to the financial condition of the State. If, as is generally believed, the report of the outside auditors shows that the State is in the red more than $20,000,000 and going deeper at the rate of $4,500,000 a year, it is not expected that Gov. Miller will issue a call for the Legislature until assurance is given after conferences that the Legislature is in a mood to do something to relieve the situation.

Those who are in touch with the situation know that there can be but two courses open to the Legislature to take care of the schools and the enormous deficit. One of these courses is to raise revenue through some form of additional taxation. The other course is for the Legislature to relieve the situation through a cut in appropriations and inasmuch as education gets the big money, it is not believed there will be a cut because of the political power of the educational interests that some denominate a "machine."

Education Group Feared

There has been, it is pointed out, no of the Legislature, it might as well be denominated now as a tax raising session because the Legislature, in the opinion of many, will not cut appropriations to any extent, certainly not to the extent of cutting the big money consumer, education.—Atticus Mullin in Montgomery Advertiser.

City Players Defeat Local Fire Fighters

in effort the strength of the town team was too much. The gallant firemen went down to defeat under the overwhelming score of thirty-three points to fourteen.

Promptly at three o'clock the two teams lined up for the kick off and never has there been such a titanic struggle on a Chilton gridiron. The two teams went at it hammer and tongs during the first minutes of play, but the firemen were slowly battered down and soon their opponents had scored seven points on them. Hayes ran the ball across for the first six points and Ray added the extra point for the town with a placement.

The town team ran up a total of thirty-three points to the firemen's none and the game seemed to be on ice when that fearless, galloping ghost of the firemen's backfied took a town kick off on the forty yard line and ran it through the town team for his team's first score. This was the most spectacular play of the game, as the town tacklers ran along beside him and were able to pull at his pants and fuss with his hair, but were not able to bring him to the ground. This seemed to demoralize the town team for when the crowd almost went into hysterics the town team decided that they had enough football for the evening, and they let the fire department run another score around them and add the extra point.

The two teams, composed of former high school stars and players from the town and fire department, were not in the best of condition, and after the first half took the game more as a lark. Wagoner's run in the last minute of the game broke up the play for the two teams were exhausted and ready to call it one of the hardest evenings they had ever spent.

The fire fighters team was composed of the following: Doodle Gore, Red Wagoner, Milton Smith, Wilbur Scarbrough, J. E. Easterling, Courtland Rutherford, Earl Gore, Albert Davis, Rufus Brown, Shucks Cleckler, Eddie Wyatt and Sleepy Miller, Luther Culpepper and Arthur Broadhead.

The town team was composed of the following players: Bull Ray, Pete Sanford, Harris Hardy, Jack Hayes, Benson Simms, George Johnson, Jim Wade, Booty Grant, Dooney Wagoner, Joe Hester, Louie Smith, Hoyt Reynolds.

The proceeds for this event went for the purpose of purchasing additional equipment for the fire department and a good crowd was on hand. The proceeds of the game were around forty dollars, but we will hazard a guess that you couldn't drag the same bunch onto the field next Friday afternoon for a sum twice that large. The game is not worth the price is the silent opinion of the greater majority of those who engaged in this game for the sake of Charity.

The Congress of the United States will soon add to the tax receipts. And if Alabama is to go along with her present State activities, Alabama, too, will have to add to her tax receipts. In other words, if there is an extra session feature of recent years is incorporated in the new 1932 Chevrolet, as well as a new "stabilizer" front end construction embodied for the first time on any car. Outstanding improvements in the '32 line over last year's models are down-draft carburetion, counter balanced crankshaft, smaller wheels and larger tires, radically changed front end appearance, "finger touch" front seat adjustment, cowl ventilator on all models, hood doors instead of louvres, improved clutch and an additional cross member in the frame.

The 21 domestic plants are now bu producing the new line. The stimul to employment in the Chevrolet orga ization, in affiliated Fisher Body pla and among independent suppilers ma possible by the introduction of the car, it is conservatively estimated, will a to the earnings of 200,000 people.

Twelve standard body styles are in the line this year—three open and ni closed Fisher bodies—all in new Du color combinations and all with smart new features. In addition, eight mo els also are available with deluxe equi ment, making possible individuality ownership and providing selection from twenty different types.

Of the mechanical changes, the outstanding one is the new transmission unit, which is entirely Chevrolet-buil and is said to combine for the first time in any car the combination of syncro-mesh with simplified free wheeling as standard equipment at no extra cost. Free wheeling is provided by an over-running clutch, engaged at the discretion of the driver by a contr button on the instrument panel. This optoinal feature enables the driver to utilize the full breaking power of the engine if he desires, and to use the free wheeling feature only when traffic conditions make it desirable.

While the wheelbase remains at 1 inches, the car looks longer than l year, lower, speedier and more powerful—promises borne out by the great improved power plant.

The most striking change in exter appearance is the new front end, wh has been completely redesigned t year.

The new "stabilized" front mounting is an important feature the new car. In conventional mount the radiator, fenders and headlan are supported from the sides of the frame, and in driving over rough ro the front end weaves and vibrates. T is annoying to occupants of the car a frequently results in the origin squeaks and rattles at points of str

In the new Chevrolet, the fend radiator and headlamps are carried a single fender support unit, which is anchored to the center of the front cross-member of the frame. This p otal anchorage enables the front to sway with the body as a unit, thus reducing the annoying weave as well as the possibility of squeaks and ratt developing at points of stress.

A double tie-bar, chromium plated gracefully between the fenders a braces them, thus acting as a structural unit as well as an ornament. A support also extends from the tie bar to the radiator, anchoring the units securely together, also carrying the horn.

The radiator is entirely new in de sign and construction. The exposed core area is larger than last year f better cooling, and a new grille is b integral with the radiator in all models. This grille has square meshes stamped in relief, with the verticla lines acc tuated to increase the appearance height. The radiator shell is chrom plated, and the top band has a narr bead and a top panel embellished by the familiar Chevrolet emblem blue and white.

Front fenders have a deeper cr and skirts, and a wider bead comin a graceful point at the front tip of the fender. Headlamps, parabolic-shaped with convex lens are fully chrom plated and are longer, narrower than last year to emphasize the impression of speediness. Headlamps are mounted on the tie-bar, as is the new trumpet-shaped horn, mounted exter beneath the left headlamp.

Cowl lamps, similar in design to the headlamps though smaller, are stand ard with all sport models and mounted behind the chrome-plated cowl moulding. The lenses of these lamps contain prisms which reflect the headlamp glare of approaching car and afford a measure of protection the car in the event the driver forget to light the parking lamps.

The hood is redesigned to conform to the new radiator shape and of several radical departures from la year. The conventional panel of louv res is replaced by four ventilating doo on each side, chromium plated on th deluxe and sport models. This car" refinement enables the driver control engine ventilation in relatio to temperature.

Letters To The Editor

JESSE BAKER URGES SUPPORT OF PEOPLES TELEPHONE CO.

Editor Chilton County News:

I would like to say a few words to the patrons of the Peoples Telephone Company. This is a serious crisis thru which we are passing, and money is hard to get hold of; but let me urge you not to set down on your telephone business. We must keep the business going. The Board and myself are doing all we can and so is the operator, Mr. Giles; but we can't do it all.

Everybody wants the phone business to keep going, but it takes some money to run anything. We have made the fee just as low as anyone can ask for. When the Peoples Telephone Company stops, then the people will realize what a hardship it is to do entirely without it. It will cost you more to get a doctor one time than a whole year's fee will be. So, come on and pay your fee as early as you can and help us out with the matter.

JESSE BAKER,
President.

NEGRO GIVEN BACK PAY BY RAILROAD DUE FOR 50 YEARS

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 4.—Fifty years ago Jeff Brevard, negro section worker, decided to quit the Louisville & Nashville Railroad and left without drawing his pay. Friday he cashed a check for $12.80 for his back pay.

Jeff dropped out of sight and the railroad did not have any record of where to forward the check. A short time ago Jeff was "hard up" and decided to collect.

The auditor immediately forwarded the check and commended Jeff on his memory.

Jeff is farming near Montgomery now and the cash from the check looked like a "big roll."

CIRCLE NUMBER TWO MET WITH MRS. BUD JONES, 7TH

Circle No. 2 met at the home of Mrs. Bud Jones Monday afternoon with fourteen present. Royal Service Program, led by Mrs. Eubanks, with other members taking part, was very interesting. This being the last of the circle meetings for the year, caused just a tinge of regret, yet many expressed the desire to put forth greater efforts in the coming year. After the program followed a short discussion of business, during which time Mrs. Jones, assisted by other members, served a delicious sandwich plate with coffee.

Those present were Mesdames Popwell, Joe Mims. Hugh Foshee, Heflin, Burdette, Leonard Williams, Curry, Fiquette, Reuben Wyatt, Eubanks, Dial, Miss Mattie McKee and Miss Garrett.

Bleaches and other chemicals strong enough to remove stains will usually attack dyestuffs. It is therefore necessary, in removing stains from colored fabrics, to handle them more carefully than white ones. They should be treated rapidly and rinsed thoroughly. Color changed by treating with an acid can often be restored by using a weak alkali, such as ammonia solution or ammonia fumes. Acetic acid will often restore a color that has been changed by an alkali.

New Salem Social Club

New Salem Social Club will meet on December 17th, at New Salem church. Le me urge every member to be present on this day, as it is our last meeting in the year of 1931.

We have small crowds and are working slow, but still covering ground. We few who attend these meetings would be glad to have larger crowds.

The best thing that we hope for are those which are most largely within our own power. We may not be able to foretell whether during the year the crops will have favorable weather. We may not know whether the particular business interests in which we are engaged will prosper or languish, but we do know that whatever industry or energy discretion or wisdom we put into them will bear abundant results. We cannot tell certainly whether uninterrupted health and peace will reign in our households, but we know that it will depend largely upon our obedience to the laws of the body and our faithful and loving care of and influence over those near and dear to us.

We do not know the details of our social life, what friends we may lose or gain, yet we know that faithfulness, loyalty and unselfishness on our part will insure to us pure and happy social relations.

NEACIE MIMS,
Secretary.

Mrs. Sarah Ann Bryant, aged 80, of Chicago, has secured a divorce from her 85-year-old husband on the ground of desertion.

Melvine Goodenough and Ruth Christian were recently married at Los Angeles.

A year after his marriage his wife declared Alfred Thomas Scott of Detroit a "perfect husband," but now he is in jail for embezzlement.

Regretting that it was necessary to penalize Rev. Sid Wise for flogging a man, Judge A. P. Steel of Mena, Ark., fined the minister $1 but paid the fine himself.

Mrs. Ida Cortin of Chicago got a divorce after she found another woman's powder puff in her husband's pocket.

Asked in court how large a family he had, George V. Stetson of Cleveland replied: One child an an automobile."

Mrs. Mary Payne of St. Louis had 14 purses on her person when arrested for picking pockets.

Concord-Billingsley

We had a real good singing Sunday afternoon. It was well attended and a large part of those present were singers and some from several places. We were indeed glad of their presence and cooperation and extend to everyone a cordial invitation to attend our singings on every first Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Not only are the singers invited, but all lovers of singing also.

Our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor is moving on nicely just now but as it is drawing near the close of another year, we hope that each and every one of our members will make a new resolution and try to do more in all lines of church work during this coming year than we have during the past year.

We wish to speak in regard to our Junior Christian Endeavor. We have a real smart bunch of juniors and they surely do enjoy their work.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Hicks and children of Billingsley visited Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Williams and family Sunday.

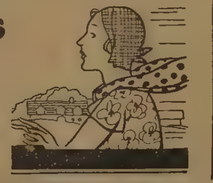
Rowena Rides the Rumble

By Ethel Hueston



Rackruff Motors hire Rowena to accompany Peter on a nation-wide tour in their roadster as an advertising stunt. At the last minute Little Bobby is engaged to act as chaperon.

A few miles out Bobby becomes tearful at being parted from her sweetheart and Rowena insists on taking her place in the rumble so that she can ride with Peter and have him to talk to about Carter. Rowena gets Peter to consent to divide the expense money each week as soon as it arrives, and astonishes Peter by eating too economically.

To his intense amazement Rowena flushed hotly and bit her lip in some confusion, and most surprising of all, said nothing. Already Peter found it amazing when Rowena had nothing to say.

Certainly she had plenty to say at Niagara Falls when Peter prepared to do his picture of the Rackruff roadster, with her at the wheel, both showing faintly under a fine mist of falling water. When it came to doing pictures, Peter was unbearable. Carter himself could not have been more hatefully dictatorial. He told her what to wear, how to sit, how to rouge her lips. He told her how to hold the wheel, which way to turn her head, just where to fluff her hair and where to draw it back.

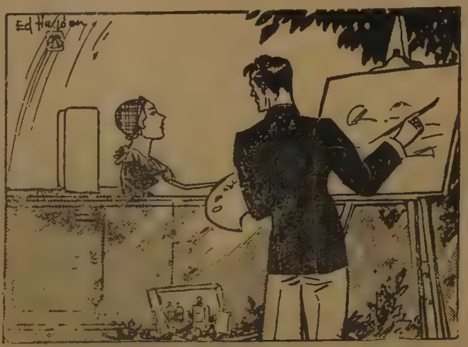
"Oh, Peter," protested Rowena faintly. "Please don't do my profile, I'm terrible that way. My face is too thin for a side view."

"Oh, I'll fill it in for you," said Peter comfortably. "It shows up better in the car."

"Oh, the car, the car," muttered Rowena crossly. "It's all you think of."

"It's all I'm paid to advertise," said Peter cheerfully.

When he had finished the picture Rowena wrote a brief adjectivorous story to go with it, and both were dispatched to Rackruff headquarters for immediate release. In addition to the motor story she wrote a short skit every day for use in the newspapers of different cities as they passed through.



At Rackruff headquarters in Chicago they received their first mail from home. There was one fat letter for Rowena, addressed in a big boyish scrawling hand. And there was one for Peter from the company with instructions for the tour and a check for the following week's expenses.

Bobby was thrilled with a huge package of telegrams, twenty in all, and every one from Carter. It seemed that every one of Carter's finer feelings was highly outraged, for each of the twenty telegrams ended with a stern command for her to come home at once.

Even in his wildest nightmares, he said in the telegrams, he had never conceived of a horror equal to that of seeing her much-loved features on public posters and monstrous bill-boards on every conspicuous corner in town, advertising a cheap new roadster.

Bobby's first intention was to ignore each and every one of these telegraphic outbursts, but by mid-afternoon she had relented so far as to send him a five-cent post-card picture of Lake Michigan. At supper-time she sent a telegram saying they had arrived safely and were leaving early the next morning; and then kept Rowena awake until three o'clock in the morning with the scratch of her pen as she wrote him a detailed account of everything that had happened so far.

After Rowena had read her single fat letter and smiled over it, and frowned over it, she went to her pocketbook and counted her money, down even to nickels and dimes. Then she called Peter's room on the telephone and asked if he would please give her her share of next week's expense money right away.

"Of course," replied Peter. "If you need more I can let you have it.—Don't ever run short of money, Rowena we can always squeeze out a little extra some way."

"Thanks a lot, Peter," said Rowena gratefully. "I think I can manage after this. But you're sweet to make the offer."

Even Rowena was amazed at the number of things about which Peter had his own ideas, all bad ones. The roads provided an unfailing source of dissension. Their route was clear and definite. From Chicago they were to go south to St. Louis, from St. Louis to Kansas City, from Kansas City to Denver. Nothing could be plainer. Between these cities stretched a broad highway, heavily traveled, expensively paved. The car was supplied with the best of motor maps, and the roads were clearly marked at every turning. Rowena—sitting in the snug shade of the stout umbrella she had bought, was comfortably satisfied to travel swiftly, steadily along the main highways from one objective point to another.

But Peter was all for short-cuts across country, and for all his deceptive air of extreme amiability, was strongly entrenched in his personal preferences. At every town—although not, as Rowena disagreeably claimed, at every telegraph pole—he made hopeful inquiries for short-cuts—for side-roads—for country lanes away from the traveled thoroughfares.

Bobby, as became a professional chaperon, was non-committally neutral. But so far from appreciating her disinterested amiability, it seemed more irratating to the others than the outspoken opposition they met in each other. And often they turned upon her sharply as if she were to blame for the entire argument.

It was in an exquisite wooded dell in southern Illinois that Rowena had her revenge. They had stopped at a quaint roadside log cabin for luncheon, and Peter, gazing pensively through a wide-open window, decided to do a picture on that very spot. Rowena had spent the morning in the rumble seat inditing swift notes on mid-western motoring and was anxious to transcribe them to the typewriter before her memoranda froze on her. So she asked Peter, very politely, if he would please do the picture of the roadster and the wooded dell first, while she was putting her notes into permament form, and then paint her in behind the wheel later on in the afternoon when the rest of the picture was done. Peter was perfectly willing, even eager, to lay over for an extra day, thus to allow time for her work as well as his, but he said a picture never turned out as well when a lady, or a house, or even a dog, was added to a finished product. Said it always stuck out like a sore thumb and never looked just right.

Rowena put up a good argument—Rowena always put up a good argument—Rowena lost her temper—she usually lost her temper—and the delicious log cabin waffles and honey were ruined.

EDISON'S ADVICE TO FARM BOYS

o

1. Science, skill, and knowledge are as usable on the farm as in the laboratory.

2. Experimenting is important on the farm as well as in the laboratory.

3. Nobody can succeed anywhere without hard work.

The late Thomas A. Edison stressed these three thoughts in a letter to farm boys written several years ago for The Progressive Farmer and reprinted in the current issue. In part Mr. Edison wrote :—

"There is just as much chemistry and science to be explored in super-farming as in a chemical laboratory. Some day the super-farmer will be the banner citizen of the United States. I would say to the boys, however, that nothing in this world is ever accomplished except by experimenting and very hard work."

Use scientific knowledge, keep experimenting, work hard—Edison himself certainl practiced fully this philosophy. And he had faith, it will also be noted, that we shall develop a type of farmer who will become "the banner citizen of the United States."

MAGAZINE IS PAL OF BOYS

Those boyhood years between the ages of ten and twenty are the impressionable years—the formative years when the fundamental character of a boy is molded into the pattern it will maintain throughout the remainder of his life.

That is why so much importance is placed on the factors that govern the lives of adolescent boys—their companions, their environment, their reading, the food they eat, etc. At this age is determined whether the boy will develop into a cheerful or surly man, generous or selfish, intelligent or dull, ambitious or indolent.

School teachers, librarians, Scout leaders and others engaged in boy activities have found that THE AMERICAN BOY—YOUTH'S COMPANION magazine is one of the most favorable influences a boy between ten and twenty can have. Its stories and articles are a force for good—wholesome, alive, inspiring.

The million or so boys who read this magazine every month consider it their closest friend. In it they find the keenest entertainment, adventure, mystery, athletics, aviation, humor, everything that delights a livewire American boy. Its sports articles by famous coaches and athletes help boys win places on their school teams. Its professional articles and biographical sketches aid them in selecting their life's work. Its keenly analytical editorials guide them in their daily problems.

That boy or young man in whom you are interested would have a world of pleasure reading THE AMERICAN BOY—YUOTH'S COMPANION. Make a subscription to this magazine your gift to him. Subscription prices are only $2.00 for one year or $3.00 for three years. Mail your order direct to THE AMERICAN BOY—YOUTH'S COMPANION, 550 W. Lafayette Blvd. Detroit, Mich.

Brief News Notes

The British pound sterling on November 30 dropped to $3.40, a decline of 12 cents. It was a new low for the year, being the heaviest since the initial break when England suspended the gold standard in September

Mrs. Mary L. Malone of Dothan has been appointed chairman for Alabama of "Better Homes in America." She will serve one year. The better homes movement is national, many prominent Washington officials participating in it.

On October 31 the Cotton Stabilization Corporation, a Federal Farm Board organization, held 1,310,789 bales of cotton. Including costs, carrying and operation charges, and loss on cotton sold to date, these stocks represented an investment of about 18 cents per pound, or approximately 120 million dollars.

Nathan Adams, president of the First National Bank of Dallas, Texas, who has been very critical of the Federal Farm Board made an investigation, at the conclusion of which he admitted that he was mistaken and declared in the future he will be "just as aggressive in support of the board" as he has been in opposing it.

JOHN'S VISION ON PATMOS
Revelation 1:4-18
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

There are three schools of interpretation for the book of Revelation: it has been fulfilled, it will be fulfilled, or it is being fulfilled. Most of the conservative scholars follow the latter method. At least, this is positive. Revelation tells of the final triumph of Jesus Christ and His Church, and this sublime fact is a wondrous assurance in the midst of present evil conditions. Do not try to find a meaning for every symbol or relate each episode to some event in history. Rather, read the book for its message of victory and the glorious way in which it presents Christ as King of kings and Lord of lords. No matter how great is the imagery of heaven, the symbol will be far less than the actual which will be experienced in time by the redeemed of the Lord.

John, the seer, was in exile on the island of Patmos and was granted the series of apocalyptic visions: there are seven series with seven items in each. Select the seven promises to the seven churches for cumulative blessings that come to the faithful.

Christ no longer is depicted as the Man of Nazareth in humble garb, but as the established Lord whom none can gainsay. He moves majestically in the midst of the churches. The occasion was when John "was in the Spirit on the Lord's day." This sublime manifestation of Him Who was once crucified is another argument for His immortality. The assurance is "I am alive forever more." Such contact with God was not to cause any distress and the encouraging word is given: "Fear not."

Turn now to the last chapter in Revelation and observe the heritage of the child of God. Heaven is the Home Land of the Soul. The invitation is to all: "Come—and he that is athirst, let him come: he that will, let him take the water of life freely."

A survey in Mississippi revealed that farmers in counties having county agents have more food and feed and are in better condition than those in counties where no county agents are employed. This fact brought the conclusion that counties which cannot afford county agents now are counties which haven't had them.

Pleasant Grove News

First, let our News audience look over an error that was printed in last week's paper about Mr. Phillip Franklin being carried to hospital. It was an unofficial report (by Pleasant Grove cor.)

Last week our hope for Mrs. Alice Franklin was fading, but now she has crossed over to the unexplored land by a living mortal of this world. Mrs. Franklin died at 8:55 o'clock Thursday morning, December 3, of asthama.

Mrs. Roxie Price spent Sunday evening with Mrs. J. B. Franklin.

Mr. Phillip Franklin is improving.

Mr. and Mrs J. A. Wright spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Marcus of Thorsby, Ala. Mrs. Marcus is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wright.

Have You Been Told?

Hard times, fretting, distressing, and the cry for help is going about from one nation to the other and it seems that neither one or the other can respond to each other's call. Now, what's it all about is prices of farm goods and others, is it unemployment? Yes, but why must all this come? Because in the first place people have fallen away from God for the vanities of this world. Who? we may ask. It's those that are involved in that organization under his influence and his power as the prince of this world as Christ cal-ed him. Yes, too many of us have come branches of the vines of world, and not a branch of the tru vine.

Do we believe in God's word? If s let us refer to Psalms 37 and 19th v and see what David says of the righteous: "They shall not be ashame the evil time; and in the days of f ine they shall be satisfied." Let us come to our king for satisfaction comfort in a distressing and cr time like this time at present is.

Let us come to the book of Eze for just a glimpse of his view of a ti to come in the seventh chapter of hi beek we find that a time will c when the man rich of this world's g can do nothing other than pour gold and silver out in the streets, at this time will the "meek inherit earth." Let us try to bear all temptions with pleasure for God, for th is that we are laying up treasure heaven where theives break not and moths do not corrupt.

Mrs. Curry Winner In Sales Contest

Mrs. Curry is being congratulated upon her recent success in winning a chicken in the C. H. Stuart & Company's sales contest. This well known toilet goods firm of Newark, New York, occassionally puts on various forms of contests for the stimulation of its representatives.

The recent one was a Thanksgiving poultry contest. There were turkeys, geese, ducks and other fowls for dispensing. According to Mr. Curry's story to the News reporter, she once was fortunate enough to reach the turkey score. Upon that occasion a check to defray cost of a turkey, was presented to Mrs. Curry.

Recently the order was received to go to the local dealer, obtain a chicken and have statement for same forwarded to the manager of the Newark, New York firm.

In the "Bringing Home the Bacon" contest of a few months ago, Mrs. Curry's share was more than seven pounds of the best sliced bacon.

As a sequel to the Thanksgiving poultry contest, the local dealer in question is on the lookout for the capturing of the nicest, tenderest, juiciest hen to be found, for the filling of the unusual and the interesting order.

Don't Burn Leaves

It is dangerous, wasteful, and unwise to burn leaves, The Progressive Farmer-Ruralist reminds us. A correspondent writes :—

"Autumn with its wealth of beauty soon will have passed and with it will go the leaves with their assortment of brilliant colors.

"Many dollars' worth of valuable plant food is being raked into piles and burned, while lean spots in garden and field are simply crying out for humus. Let's stop this dangerous, wasteful and unwise practice.

"In one corner of my garden I make a compost heap, putting down a layer of leaves, then a thin layer of soil, alternating leaves and soil until all accessible leaves are used, putting soil on top to prevent leaves from blowing about. This compost is fine for the garden."

Bankhead Gets Seat In Senate With No Trouble

licans who had been hopeful of finding some way to embarrass Alabama as a Democratic state in order to counterbalance disclosures of scandalous proceedings in elections in states predominantly Republican made no effort to object to administration of the oath.

True, Senator Shortridge, of California, chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, read a brief report of progress of the contest in which was incorporated a letter to him from Senator Hastings, of Delaware, as chairman of the sub-committee in the Heflin-Bankhead contest in which the Delaware member reiterated in the form of questions his professed doubt as to the legality of the Alabama election.

Senate To Decide Contest

In this letter, Hastings said it would be necessary for the full committee and the Senate to decide whether the Alabama Democratic primary of August was legal and if not what effect that would have had upon the subsequent general election, whether Bankhead had violated either the State or Federal law as to expenditures; whether the recount showed such disregard of the Alabama election laws as to invalidate the election and whether questioned ballots should be excluded.

No material change in the result of the election was disclosed by the recount, Senator Hastings stated in the letter read to the Senate, but he added that in 2,043 boxes examined there was not "a single one found where the law was fully complied with" and he expressed the opinion that this fact raised "a serious question" as to whether there was a legal election.

Miller, Bankhead Exchange Telegrams As Senate Opens

After he had taken the official oath of office when Congress convened in Washington Monday morning, U. S. Senator John H. Bankhead telegraphed Gov. Miller: "Sworn in without objection."

The Governor promptly wired back the following reply: "Delighted. You won the election fairly and overwhelmingly and should be permanently seated without objection."

Large Crowd Welcomes 20 Millionth Ford Here

from Clanton composed of Mayor J. Lee Smith, Judge L. H. Reynolds, John C. Page, W. Mack Wyatt of The Union-Banner, Billy Smith of the Chilton County News, and T. J. Littlejohn, local manager of the Ford place.

The officials of the motor company were composed of C. D. Hilton, personal representative of Henry Ford; E. D. Bottom, assistant manager of the Atlanta branch of the company; R. J. Burke, Lincoln sales representative from Atlanta, and L. E. Kendrick, zone manager. Following this introduction, and after several courtesies were shown to each group, the committee of dignitaries of Clanton were asked to place their signatures and titles in a log book containing names of other dignitaries of the United States.

The local dignitaries were then escorted to the Twenty Millionth Ford, where photographs were made of the Ford officials and the local committee.

Miss Ruth Sessions of Clanton acted as sponsor for Clanton on this occasion. She was seated in the drivers seat of the car, with a large bouquet of flowers. After photographs of this were made by the official photographer of the Ford Motor Company, Miss Sessions presented Mr. Hilton with the bouquet of flowers and a welcome to Clanton, followed by the presentation of a full size watermelon trophy bearing a bronze plate on which were engraved words commemorating the visit of the Twenty Millionth Ford to Clanton and Clanton Motors, was made by T. J. Littlejohn, local Ford dealer, to Mr. Hilton. Motion pictures were made of this scene. These pictures are to be shown over the entire country, and photographs of the group will be sent to Clanton soon.

Leaving Bay Minette, Ala., Monday morning, the Twenty Millionth Ford will have visited Atmore, Flomaton, Brewton, Evergreen, Georgiana and Greenville, Alabama, before arriving in Montgomery. Following the local reception it resumed its journey, passing through Birmingham and Gadsden, Ala., to spend Tuesday night in the latter city.

Question Of Drainage Will Be Brought Up

zens appearing in the meeting at the Commissioners Court Tuesday, were J. Lee Smith, mayor of Clanton, and several members of the city council, and other residents in and near Clanton.

It is understood from the office of the Judge of Probate that committees were appointed to work out plans on this matter for a meeting to be held on Monday, December 14th, at ten o'clock in the morning at the office of the Probate Judge here. This committee is composed of A. P. Vinson and J. A. Mims, who are to represent the county, W. L. Popwell and H. S. Shaw, to represent the Town of Clanton. Dr. W. L. Parrish and Dudley Collins, to represent those citizens of the county who would be interested in the drainage of the swamps near Clanton.

This matter has been brought up sometime ago, it is understood, and is of vital importance as an improvement for the town. If the meeting Monday, December 14th, gives out any definite plans, this work will give to the people of this immediate section, employment However, nothing definite is reported until the meeting on December 14th.

CENTRAL SINGERS MET AT COOPERS SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Chestnut Creek at Coopers was the meeting place of the Central Singing Society last Sunday afternoon. There were plenty of listeners, but not as large a class as usual. It was more of a community singing than it was a co-operative singing, since the people from that community and a very few more made up the singing.

There are eight churches composing the Central Singing Society, and just at present I am unable to think of anyone there Sunday from more than four of these places. Besides Coopers, there were singers from Maple Springs, Poplar Springs, and Friendship. Of course there were singers from other communities, all of whose help and presence we duly appreciate, but it looks as though Providence, Concord, Refuge, and Walnut Creek, had temporarily dissolved partnership with the society, as I am unable to recall anyone at the singing from either of these places.

Now, a singing society is like most everything else—it takes co-operation to make it go. Of course, no one expects any member to attend every Sunday, because that is almost impossible; but I do believe that some few from every community composing the society could be at every meeting place every Sunday afternoon.

Walnut Creek is the meeting place next Sunday afternoon. The weather will likely be a little disagreeable, but the singing will only be better if those present have to sacrifice a little in order to be there. Everyone who can, meet with us at Walnut Creek next Sunday afternoon at two o'clock.—T. E. Wyatt, Secretary.

Especially do they wish to thank the management of the Wadesonian Theatre. This theatre gave its entire door receipts for the night to the Club, and without charge, allowed the use of the theatre for rehearsals and two presentations of the play.

The play was a success according to general opinion, and was the first entertainment of its kind to be sponsored by the Clanton Pilot Club. CITY REDUCES WATER RATES TUES. NIGHT

Traffic Signal Light Will Be Installed At Crossing On Highway Before First

Much ado was seen at the regular meeting of the Town Council of the Town of Clanton held at the city's office, Tuesday night of this week.

Possibly the item that will be received with most applause is the announcement that the rate on water has been reduced. Heretofore the rate was raised considerably, from $1.25 as a minimum which was in effect several years ago, up to $1.90 as a minimum with an allowance of one thousand gallons, and a cost of six cents per one hundred gallons used over the one thousand.

Tuesday night the rate was reduced from $1.90 to $1.50 as a minimum with an allowance of 1500 gallons instead of one thousand, and five cents per one hundred gallons used over the 1500. This reduced rate also carries the ten per cent cash discount if paid by the tenth of the month.

Traffic Signal Ordered

It was also stated that the town has purchased a traffic signal light to be installed at the crossing on the highway at Upchurch's. This signal is to be installed sometime before Christmas. City officials urge and insist that this light be obeyed in traffic, not only by motorists, but also by pedestrians. It was also stated that rigid enforcement of the traffic laws will go into effect. The light will be a 4-way signal, giving the highway traffic slightly more time than for main street.

Teachers Agree To Continue With Schools For Full Term

Will Wait For Salaries Until County Board Is In Receipt Of School Funds From The State; Agreement To That Effect Is Signed

All schools in Chilton County will continue for a full term this season, unless three teachers who refused to sign an agreement with the County Board of Education, also refuse to teach after next month, according to a report from the meeting of school teachers of this county held recently at the courthouse in Clanton.

The problem of schools in this county closing on January 15 was facing the people. The County Board of Education asked the advice of business men on the matter, and it was advised to place the matter unfolded to the teachers. This was done at the meeting referred to above.

The question was explained fully to the gathering of school teachers, and many with the exception of three, signed a written agreement, stating that each individual teacher signing this paper petitioned the county board not to close the schools at mid-term, and that they understood the county does not have funds with which to pay them at present, and that they further understand and agree that salaries for 1931-32 will be paid in part or in full, depending on the amount received by the county from the state.

At a recent meeting on the school situation, the question as to whether the County Board of Commissioners could pay out of the general funds an amount of money to aid in paying teachers a part salary. Discussions disclosed that this could be done, as has been done in Colbert County, where the Board of Revenue took approximately $20,000 from the general funds of the county with which to help pay school teachers in that county.

Following is a statement from the Chilton County Board of Education in regard to the action of the teachers of this county:

“We, the members of the Chilton County Board of Education and Superintendent hereby express to the teachers and truck drivers of Chilton County our appreciation for the sacrificial spirit they have manifested in the interest of the children of Chilton County in agreeing to carry the schools on. We feel that it was an unselfish and volunteer action on their part and we call upon the citizens of the county to give these teachers their full co-operation in every way possible in serving the interest of the children and building such a system of schools in the County as will serve the best interests of said county.

We further pledge them our support and cooperation in every way possible and assure them that we will do everything in our power to secure funds with which to pay them for their services and to serve them in any way as it is possible to do so.”

The speaker next in a most pleasing manner commemorated the life and civic activities of Mrs. Harris in whose memory the tree was planted.

Swift's
Premium
Chicken

"Well Dressed"
with places to go

IN the gay '90s a chicken didn't go very far, no matter how good it was! The "marketing" of poultry was pretty much a local activity and a daily "cash market" was unheard of. One locality might have an acute shortage while another not far away might be watching its chickens grow old and stringy. There was no highway between supply and demand.

Swift & Company, thirty years ago, bent its energies toward making a national market for poultry, butterfat and eggs. That national market exists now. Northeastern States consume each year 350 million pounds of poultry their own people do not produce. Eleven states in the Middle West sell 200 million surplus pounds annually outside their own borders.

Two hundred thousand farm patrons sell poultry, butterfat and eggs for cash to Swift & Company at more than 100 produce plants. In place of the one town market of spring wagon days, they have thousands of markets. Every one of approximately 400 branch houses, every one of 10,000 towns on refrigerator car routes is a potential outlet for every chicken dressed in a Swift plant.

All dressed up and 10,400 places to go!

Leased wires everywhere keep our executives informed where produce markets are best. Supplies are hurried to these points. Demand is enhanced by advertising brands of high quality, Premium Milk-fed Chickens and Golden West Milk-fed Fowl among them. Service is complete and charges for it are low. No other system returns a larger share of the consumer's dollar to the producer. Swift & Company profits for years have averaged less than one-half cent per pound of product sold.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, B. M. Miller, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that on Tuesday the 5th day of January, 1932, an election will be held at the several polling places within the State of Alabama for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama in the manner and form as required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz;-

"The City of Mobile shall be and it is hereby authorized and empowered, without an election, to annually levy and collect a tax on the property situated therein, to pay the expenses of the City Government, at such rate as may from time to time be fixed by the governing authorities of said city, but unless and until an amendment to the Constitution of Alabama shall be adopted, permitting said City after an election or elections to levy and collect taxes amounting in the aggregate to more than one and one-tenth (1.1) per centum of the value of the property situated therein, as assessed for State taxation during the preceding year, the total of the ad valorem taxes levied in any one tax year by said municipality for all purposes (including any tax levied to pay the debt existing on the 6th day of December, 1875, with interest thereon, or any renewal of such debt) shall not exceed in the aggregate one and one-tenth (1.1) per centum of the value of such property as assessed for State taxation during the preceding year."

I further direct and proclaim that notice of the election, upon the above set forth amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, be given by publishing the same once a week for eight successive weeks prior to the 5th day of January, 1932, in each County of the State of Alabama in a newspaper published in said county.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and have caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol, in the City of Montgomery, on this the 5th day of October, 1931.

B. M. MILLER,
Governor.

A small but Important Item on the Family Budget..

Frequently people who come to the telephone office to order a telephone, tell us they have found that there is no economy in trying to get along without the service. Its many advantages, they say, far outweigh the small cost.

Doing without telephone service, they explain, hampered the social activities of the whole family and restricted their opportunities to enjoy life.

Trying to do without a telephone had resulted in their gaining a more appreciative understanding of the true value of the service. So they arranged the family budget to include telephone service.

The advantages of a telephone in the home are so numerous and the cost so very small that it really doesn't pay to try to do without it.

Campus Improvements

The High School P.-T. A. has spent a neat sum of money for improving our campus. This various assortment of shrubbery and other plants meets a long felt need for improving the general looks of everything around the high school. The actual work of planting and setting out the plants was done by the boys of the agricultural and occupational classes.

The P.-T. A. and the High School feel deeply indebted to the Town of Clanton for furnishing the truck to bring the shrubbery from Prattville.

RAILROAD TRAINS on the HIGHWAY!
L&N
(LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE R.R.)

CAN YOU IMAGINE SUCH A CONDITION?

A fast freight or passenger train comes thundering down the highway and it is all you can do to swerve your car out of its path.

With a swish it is gone, leaving you with bitter thoughts toward railroads and a government which permits such things.

A ridiculous picture? Yes,—and impossible, because railroad trains, unlike trucks and busses, must have rails to run on and an army of workers to keep them in good condition, and railroads must pay all the maintenance costs of their roadways.

Yet these other means of transportation use the highways for commercial purposes and YOU—along with the railroads—help support them by paying taxes for the maintenance of public highways.

The railroads are public carriers and operate with every consideration for your comfort and safety, but they are also business enterprises and are entitled to earn a fair profit for those who own them. You are probably one of the owners, at least indirectly, because railroad securities are held by insurance companies, financial and charitable institutions and very often form the nucleus of trust funds.

The railroads are not earning a reasonable profit. The law permits them to earn a fair return on the value of their property, and the Interstate Commerce Commission has fixed this at 5¾%. The actual rate of return of class one railroads for the first nine months of 1931 was 2.08%.

The number of passengers carried in 1930 was less than in 1902, although the population of the United States has increased 50%. The present volume of freight traffic is approximately the same as it was fifteen years ago.

The railroads are struggling with an economic condition that may prove ruinous to them and to those institutions whose interests are bound up in their welfare.

The Railroads Must Earn To Spend

What can be done to relieve this situation? Legislative measures must be passed that will deal fairly with the railroads. They are the backbone of the Nation's transportation system and must be brought from unfair taxation and regulation, back to a sound financial basis. You can cooperate by helping them procure legislative relief. A quicker help is to ship by train and travel on the steam railroads.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

On Friday there was a knock on the parsonage door. A tramp was looking for the pastor of the Methodist church He had a tale of hard luck to share with the preacher, and then concluded his remarks with a request that I allow him to sleep in the church. I told him that I did not think that the proper thing to do. About all that I could do for the poor man was to give him some food and send him on his way. I have no idea where he pillowed his head that night. Suffice it to say, I admired the honesty of the man. He came out with the truth. Said that he wanted to get into my church that he might go to sleep. I fear that many whose names appear on the church roll, have not been altogether as fair as that tramp. I have seen many stand at the door of the church, wanting admittance, and they have promised loyalty, consecration and fidelity, but as soon as they got on the inside, they went fast asleep. Too many church members want cushions of feathers and pillows of down that they may rest easy, and sleep well, in God's house.

A Sunday school teacher suggested last Sunday that the men of his class buy and use the "Self Rising Flour," so that they might be on time. Another brother spoke up, "Yes, and then equip each man with a Self Starter." If a man wishes to be on time at Sunday school, or at church, he must plan for that the day before. Going to church is just as much of a duty as going to business, and it should be done as promptly. When I first landed in Clanton I thought that the "Jones' Family" outnumbered any other connection, but after staying here for 12 months, I have concluded that there are five of the "Come Later's" to one Jones. To be honest, nearly half of the people going to Sunday school and church in Clanton belong to the "Come Later" family. There is Mr. and Mrs. Z. Y. Come-Later, Johnnie, Willie, Sammie, Sarah and Fannie, Come-Later. Then the Come-Later family has a host of cousins. Aunts and uncles. We should not only go to church every Sunday, but we should be on time at every service.

I was on a stroll with a friend. We were traveling through a beautiful section of hills and valleys. Every where I looked there were trees, blooming flowers and singing birds. I was lost in wonder and worship. My comrade did not seem to enjoy anything. He hobbled along and with almost every breath, he let out groans and snarls. Finally he let me know that he was not enjoying the stroll because he had a tack in one shoe, and an aching corn in the other shoe. I was ready to admit that he had bad comrades for pleasure. Any man who carries a sharp tack in one shoe and an aching corn in the other, is not calculated to get much joy out of blooming flowers, singing birds and rippling streams. That is why you hear so many groans and snarls today. The depression is rubbing our corn and high living is piercing our morals, and we are losing sight of the beautiful. In misery we plod along, groaning and snarling. It is high time that we get down to some tack pulling. Let's get the misery out of our minds and then we can have joy in living.

In a certain community there was a young man who was sub-normal in his mentality. He was not demented, but had certain peculiarities that made him an object of pity. One habit that he had was to stand out in the rain until his clothes were drenched. One cold, bleak day in January, this poor fellow walked out of a warm room, and took his stand near the house. The rain and sleet were falling. His mother, his brothers, his sisters, came to him, and begged him to go back into the warm room, but he refused. There he stood for an hour and no amount of persuasion would induce him to go into the house. The door was open and voices called him to warmth and protection, but he paid no heed. That is the picture of the man, the woman, who takes a stand out in the world. The door of the church is forever open, there are many voices from within, calling to the church and to God, but they prefer to stand out in the cold, bleak world of sin and suffering. Why not join the church of your choice and get into God's house where there is warmth and protection.

If you want to work a week in one day, I know no better plan than for you to tear the wall paper from a room where it has been for years. Behind the paper and the canvass you will see sights and smell odors that are not pleasant to experience. As for me, I am up with all tasks of that kind. I am not saying that such work should not be done, but I am saying that I have had my share. When we look behind the curtain, when we tear away the paper and the canvass, we learn things that we did not know before. I fear that there are many lives with curtains and canvass. Behind that screen there are things that are not pleasant to behold. If you have not had a house cleaning in your soul for years, it is time that you tear off the screen, expose the dust and the filth, and then get busy with a house cleaning that is worth while. Be honest. What is behind the paper and the canvass in your soul?

Mr. Hoover A Disappointment

Of course, President Hoover's message has been greeted with the usual diversity of interpretation, some commentators calling it a "highly encouraging analysis of the nation's problems," while others call it the "utterance of a sorely distracted man confronted with an emergency that baffles him." There can be no doubt but that the mind of the American people has long been gravitating to the conclusion that Mr. Hoover is a dubious leader without courage and matured convictions on any subject and that with such a pilot at the helm the ship of state will never reach a port of safety. Mr. Hoover has forfeited the confidence pretty much of the whole country, save for a few aids and counsellors who derive their position and power from the presidential favor. Nobody any longer expects Mr. Hoover to formulate any far-reaching and drastic program for the relief of the country, because he is not competent to perform this service. In every aspect of our affairs, notably in international matters, he vacillates, fumbles and is confused. He holds back from espousing any definite program of economic reform. He says the tariff must not be revised. On this important subject he may volte-face. He now makes a complete reversal of position by asking for increased taxation. He also denounces the "dole" and large expenditures for public works, but may ultimately champion both. While things are cracking before his eyes he seeks to put on one patch after another, to meet one emergency after another when it becomes no longer possible to avoid action. Mr. Hoover has completely lost the confidence of the country in his ability to run the government. The country profoundly needs leadership possessed of courage and the belief is mounting every day that the Democrats will have to supply the need.—Selma Times-Journal.

A Needless Waste Of Life

Forty boys, according to the most accurate count we have seen, were killed in football games during the season just ended. We are in thorough sympathy with those who would put an end to the sort of "sport" that takes so many young lives needlessly.

Forty boys "butchered to make a Roman holiday!" Forty homes plunged into grief and mourning for their irreplaceable loss. For what? To give pleasure to the crowds that pay to see a "fighting" game.

We read with horror of the gladiatorial combats in ancient Rome, when men fought to the death in the arena while the blood-thirsty populace cheered the fatal stroke. What would we say if we knew that one or more boys would be killed in every school or college football game? The nation would not for a moment tolerate slaughter in the name of sport.

It is unfair to blame the boys. Youth is always reckless, and sensitive to any reflection upon its courage and gameness. The blame must be placed upon school and college authorities who permit football under rules which make fatalities not merely possible, but as the grim record of this past season proves, probable.

Recent revelations of the extent to which professionalism has invaded college football make us doubt whether it should be classed under the head of "sport" or "business." Whichever it is, it is not fair either to the boys themselves or to their parents to expose them to risks which they are either unable to weigh or which they face in preference to the scorn of their classmates.

Doughnuts

Somebody has put forward the suggestion that October of each year should be celebrated as National Doughnut Month. We say "amen" to that, but we would broaden the proposal a bit by adding November, December, January, February, March, April May and June. The doughnut is good eating in any of these months. We have eaten doughnuts in July, August and September without any harmful effect. By all means let us celebrate the doughnut.

In most parts of the country the word doughnut means the toothsome delicacy which was first introduced into America by the Dutch settlers of New Amsterdam, who called them "crullers." Away down East in New England the people of the older generation today still call the Dutch crullers "fried cakes" to distinguish them from the original Yankee doughnut, which is made from bread dough, only slightly sweetened, and which resembles the genuine cruller or Dutch doughnut only in being fried in deep fat. These are the doughnuts which the hearty Yankee pioneers used to eat for breakfast, preferably "dunked" in coffee. But they are not the delicacies which most folks have in mind when they think of doughnuts.

The genuine cruller is basically different from the Yankee doughnut. The dough from which it is made is much shorter and sweeter, and in its perfection is of a consistency which requires careful handling if it is to be dropped into the frying kettle without losing its shape. The standard shape of the cruller is, now, a hole surrounded by a rim of dough, but the old-fashioned doughnut was composed of a long strip of dough twisted like a section of rope. Indeed, the word doughnut is merely a perversion of "dough-knot." But whatever the shape, whatever the consistency and quality of the ingredients, we say without hesitation that there is no such thing as a bad doughnut. The only thing that can spoil a doughnut, in our opinion, is to sprinkle it with powdered sugar. That makes it into a Frenchified kind of confection which is not only un-American but very difficult to brush off of one's vest.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

" * * * and all through the house, not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse."

Which reminds me of all the noise the Republicans are making about their President, that is,—our President, and other things, too. One of which the quietude that prevails on the streets of Clanton after ten o'clock at night up to about three the next morning. It's not like it used to be.

Unless we have a fire somewhere in town, and all those who have not said "Goodnight" around midnight, make their appearance on the scene of the fire.

McEathern, at Hill's in Clanton, drove into town the other afternoon from over in Perry county where he has been for a few days buying turkeys. Mc said he really bought turkeys, and shipped three carloads one day, and there was a big truck load in Clanton Tuesday. At any rate, it looks like somebody will eat turkey meat this Christmas. I've been watching to see who had turkeys in their yards, so maybe I could arrange someway to get an invitation to eat with them.

There is an ad in this paper headed "Trains on the Highways." It is an ad from the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, and contains some food for thought. You might read it.

Glancing through this week's issue of C. G. N. I notice that Tiffin-Klinner Furniture Co., is selling things at rock bottom prices—that is, according to their large ad in this issue.

Here comes Maurice Lande again this week, telling the people of this section that his "Customer's Benefit Sale" is still going strong at The Leader here. Maurice, I've got a good joke to tell you sometime, when you feel like laughing.

Hats off again to the teachers of Chilton County. Personally I'm glad to see them take the step they did on Wednesday afternoon of last week. It simply meant that the schools of the county will continue for this term in full. Unless—those three teachers who signed "No" on that agreement intend to close their schools. Read about it in the News.

I notice in the column "Letters to the Editor" this week that C. G. N. has been given a nice little bouquet in a letter from Mrs. Clara Curry. In my opinion Mrs. Curry is certainly capable of knowing a good thing when she sees it, and her opinions are always listened to with interest.

This Dief of Clanton, who is known far and wide, and when whose name is mentioned, one immediately thinks of the fine service station that is also known far and wide for its service day and night, is really going into the filling station business, according to a story on the front page of this issue. Drive under his filling station in your car, have it filled up, then step across the street to "Dief's Cafe" and there you can get filled up, and it ain't all gas either.

Overheard Mr. Dief giving some orders to men in the cafe the other day, while they were fixing up the place, and judging from what I heard, he don't mean perhaps, when he told them he wanted everything "ship-shape".

Was sauntering around down towards the post office the other day and looked into the Community Bakery. My mouth just watered, because in the show cases there they have just oodles of good things to eat. The place has been cleaned out.—the clerks have on neat looking clothes, and that Mr. McLeroy who is there, seems to be a pretty good sort of fellow.

Was just thinking about our telephone operators down at the Southern Bell office, the other day, and how they do give service. I can call from one side of the street to the other and get just as good service as if I was paying for a few minutes talk to Birmingham. Personally, I like the service we are getting here now on the telephone system.

Heard a fellow talking about a man who owed him some rent money the other day. He said the renter had money to play pool with, and patronize the bowling alleys, but didn't seem to have money to pay his house rent. And it looked bad for the renter, too.

Well, I haven't any bad habits, unless it might be sleeping late every morning, but really that's not a habit —it's a pleasure, or something.

Jesse Baker says tell the folks his sale is still going on in high these days. His signs state he has committed commercial murder. There's an ad in this issue telling about the sale at the Clanton Cash Store.

I wonder why that certain lady told me she was going to a certain place last week end and didn't do it. I wonder why a certain out-of-town man visited only one place of business in Clanton last week, instead of paying his usual other calls. And why a certain young lady said over a telephone that she was "going somewhere" the other day. And why a certain business man will allow himself to be led by others so much. And why those three county school teachers refused to agree to the proposition before them last week. Why that person got peeved because this column did not say something about her two weeks ago. What my girl friend is going to give me for a Christmas present, if any. If I should send a certain blond school teacher a Christmas card or not, as has been customary. Whether a certain business man means Tuesday next year, when he said "next Tuesday." Who wrote that letter about Jack Hayes. If I will ever be able to accept that kind invitation to have dinner out-of-town, and when. What I am going to do with myself on Christmas Day. What a Dance Set is. If it's all right to give a young lady one for a Christmas present. How much gasoline those two big tanks at Bentley's in Thorsby, hold. If I'm going to like a recent addition to Clanton's social set or not. Where all the mud on the ed's car came from. And if this road working business in the county shouldn't be looked into. Who's going to furnish me with a little "Christmas Spirit." If so, how much. And what will I wonder next,—or something.

Letters To The Editor

WHAT THE CHILTON COUNTY NEWS SAYS ABOUT YOU

Editor, Chilton County News:

One cannot begin to imagine the little thrill of surprise and pleasure that comes, when upon opening the apparent, every day business letter, one finds instead, an attractive folder, entitled, "What the Chilton County News Says About You." Enclosed therein is the clipping of story carefully folded and pasted.

Accept thanks, Mr. Editor, for the story that you gave concerning myself in last week's issue. Accept more thanks for your pains in following up the story in such pleasing manner.

My hearty congratulations are accorded you upon this late, novel and attractive feature that you have instituted. It is such features that cost time, patience and means; but the cost, in my opinion, represents a wise investment that will most assuredly net splendid returns.

This latest feature is just one of the "ear marks" of a progressive paper: one of the many details that make up perfection. And, according to Michael Angelo: "Though trifles make perfection, perfection is no trifle."

Long live the Chilton County News and its progressive spirit.

Sincerely,
MRS. CLARA B. CURRY.
Dec. 15, 1931.

Jemison, Ala., Dec. 5, 1931.
Editor, Chilton County News:

I wonder how many that will read this letter have had to worry about where the money will come from to pay the taxes on their homes. I can't solve that problem for you, but I will say that you are to blame for most of your tax troubles yourself.

How much time have you spent since you have been a voter meditating over the political situation? Have you ever seriously tried to think out the real reason why you are overburdened with taxes? Just as long as you swallow hook, line and sinker whatever dope the politicians see fit to put out and go on using your own head merely for a hat rack just that long you can expect to be a sucker and with very little to suck at that.

Just as long as it costs more to register a voter than all the poll taxes he will pay in a lifetime will amount to and just as long as it costs more to put a juror's name in the jury box than it will cost to bury him when he dies, just that long you may expect to have to find a way to pay something for nothing.

I wish you could see yourself just as some of the politicians you vote for see you. You would be just a gerat big mouth and a tiny little hand. In the tiny hand you would be holding a lifetime sucker labeled, "My Political Balm, the only thing free from taxation."

Let us mention a few of the things for which your tax money is spent and you figure for yourself the benefit they are to you.

The committee of Sixty-one whose very great and grave duty it is to find out whether or not people are really destitute in some sections of our country. This committee will probably not spend more than four or five millions of your money to find out a thing that a common wart head like me already knew. The expenses of this committee if applied rightly would do much to immediately relieve the situation. Anyway, by the time the committee makes its final report on the stupendous task assigned most of the destitute will either be starved or frozen to death or some friend that is almost as destitute as they are will have divided their food and shelter with them.

The commission to report on prohibition that spent millions of your money to tell you in big high sounding words a thing that you have known ever since we have had prohibition. Here is the substance of their report in a nutshell: Some of our people want prohibition and some do not" Brother, just another instance where you were the goat.

The Legislative Committee to find out whether or not the state was financially embarrassed. Boy, when I noticed that in the papers I surely did pat myself on the back. To think that they had to appoint a committee of great and wise men at a cost of thousands and thousands of dollars to find out what I had known for a long time. Anyone but a nut could have watched you fellows scratch your heads at tax paying time and figured that out without a pencil. This committee was not instructed to catch up any of the leakage for the simple reason they would have found their own old expense checks in there and it would have been embarrassing. You voted for them tho didn't you? So did I.

No wonder some of the boys have become desperate enough to try to bottle some of their corn. Can't say that I blame them much for I believe it is more dishonorable to violate a solemn campaign promise as some of our politicians do than to violate a law that so many people do not indorse.

Wonder of you are satisfied with the school situation in Chilton County.

Respectfully,
HOWARD ROPER.

Clanton, Ala., Route 1.
Editor, Chilton County News:

Will you please spare me a little space in your valuable paper to say a few more words about the 42nd generation and the Gentile Age, as I have been asked if it don't fulfill in 1932, what am I going to do.

Of course I will have to admit that I misinterpreted the Scriptures, just like some others are doing. Well, we find from Christ, or David, are 28 generations. Count 70 years for a generation, which evidently is, and 360 days for a year, we have 705,600 days, which expires in October, 1932, which makes 1960 Hebrew or Jewish years. Count 365 days for the Gentile year and one extra day every 4 years, we have 705,663 days, ending 1932. Well, let's see if we can get other prophecy that will harmonize with this.

For instance, we will take Daniel. Evidently Daniel based his prophecy on a week vision, that is from A. D. 1 to 700, one week for 10 years, and 70 weeks for 700 years is applicable to the time of the great struggle between the Jews and the Gentiles as to who should possess and control the Kingdom. So we see it fell in the hands of the Gentiles. I believe Daniel also got a vision of the Gentile age. But its time was based on different figures. We find in Daniel 12 and 6 says, and one said to the man clothed in linen which was upon the waters of the river, how long shall it be to the end of these wonders, and the man that was clothed in linen told him that it shall be for a time times and an half. This of course means 3½ years of the Jewish year of 1260 days or years.

We find in Ezekiel 4 and 6 that God gave him a day for a year in some of his prophecy. Ezekiel also prophecied concerning the airplanes. These time and times and half time in Rev. 12 and 14 have the same meaning which says and to the women were given two wings of a gerat eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place where she is nourished for a time and times, and half a time. Also read Rev. 11 and 8, says, and their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt for three days and a half. Also 11th verse says, and after three days and an half the spirit of life from God entered into them. Now go back to the 2nd verse, says, But the court which is without the temple leave out, and measure it not, for it is given unto the Gentiles.

And the Holy City shall they tread under foot for forty and two months, which means the Gentile age. Now we see all these different figures to mean or refer to the same period of time. We see all these have reference to 3½ years or 1260 days. We also find that these 1260 days represent 1260 years. Now add this 1260 to 700, we have 1960 Jewish years. Multiply this 1960 by 360 we get 705,600 days. Then multiply 1932 of the Gentile years by 365, then add 483 for leap years. We have 705,663 days. Evidently the Gentile Age expires the latter part of 1932, also the 28 generations since Christ, counting 70 years for a generation. Study these Scriptures, friends.

With best respects to all,
J. H. JACKSON.

Psalm Of Cotton

The following clipping was brought to the News by William Walker, well known citizen who resides west of Clanton. Dr. Pickering, prominent physician of Plantersville, gave the clipping to Mr. Walker:

Cotton, thou art my shepherd and I am in want.

Thou hast caused me to feed in a dry pasture; thou hast destroyed my credit; thou hast led me into paths of poverty, lawsuits, liens and near nakedness.

Thou hast destroyed my soul and my happiness;

Thou hast caused me to bow to a banker with my hat under my arm and mortgage the muscle and produce of my farm.

Thou hast caused me to live in a rented house in full view of the moon, while stars came twinkling through the cracks;

Thou preparest a naked back and an empty stomach for me in the presence of my friends.

Thou anointest my head with ignoranec, superstition, poverty and unpaid accounts—how can I trust thee?

Thou hast kept my children out of school, church and society, thereby robbing them of that which is good and noble, elevating and refining.

Thou hast caused me to go to the barn and bring out the old fertilizer sacks and ask my wife to make me a shirt.

Now, behold as I stand amidst my friends in my new shirt with these inscriptions in full view: "Eighteen per cent Acid Phosphate" on the breast, and "12-4-4" on the tail.—Person County Times, Roxboro, N. C.

CHRISTMAS LORE

Christmas being one of the most widely celebrated of all holidays, it is only natural that many odd customs and superstitions should have been identified with its observance in various lands and at different times.

The date December 25 approximates that of certain ancient festivals such as the Roman Saturnalia, the Scandinavian Yule, the winter festival of the heathen Britons, and later the Roman festival of the sun-god Mithra.

One of the oldest superstitions, once prevalent throughout Europe, was that animals were endowed with the power of speech on Christmas. Another was that persons born on that day were destined to enjoy good luck throughout life

It was an old custom to wash and bleed horses the day after Christmas, in the belief that this would preserve them from harm during the ensuing year. According to a Polish superstition what one did on Christmas would govern his actions for the following year.

There was an ancient belief that each kind of evergreen used for decorative purposes was capable of conferring special blessings upon those who passed under the verdant boughs. To pass under holly betokened good fortune, bay signified victory, while laurel imparted beauty and poetical skill.

The mythical Santa Claus has been known by many names, including those of Kriss Kringle, St. Nicholas, Knecht Ruprecht, Robin Goodfellow, and others. In Germany one known as Krampus, an ugly hunchbacked dwarf, was supposed to carry off naughty children.

In Christian lands Christmas is celebrated in commemoration of the birth of Christ, and among the masses is supposed to mark the actual anniversary of that event. But scholars and educated people generally understand that December 25 is merely a date arbitrarily set for this observance, and that the actual day, or even the year, of Christ's birth is not known with certainty.

WASHINGTON TREES

As a part of the bicentennial celebration of George Washington's birth next year, millions of memorial trees have been or will be planted under the auspices of the American Tree Association. Women's clubs, schools, boy and girl scouts, various other civic organizations, and even convicts, are taking an active part in this tree planting program.

Pennsylvania is one of the most active states in the movement, Pittsburgh alone having decided to plant 111,500 trees, while 84,000 have been planted by the convicts of two state penitentiaries. In New Jersey, Boy Scouts and the Y. M. C. A. are especially active. In Iowa the hundreds of 4-H clubs will take the lead. Florida will have a three months planting period. Wisconsin women's clubs have an elaborate program. In New York and Maryland, as well as in other states, the D. A. R. will plant thousands of trees.

These are only a few of the projects already under way, and it is expected that every state in the Union will join in making 1932 the greatest year for forestry that any country has ever known.

In fact, the idea of honoring Washington's memory in this manner has spread to foreign countries, the first actual planting of memorial trees having been reported from Turkey.

No method of celebrating his 200th anniversary, perhaps, would be more pleasing to Washington himself, if he could witness it, than this planting of trees in his honor. Incidentally, it might be a good time to say again that the story of his cutting down his father's cherry tree is only legendary, with no basis of historical fact.

The first and only low-priced car with

Syncro-Mesh Shift and Free Wheeling

The new Chevrolet Six combines the advantages of two inventions . . . Syncro-Mesh and Free Wheeling . . . to assure quick, quiet, easy gear-shifting and positive control of the car under every driving condition

CHEVROLET One of the biggest driving thrills in modern motoring is now available at one of the very lowest prices in the automobile market. Silent Syncro-Mesh gear-shifting is combined with simplified Free Wheeling in the new and finer Chevrolet Six!

No other car offers this double-feature for so little money. Syncro-Mesh is recognized as the most advanced type of transmission ever developed by engineering science. Free Wheeling is that new, up-to-date sensation which adds so much to the zest of driving. The two make a matchless combination! They bring about an entirely new kind of driving ease and car control, far beyond anything you have ever enjoyed before. They give you quick, quiet, easy shifting and complete mastery of the car, under all conditions of road and traffic. They enable you to do things in driving that are impossible to do in a car without both these features.

Then, along with these two big motoring thrills—Chevrolet offers you 60-horsepower "six" performance, higher speed, faster acceleration, greater smoothness, smarter Fisher bodies, matchless economy, and a first cost among the lowest in the motor car market. Certainly, it's the great American value for 1932!

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

Only two more Sundays in the year 1931. Some have been to church every Sunday. Some have been about half of the Sundays. Some have been not a time. What about your record? Add two more Sundays of attendance to your record.

The pastor preaches next Sunday, morning and night. At 11 A. M. the subject is "What Must Christian Do?" At seven o'clock Sunday night the subject is "What Should a Christian Do?" These two subjects link up with each other and you should hear both.

Our Sunday school is getting off to a good record in the new Conference year. Help us to improve over the record of the year just gone. Young and old, meet with us each Sunday at 9:45 A. M.

Preaching next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock at the Isabella church.

Our church stands for loyalty, consecration, service, liberality and experience. We need you in our worship, and you need us. Always welcome.

JACK HAYES IS PRAISED IN ANONYMOUS LETTER

Following is published a letter received this week, addressed to the News bearing a postmark of Gaffney, S. C., in which an outsider tells how he sees Jack Hayes, well known baseball player of Clanton, who has been with the Washington Senators:

"To the Editor of the News:

Sir:

"On the Washington Baseball Club from 1927 to 1931 there was one man who more than any other was worthy of the adoration which lots of little boys and girls heaped upon the players.

"Most professional ball players are not examples of the highest type of American manhood, although Walter Johnson, Christy Matthewson and a few others of exceptional ability have always been regarded as such. I want to tell you, therefore, about a man whom I have watched with the greatest admiration for the past five years, and in whom I have never been disappointed. I am lots older than I was in 1927, but I still think he is fine.

"He is the most graceful, natural, and competent second baseman, the most enthusiastic, energetic ball player I have ever seen. He possesses all the qualifications which we have come to attribute to a truly good sportsman.

"You people of Clanton must be tremendously proud of Jackie Hayes."

MT. PLEASANT JR. HIGH DEFEATS STANTON JR. HIGH

On last Friday afternoon the Mt. Pleasant Jr. High School basketball team avenged their loss of last week by sending the Stanton team down to a 14 to 8 defeat. The game got away with a dull, slow, and uninteresting movement, but as it entered the second quarter the boys began to speed up, turning it into an exceedingly swift game, but entirely too rough.

Burnett, for Mt. Pleasant, and Royster, Captain for the Stanton team, were barred from the game during the last half through excessive fouling, yet both players turned in a nice performance before their expulsion.

The visitors were unable to pass the ball successfully through the tight defense thrown up by the Mt. Pleasant boys, for they succeeded in getting only two field goals, one by Royster, and the other by Housten.

Housten, who towers well over six feet, played a nice game as center for Stanton, as he succeeded in placing the tip-off over Littlejohn most of the game, but it proved to no avail as his mates failed to back him.

Curtis Traywick, the diminutive little forward for the home team, was the big gun in the offensive play against the Stanton quintet. He registered every point for Mt. Pleasant, with the exception of one, which was a foul shot made good by his brother, Cecil. Burnett, their team mate, was sadly off form in shooting, but turned in a nifty performance in defensive play.

Parker, for Mt. Pleasant, and L. D. Harrison for Stanton, displayed at times, some fancy work at the guard position; both breaking up passes which doubtless might have proved costly to either team.

This game places the teams in a tie, which probably will be played off on some independent court after January.

The Stanton girls team was due to play, but failed to make their appearance on the court.

Next Friday the Concord Jr. High school team will play at Mt. Pleasant. We hope to see a large crowd present, as this may be the last game before the Christmas holidays.

COTTON REPORT

There were 19.321 bales of cotton ginned in Chilton County of the 1931 crop, prior to Dec. 1, 1931, as compared with 22,086 bales of the 1930 crop, prior to Dec. 1, 1930.

Cotton Damage

It is very noticeable that there is a large amount of cotton piled out around farm homes in the County taking the weather damage.

It is nothing unusual for cotton to damage from 20 to 100 pounds per bale under such conditions. It is bad enough to have such damage when cotton is a good price. As scarce as money is now every farmer should take pains to protect his cotton from this damage.

Much interest is being expressed over the coming of the Greenville choir next Sunday. This choir is one of the best in the State, and their presentation of Christmas music at the Methodist Church next Sunday morning at eleven o'clock will be one of the most attractive religious gatherings ever taking place in Clanton. The choir has requested that no collection be taken, other than the regular incidental collection. This is a free will contribution on the part of the choir to the people of Chilton County, and it is expected that a large crowd will make use of the opportunity to hear this splendid Christmas music. The only cost in connection with the program will be the entertainment of the choir at one of the local hotels. The program follows:

Broadhead's Store Damaged By Fire

People of Clanton were aroused late Saturday night when the fire alarm sounded, directing the volunteer firemen to the store of J. H. Broadhead & Son, on main street.

The firemen were bothered considerably by dense smoke coming from the building, and used good judgment in combating the smoke and flames. Considerable damage was done to certain goods in the store by fire, while smoke also damaged contents in the Broadhead store as well as in rooms in the second story of the building, used by a family as living quarters. The origin of the fire was not learned.

THE STARS ARE STILL SHINING

At times it pays to lift the eyes from the daily exactions and turn them upward, toward the stars. It is by this simple method that is restored the perspective, and causes one to become fitted to judge more precisely the values that are expressed in the terms of finite and infinite.

The anxieties and troubles that almost seem overwhelming are seen to have a way of decreasing when placed alongside the great measurement supplied by the calm, gleaming heavens.

How many passing troubles, those stars, so quiet, have gazed upon, and how many they have witnessed vanish into nothingness. These stars looked down upon the people of Israel when they were suffering under Pharoah, and then gazed down upon them when they reveled in their glory in the times of David and Solomon.

These same stars gleamed down upon Bethlehem, when there came out of the night, the song of angels as they proclaimed the birth of the Savior, and burned brightly as He went about with His missions, showing love and mercy as the years passed by. They saw Mary and Martha weeping when night came and that familiar face was missing, and saw their extreme joy when there was restored to them, their brother.

These stars were seen by the man who was blind, and who by faith, had his affliction removed, and they witnessed the healing of the lepers.

And when the Master extended His arms to those children, of whom He said, "Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven," they played, danced and sang in the light of these same stars. Imagine, what stories these stars could tell.

They have witnessed the gathering of millions of dark clouds in years passed, to see them only vanish with the coming of the glory of the morning sun. They have seen great masses of people sorely troubled and harassed, only to soon be rejoicing in a new day.

Was it not a star that led the Three Wise Men to the little place called Bethlehem, where the One had been born, who was to create a new order in the world; One who came to proclaim a new doctrine of hope and a religion of happiness.

His message was, "Let not your heart be troubled." That might well be a timely message for this holiday season. Troubles become transitory; joy is eternal, and the great obligation during this Christmas period is to spread happiness, and add to the precious memories that cause life to become sweetened and help enrich the years as they unfold.

Let us look about us, there is good to be done. And let's remember the words of Him, whose day of birth we cherish in our minds and with deeds of kindness, "Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled."

Each year, at this time, for the past five years, the present management of this newspaper has extended to the people of this section, and elsewhere, that old but sincere greeting, Merry Christmas.

Again this year, and as sincere as ever before, the entire working group of the Chilton County News extends to its readers heartiest greetings and best wishes for a very Merry Christmas for the year 1931.

Methodist Ladies Will Send Orphanage Pack

Ladies of the Clanton Methodist Methodist church are to start gathering donations in the way of canned fruits, preserves and jellies this week, to be sent to the Methodist Orphanage at Selma.

Those people of this section who have any kind of canned fruits, etc., they wish to send, are requested to leave them at the James Sign Shop, or at the C. Reece Mullins place, near the sign shop. DATE NEARING FOR BOB JONES REVIVAL HERE

Meeting Will Be Held In The Courthouse Beginning On January 3rd-24th

Plans are rapidly going forward for the Bob Jones revival that is to begin on Sunday night, January 3rd. Many cottage prayer meetings are being held in different sections of Clanton and Chilton County, and committees are being appointed to take charge of the work of the revival campaign. A choir will be organized from the local talent and good music will be furnished from the first service. Dr. E. C. Miller of South Bend, Ind., will arrive in the city on January 2nd, and will be in readiness for the campaign which is to begin the following day. All the local churches will have their morning services, but will unite in a big union service at night.

The place of the meeting will be at the Court House. Should the auditorium of the court house be taxed, chairs will be furnished, and seating provided. It is expected that the meeting shall be county wide, and that during the period there will be many visitors from every section of the county. The money question is not to be emphasized, but a strong appeal will be made for men to give themselves to God. This is a meeting for the people, and it is hoped that it will result in much good.

Holcombe & Massey Buy W. W. Fox Store

Announcement was made recently to the effect that the well known store of W. W. Fox has been sold to C. R. Holcombe and Frank Massey. This transaction took place last week.

Fox's Store has been popular in this section for a number of years, and the new managers state they hope to continue making the store popular. The store will go under the firm name of Holcombe & Massey, successors to W. W. Fox Store, and will still be located in the same place. The line of merchandise handled by Mr. Fox will not be changed by the new owners. They will continue handling odds and ends, light hardware and household articles.

Mr. Holcombe recently moved to Clanton from Thorsby and is experienced in this line of business, while Mr. Massey is well known over this entire county, having been connected with the Fox Store for sometime. They invite the people to visit them.

DEMOCRATIC HARMONY IN RANKS SHOWN

Voters To Select National Delegates And Committeemen In Party

The action of the state Democratic executive committee last week at its meeting in Birmingham creates two chief causes for satisfaction among Democrats, according to press reports of the meeting, in the Alabama Journal, Saturday.

Those men who have entered the lists for the office to succeed Watt T. Brown, of Ragland, for Democratic national committeeman are Gen. Robert E. Steiner of Montgomery, Borden Burr, of Birmingham and Sen. Charles S. McDowell. Sen. Brown has not yet stated whether he will be a candidate or not. The meeting of the State Democratic Executive Committee was also attended by Hon. J. B. Atkinson of Clanton, who is a member of the committee, and who has done much work to establish harmony in the Democratic ranks in line with the action of the executive committee last week.

The committee put its entire trust in the voters, and several of its acts were unanimous. Pilot Club Holds Business Meeting

The Pilot Club of Clanton held its regular business meeting Tuesday night jointly with a Christmas box affair, from which each member received a gift from some other member of the club.

Among the matters of business attended to was one very commendable action on the part of the club. This organization of business and professional women will furnish funds to take care of lunches for three undernourished children at the Clanton Grammar School for this term of school. The children are to be selected and the proper diet given them at the school lunch room. In a printed leaflet, Grand Master Will L. Lee, of the Alabama Masonic Grand Lodge, announces the full list of committees named to serve the Grand Lodge. A copy of this leaflet has been mailed to each subordinate lodge in the State by Guy T. Smith, grand secretary.

In addition to listing the Grand Lodge officers and standing committees, this leaflet also carries information of interest to all Masons. The revised constitution, approved by the jurisprudence committee, was submitted at the recent communication of the Grand Lodge to the lodges for approval or rejection as a whole at their annual communications preceding June 24, 1932.

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

Only two more Sundays in the year 1931. Some have been to church every Sunday. Some have been about half of the Sundays. Some have been not a time. What about your record? Add two more Sundays of attendance to your record.

The pastor preaches next Sunday, morning and night. At 11 A. M. the subject is "What Must Christian Do?" At seven o'clock Sunday night the subject is "What Should a Christian Do?" These two subjects link up with each other and you should hear both.

Our Sunday school is getting off to a good record in the new Conference year. Help us to improve over the record of the year just gone. Young and old, meet with us each Sunday at 9:45 A. M.

Preaching next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock at the Isabella church.

Our church stands for loyalty, consecration, service, liberality and experience. We need you in our worship, and you need us. Always welcome.

JACK HAYES IS PRAISED IN ANONYMOUS LETTER

Following is published a letter received this week, addressed to the News bearing a postmark of Gaffney, S. C., in which an outsider tells how he sees Jack Hayes, well known baseball player of Clanton, who has been with the Washington Senators:

"To the Editor of the News:

Sir:

"On the Washington Baseball Club from 1927 to 1931 there was one man who more than any other was worthy of the adoration which lots of little boys and girls heaped upon the players.

"Most professional ball players are not examples of the highest type of American manhood, although Walter Johnson, Christy Matthewson and a few others of exceptional ability have always been regarded as such. I want to tell you, therefore, about a man whom I have watched with the greatest admiration for the past five years, and in whom I have never been disappointed. I am lots older than I was in 1927, but I still think he is fine.

"He is the most graceful, natural, and competent second baseman, the most enthusiastic, energetic ball player I have ever seen. He possesses all the qualifications which we have come to attribute to a truly good sportsman.

"You people of Clanton must be tremendously proud of Jackie Hayes."

MT. PLEASANT JR. HIGH DEFEATS STANTON JR. HIGH

On last Friday afternoon the Mt. Pleasant Jr. High School basketball team avenged their loss of last week by sending the Stanton team down to a 14 to 8 defeat. The game got away with a dull, slow, and uninteresting movement, but as it entered the second quarter the boys began to speed up, turning it into an exceedingly swift game, but entirely too rough.

Burnett, for Mt. Pleasant, and Royster, Captain for the Stanton team, were barred from the game during the last half through excessive fouling, yet both players turned in a nice performance before their expulsion.

The visitors were unable to pass the ball successfully through the tight defense thrown up by the Mt. Pleasant boys, for they succeeded in getting only two field goals, one by Royster, and the other by Housten.

Housten, who towers well over six feet, played a nice game as center for Stanton, as he succeeded in placing the tip-off over Littlejohn most of the game, but it proved to no avail as his mates failed to back him.

Curtis Traywick, the diminutive little forward for the home team, was the big gun in the offensive play against the Stanton quintet. He registered every point for Mt. Pleasant, with the exception of one, which was a foul shot made good by his brother, Cecil. Burnett, their team mate, was sadly off form in shooting, but turned in a nifty performance in defensive play.

Parker, for Mt. Pleasant, and L. D. Harrison for Stanton, displayed at times, some fancy work at the guard position; both breaking up passes which doubtless might have proved costly to either team.

This game places the teams in a tie, which probably will be played off on some independent court after January.

The Stanton girls team was due to play, but failed to make their appearance on the court.

Next Friday the Concord Jr. High school team will play at Mt. Pleasant. We hope to see a large crowd present, as this may be the last game before the Christmas holidays.

COTTON REPORT

There were 19.321 bales of cotton ginned in Chilton County of the 1931 crop, prior to Dec. 1, 1931, as compared with 22,086 bales of the 1930 crop, prior to Dec. 1, 1930.

Cotton Damage

It is very noticeable that there is a large amount of cotton piled out around farm homes in the County taking the weather damage.

It is nothing unusual for cotton to damage from 20 to 100 pounds per bale under such conditions. It is bad enough to have such damage when cotton is a good price. As scarce as money is now every farmer should take pains to protect his cotton from this damage.

This is a free will contribution on the part of the choir to the people of Chilton County, and it is expected that a large crowd will make use of the opportunity to hear this splendid Christmas music. The only cost in connection with the program will be the entertainment of the choir at one of the local hotels. The program follows:

Broadhead's Store Damaged By Fire

People of Clanton were aroused late Saturday night when the fire alarm sounded, directing the volunteer firemen to the store of J. H. Broadhead & Son, on main street.

The firemen were bothered considerably by dense smoke coming from the building, and used good judgment in combating the smoke and flames. Considerable damage was done to certain goods in the store by fire, while smoke also damaged contents in the Broadhead store as well as in rooms in the second story of the building, used by a family as living quarters. The origin of the fire was not learned.

THE STARS ARE STILL SHINING

At times it pays to lift the eyes from the daily exactions and turn them upward, toward the stars. It is by this simple method that is restored the perspective, and causes one to become fitted to judge more precisely the values that are expressed in the terms of finite and infinite.

The anxieties and troubles that almost seem overwhelming are seen to have a way of decreasing when placed alongside the great measurement supplied by the calm, gleaming heavens.

How many passing troubles, those stars, so quiet, have gazed upon, and how many they have witnessed vanish into nothingness. These stars looked down upon the people of Israel when they were suffering under Pharoah, and then gazed down upon them when they reveled in their glory in the times of David and Solomon.

These same stars gleamed down upon Bethlehem, when there came out of the night, the song of angels as they proclaimed the birth of the Savior, and burned brightly as He went about with His missions, showing love and mercy as the years passed by. They saw Mary and Martha weeping when night came and that familiar face was missing, and saw their extreme joy when there was restored to them, their brother.

These stars were seen by the man who was blind, and who by faith, had his affliction removed, and they witnessed the healing of the lepers.

And when the Master extended His arms to those children, of whom He said, "Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven," they played, danced and sang in the light of these same stars. Imagine, what stories these stars could tell.

They have witnessed the gathering of millions of dark clouds in years passed, to see them only vanish with the coming of the glory of the morning sun. They have seen great masses of people sorely troubled and harassed, only to soon be rejoicing in a new day.

Was it not a star that led the Three Wise Men to the little place called Bethlehem, where the One had been born, who was to create a new order in the world; One who came to proclaim a new doctrine of hope and a religion of happiness.

His message was, "Let not your heart be troubled." That might well be a timely message for this holiday season. Troubles become transitory; joy is eternal, and the great obligation during this Christmas period is to spread happiness, and add to the precious memories that cause life to become sweetened and help enrich the years as they unfold.

Let us look about us, there is good to be done. And let's remember the words of Him, whose day of birth we cherish in our minds and with deeds of kindness, "Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled."

Each year, at this time, for the past five years, the present management of this newspaper has extended to the people of this section, and elsewhere, that old but sincere greeting, Merry Christmas.

Again this year, and as sincere as ever before, the entire working group of the Chilton County News extends to its readers heartiest greetings and best wishes for a very Merry Christmas for the year 1931.

DATE NEARING FOR BOB JONES REVIVAL HERE

Meeting Will Be Held In The Courthouse Beginning On January 3rd-24th

Plans are rapidly going forward for the Bob Jones revival that is to begin on Sunday night, January 3rd. Many cottage prayer meetings are being held in different sections of Clanton and Chilton County, and committees are being appointed to take charge of the work of the revival campaign. A choir will be organized from the local talent and good music will be furnished from the first service. Dr. E. C. Miller of South Bend, Ind., will arrive in the city on January 2nd, and will be in readiness for the campaign which is to begin the following day. All the local churches will have their morning services, but will unite in a big union service at night.

The place of the meeting will be at the Court House. Should the auditorium of the court house be taxed, chairs will be furnished, and seating provided. It is expected that the meeting shall be county wide, and that during the period there will be many visitors from every section of the county. The money question is not to be emphasized, but a strong appeal will be made for men to give themselves to God. This is a meeting for the people, and it is hoped that it will result in much good.

Holcombe & Massey Buy W. W. Fox Store

Announcement was made recently to the effect that the well known store of W. W. Fox has been sold to C. R. Holcombe and Frank Massey. This transaction took place last week.

Fox's Store has been popular in this section for a number of years, and the new managers state they hope to continue making the store popular. The store will go under the firm name of Holcombe & Massey, successors to W. W. Fox Store, and will still be located in the same place. The line of merchandise handled by Mr. Fox will not be changed by the new owners. They will continue handling odds and ends, light hardware and household articles.

Mr. Holcombe recently moved to Clanton from Thorsby and is experienced in this line of business, while Mr. Massey is well known over this entire county, having been connected with the Fox Store for sometime. They invite the people to visit them.

DEMOCRATIC HARMONY IN RANKS SHOWN

Voters To Select National Delegates And Committeemen In Party

The action of the state Democratic executive committee last week at its meeting in Birmingham creates two chief causes for satisfaction among Democrats, according to press reports of the meeting, in the Alabama Journal, Saturday.

Those men who have entered the lists for the office to succeed Watt T. Brown, of Ragland, for Democratic national committeeman are Gen. Robert E. Steiner of Montgomery; Borden Burr, of Birmingham and Sen. Charles S. McDowell. Sen. Brown has not yet stated whether he will be a candidate or not. The meeting of the State Democratic Executive Committee was also attended by Hon. J. B. Atkinson of Clanton, who is a member of the committee, and who has done much work to establish harmony in the Democratic ranks in line with the action of the executive committee last week.

The committee put its [illegible] the voters, and secondly, its acts were unanimous. The committee not only entrusted the selection of delegates to the national convention next year, as well as the national committeeman and committeewoman, to the democratic voters of the state but it showed no sympathy with suggestions to have such delegates chosen in convention.

The revised constitution, approved by the jurisprudence committee, was submitted at the recent communication of the Grand Lodge to the lodges for approval or rejection as a whole at their annual communications preceding June 24, 1932.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

Will you be so kind as to give me a space in your valuable paper to say a few words to its readers? My text is: "When the righteous are in authority the people rejoice; but when the wicked beareth rule the people mourn." Proverbs 29 and 2nd verse.

I believe every reader of this paper knows that the people of the world, the people of the United States, the people of Alabama, and the people of every county in Alabama are not rejoicing on account of a righteous rule, but to the contrary are mourning. We hear great statesmen say they can't place the responsibility for this depression and unrest of our country.

I read both of our good county papers, two Birmingham daily papers and Montgomery papers, and hear some of the greatest men of our country speak through the radio, but have never heard anyone tell what is causing the present depression and unrest of our country.

Was Solomon the wisest of all men and did God speak through him and say, "When the righteous are in authority the people rejoice; but when the wicked beareth rule the people mourn."?

What is the condition throughout the world, rejoicing or mourning? I do not have to tell you, because you know.

Did you ever have a lawyer to offer to furnish evidence if they thought your evidence was not sufficient to make the case a success. Did you ever know judges to bring cases in their courts with blank evidence just to get fees, regardless of justice?

If God tells us through His chosen messengers what is causing the present depression why not believe it?

Dear reader, do you think it is right for our rulers to take billions of dollars that have been collected from the farmers and laborers of this country in taxes and revenue, and lend it to foreign countries and when it comes due and should be paid back, our rulers extend the credit until our foreign countries can get able to pay?

But on the other hand our treasurer of our nation says there is a deficit in the nation's treasury of about two billion dollars, and now our Legislators at Washington are working out some plan by which they can collect this two billion dollars deficit out of the already tax ridden people of our country.

The federal banks of our country have closed out thousands of homes this year, and left thousands of people homeless. The tax collectors of our nation have sold thousands of homes because the owners could not pay the taxes.

Other nations can have the use of our money after it is due to be paid. But we people must pay when it is due, or lose our property. At one end of our system we have the Federal Farm Board who is trying to teach us that we are producing too much wheat and cotton; that we should destroy one-third of our cotton in order to boost the price. This same board has millions of bushels of wheat, millions of bales of cotton hoarded away; while millions of poor little children are going hungry and scant of clothing. Again we have another farm organization at the other end who is supposed to teach us how to produce abundantly. Remember: we farmers and laborers have to pay these two organizations millions of dollars for their valuable service. Remember: When the Wicked beareth rule the people Mourn.

Lord, send us a Moses; that we may have a righteous rule.

Respectfully,
A. A. JACKSON.

REYNOLDS APPEALS TO PEOPLE OF CHILTON CO.

Clanton, Ala., Dec. 21, 1931.
Editor, Chilton County News:

For one whole year we have been fighting, grabbing, struggling, scolding, working until our brain is like a whirlwind and we are all discouraged on account of this awful depression, but we must not forget our duty to the suffering around us.

Fellow citizens here in Clanton and surrounding country we have a condition that is to my mind awful. We have many people that will suffer for the want of food unless there is immediate relief. May I ask you who will bring this relief? I can see no chance of help except from we people that have a little above a living. Will we help? Or will we content ourselves to sit down by a warm fire at night, plenty to eat and many women and children near our home that does not even have a fire and have to go to bed hungry.

Can we enjoy Christmas as we should unless we do our duty in this matter? I know some that are suffering that have not done all they could to help themselves, but if some men have been trifling and have failed to provide for their wives and children, what about the innocent women and children that are suffering?

Now we cannot escape our duty and Clanton has always been equal to the occasion in the past and I believe we will do our duty this time.

We need funds to help a few distressed people and I am ready and willing to do my part to help relieve the distress and suffering around us.

Christmas is a time when we all forget our troubles, competitors look at each other and smile with the best of wishes, we are happy because we are thinking of making others happy.

I wish you people who are able to help could be in my office a few days and hear the appeals made to me for help. Can you imagine a mother of a half-dozen children begging for help saying that they are hungry and have nothing to eat in their homes. You people know that I have no funds to help anyone with. My income has been reduced just like the rest of yours have, but a little from all of us will not hurt and will make a merry Christmas for many that are in distress.

There are many projects we might start to give employment to some that are out of work. We might put up a wood yard and give the unemployed a job cutting wood and get our people here in Clanton to burn wood instead of coal and keep this money at home.

The County Commissioners are doing all they can to help the unemployed, but there are some that are suffering that work will not help, such as women and children and they need immediate help.

With best wishes for a merry Christmas and a happy New Year for everybody, I am,

Yours truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

Jemison, Ala., Dec. 17, 1931.
Editor, Chilton County News:

I have been thinking some more about taxes. A lot of people think our chief tax burden is levied by the state. This is not true. If you own $1000 worth of property the state collects $6.50 and the county about $13.50, making your total taxes about $20. Thus, you see that your county taxes are over twice as much as your state taxes. Every time your state tax "Raiser" has seen fit to advance your property valuation your patriotic county officials have quietly allowed your county taxes to advance proportionately. Have you heard a single word of protest from one of them? You elected them as your champion, how many of them have measured up to the standard?

Charity begins at home. Let us see if we have any room for charity in Chilton County.

Can you see any sign of economy or care exercised in the spending of public funds? For instance, your County Supt. of Education and County Board will do away with the school you have always had that paid a teacher $75 per month and employ a bus driver at $100 or more per month, furnish him a $350 truck body, probably add another assistant to the school to which your children are transferred, and also might add another clerk in the office of the Supt. with a longer term and higher pay than your teacher ever received, at the same time telling you that the changes give better educational advantages and are economical. All of you that believe you get better results out of your schools now than you did ten years ago stand on your heads. Now, all that believe that the schools are managed with any degree of economy just remain standing on your heads till counted, please.

In regard to teachers' salaries I will say that I do not think they are overpaid. But since bus driving has become such a valuable political asset to the party in power, teachers' salaries are not such a big item after all. It would not surprise me any day for teachers to get a reduction in salary so there would be a bigger slice to divided among the transportation boys. I have been informed by some parents that their children get a large part of their education these days on the busses anyway. We will soon have all the rural schools discontinued then we can have more busses, and since there will be only a very few schools to look after, just another assistant in the county superintendent's office. Thanks.

When your next county treasurer's report comes out get a copy of it and study it over carefully. See for yourself how much of your funds go to each of your County Commissioners in salary and expenses. See how much it costs the county to operate its road machinery and keeping up the roads. Take a day off sometime when the machines are in your community and if you have a powerful magnifying glass you may be able to see the results you get out of the enormous expense of operating this machinery. Now, I know that someone will be ready to say that the men who operate these machines get very little pay. That is probably true. But is it economy to pay even a dime for a nickel's worth of anything? Besides that the pay of the men is not all there is to the operation of these machines. One of you farmers that helps pay this money go and get a job hauling gravel on the roads. You furnish yourself, your wagon, your team and any other necessary tools. You have to work 10 hours for the very liberal sum of $2.50, which is only a few cents more than one man that furnishes nothing but himself gets working on a machine. Don't forget that you work 10 hours. How long do the machines actually work?

You watch now for some fellow to hop up and say, "This is political propaganda." Well, in a way it is and in a way it is not. I am interested in seeing the powers that be have some sympathy for the tax-ridden public. By practicing economy taxes can be reduced. Not this year of course, but in the near future. This tax reduction has got to come. Some say it can't be done. Certainly not as long as we spend like we did when cotton was 20c and other things in proportion. But it can be accomplished if we cut out the thousand and one useless things that we dish out our tax money for and some hunting and fishing officials will spent part of their valuable time trying to figure out a way to do it. If this is propaganda make the most of it. Come on. The hardest hit dog will holler the loudest. Maybe in the uproar the common people will be forgotten and they will escape the tax "Raiser" at least one year.

Don't misunderstand me. I am not opposed to a sensible consolidation of schools. But putting a school on a railroad or in a town does not necessarily guarantee its usefulness. Due care should be exercised as to location and cost of operation.

The roads could hardly be kept up without machinery, but the utmost care should be exercised as to the number used and to the benefit derived from the amount invested and expended in their operation.

Now, some fellow is ready to say, "Who are you to give so much advice to our wise officials."

I am glad to say that I was born in the hills of Chilton County. That as a child I knew how it felt to have biscuits on Sunday morning only. I know how to work and sympathize with any man that makes his living that way. I can "Chaw rosin" and have studied many a night lying flat on my belly before a pine knot fire. I roll my own cigarettes, but I do not roll my socks like some of our modern officials.

Respectfully,
HOWARD ROPER.

Concord-Billingsley

On account of the rain we were deprived of having any services Sunday morning, but we had real good services Sunday night.

The Christian Endeavor program was very good and our new pastor, Rev. G. W. Stewart, delivered a wonderful message after the program. He brought clear to our minds some of the things that God has promised to those who place their trust in Him.

It is approaching the New Year, may we start out with new determination to do more. May the church cooperate together and also with the pastor and we can accomplish something really worthwhile if we will only do this.

Mr. Crayton Deramus of Maplesville is visiting his uncle, Mr. J. P. Williams and family.

Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Cowart spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Shaw.

Mrs. Emma Williams and daughter, Eula Bell, visited Mr. and Mrs. O. N. Williams Sunday.

Rev. G. W. Stewart, our pastor, has been visiting here during the past week end and has been into several homes while here. We were glad to have him visit us.

Mr. Clarence Williams accompanied Rev. A. S. Bentley to Adams Saturday afternoon where he filled his regular appointment.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Weldon of Shiloh community were visitors here Sunday.

Messrs. Olin and Hudson Williams attended the Surprise Party at the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Limbrick near Pleasant Hill Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Williams spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Little.

Mr. Porter Williams was a visitor at the home of his uncle, Mr. J. P. Williams, Sunday night.

We wish everyone a very merry Christmas and a bright, prosperous and happy New Year.

Those Who Demand a Ride Must Pay the Fare

The honest debt-paying citizens of Alabama are urged to vote for a continuance of the three and a half mill tax authorized by the Constitution of 1901, to provide for the payment of this old debt so that a fund may be created to pay the interest and principal of the new debts of $2,690,000, which have been created since the date of the Constitution of 1901.

As the continuance of the three and a half mill tax must be by an Amendment to the same Constitution that authorized its levy, this could not be done by a vote of the people of Mobile alone, but had to be by a vote of the entire state.

While the funds necessary to pay the interest and principal of the old debt have nearly been accumulated, the people of Mobile (not a carpet-bag government) by their votes have created a new debt for school buildings, additional docks, fire alarm, hospital improvements, Central Fire Station, library and incinerators, amounting in the aggregate to $2,670,000, upon which the annual interest charge is $133,500. The interest and principal of this new debt cannot be paid out of the seven and a half mills authorized by the Constitution of 1901 to pay the expenses of the City government, and there must be some other provision for these funds or a default in their payment is inevitable.

Default means costs, penalties, loss of credit and embarrassment to Mobile, which would injure the credit of other Alabama cities.

INTERESTS NOW OPPOSING THE MOBILE AMENDMENT WERE AMONG THE STRONGEST IN ADVOCATING THE EXPENDITURES FOR PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS WHICH MADE THE AMENDMENT NECESSARY.

Vote for the Mobile Amendment January 5, and permit Mobile to continue to be an honest debt-paying city

How to train BABY'S BOWELS

Babies, bottle-fed or breast-fed, with any tendency to be constipated, would thrive if they received daily, half a teaspoonful of this old family doctor's prescription for the bowels.

That is one sure way to train tiny bowels to healthy regularity. To avoid the fretfulness, vomiting, crying, failure to gain, and other ills of constipated babies.

Dr. Caldwells' Syrup Pepsin is good for any baby. For this, you have the word of a famous doctor. Forty-seven years of practice taught him just what babies need to keep their little bowels active, regular; keep little bodies plump and healthy. For Dr. Caldwell specialized in the treatment of women and little ones. He attended over 3500 births without loss of one mother or baby.

Can you depend upon what they tell you? Very often an examination will reveal defects which, if treated in time, will eliminate the possibility of future serious eye trouble. Our School Teachers Point The Way

If any man, or group of men, was able to formulate a successful method of destroying the word, "Depression," and all that it signifies, fame and fortune would be the spontaneous reward. This, however, is highly improbable. The next best thing, since it is likely to take time to alter the conditions, is to manage to go through with our task in spite of conditions. We may not be able to calm the troubled waters, but there are courageous captains who will carry their cargoes safely to port, even though the seas do run high and rough.

That is what Chilton County's school teachers proposed to do when a few days ago they pledged to carry out the regular term in spite of the short funds. This didn't mean that these school teachers had money to carry on, or that in any financial sense they could afford to do it. Much could be said of the sacrifices they will have to make. But that is not the purpose of this editorial. They are the rank and file of our school system. Together they made what effort they could to get their just pay—and when this failed—they said simply, by their action, "We will go on, anyway." It was a noble action, and further it was good business, for themselves, and for this county.

The school teachers are not alone in having trouble collecting money for services rendered. Business men, professional men, farmers, and everybody, to a greater or less degree, face short funds at the end of the month. The school teachers have bet on the future. They believe that they will be able to get their pay later on. The rest of us would do well to think of that, too. They have not added to the ranks of the unemployed, and in this they have performed a patriotic duty, and they have proven themselves good business men and women—popular belief to the contrary.

We feel like it would be worth our while to consider what the results would be if all of us, when faced by bad business should say, like our teachers, "We will go on—anyway." What effect would this have on our unemployment situation, the most serious thing facing America today? What would be the result if employer and employee, doctor, lawyer, and manufacturer, all together should say and then act like this: "We may as well admit it, we're up against something we can't completely overcome just now, but we'll bet on the future—and go on anyway." That's what Chilton's school teachers have said and they have thus proven themselves worthy leaders—not only of the boys and girls whom they instruct, but also to the men and women in other walks of life.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

"Nothing hurts like the Truth"

Christmas Eve. Whether to go back and review past years of occurences I believe would no doubt be of interest to the readers of this column or whether to dwell on the present Christmas Day, is the question in my mind, as yet unsettled.

I have stood at the various places of business in Clanton, especially the several days before Christmas and during the time when toys and whatnots are displayed to make the people want them. I have seen mothers, stooped with work and worry and want, bring their children in to town to see the many things to be seen at Christmas. I have watched the eyes and mouths of those hungry little youngsters as they would try to take in all they could with their eyes. Wishing they could get something like that.

It is trying to my heart to watch this going on. How I wish that I were financially able to play Santa Claus to all the poor little children in this county. How I would like to give the youngsters just what they would ask for while they are in Clanton, looking in the windows and wishing and wanting.

That is one reason why I am not making any great to-do during the Christmas holidays. The other reason is because I have to work and have no money to spend. Hang the first reason.

I will be willing to wager that there are at least fifteen families in Clanton, heads of which, have been belliaching about hard times, who will not be in want of anything to make their Christmas complete, or more than that. I'll be willing to wager that the children of those families will get just as much if not more, as they ever did on Christmas morning.

That brings to mind that saying: "When the One Great Scorer Comes to Write Against Your Name; He Writes Not Whether You Won or Lost, But How You Played the Game."

This column has been called, good. interesting, amusing, silly, foolish, and other names. I can't figure out whether to brag about that or not. It has been copied, recopied, quoted, requoted, imitated, and reproduced. It is the forerunner of other newspaper columns, and is several years old. I'm not proud of it. I don't like to write it each week. I make folks angry sometimes with things I say. I make folks laugh, and I make them wonder. I can create an argument with no trouble at all, and possibly could start a war, or end one. I can make folks feel good or make them feel bad. So you see what a responsibility rest on me writing this column each week.

When next week's issue of C. G. N. is out, it will mark the completion of five years of service under the present management of the paper. Already this column has the reputation of being full of ego, and should I go on right now and tell of the things accomplished in the past five years by this newspaper as related by the ed, you would give this column more of a rep as stated.

Tomorrow is Christmas Day. Tonight is the time when Santa is supposed to come around to see good little girls and boys. I've been a good boy, and maybe he will come around to see me—if I'm at home. As this column goes to the Linotype operator this week, I'm throwing off all old grudges against people, freeing myself of such responsibilities. They will all be my friends, so far as I'm concerned. This is the time when everybody should do the same thing.

As I reflect back over the past years, I wish I could go to those people who have stood by me and shake their hands. To you all I say sincerely—I wish you a very Merry Christmas. Let us look forward to the opportunities of the coming year.

Declaration Of The Chilton County Negro Farmers Conference

In sending forth its annual message the Negro Farmers find in a review of the past year and in its outlook for the year just ahead much that is encouraging and full of promise.

It was shown from the exhibits on last Wednesday that the farmers have responded to the appeal to raise more food than was necessary for the family and feed for live stock. However, the conditions of farm life are very far from satisfactory, and there should be no let-up until we have secured a more permanent prosperity and a wider distribution to the farmer and his family of the good things of life.

With this in mind the Conference endorsed the following as a means of meeting the demands of the depression in 1932:

I. Soil Improvement.
  a. Plant more Autsrian peas & vetch.
  b. Terrace land properly.
  c. Plant summer legumes.
  d. Better handling and saving of barnyard manure.
II. Orchard and Gardening.
  a. Start orchards.
  b. Keep year round gardens.
  c. Prune and spray properly.
III. Live Stock.
  a. Two dairy cows per family.
  b. Twenty-five hens per family.
  c. Two brood sows per family.

We wish to congratulate all who won prizes on exhibits this year, and to thank those merchants and individuals for their liberal contributions: A & P Tea Company, Clanton Motors, Clanton Cash Store. The Leader, Robinson Dept. Store, Peoples Savings Bank, The Fair, Mullins & Moore, Culver & Jones, Farmers Hardware Co, Upchurch Drug Co., Alred Drug Co., Calloway Drug Co., Elmore's Store, Chicago Sales Co., Holcombe & Massey Hdwe. A History Of Columbus C. Billingsley

The following history of Bro. Billingsley was given to Ethan B. Popwell, Thorsby, Ala., about thirty years ago:

"I write out a short history of my life for the benefit of my brethren and friends. I was born in Slafford County, Virginia, December 25th, 1816. I came to Autauga County in August, 1832. I professed religion and joined the church and served as class leader and local preacher for 21 years, when I became convinced that the faith and practice of the church was not sound and I quit them and united with the Missionary Baptist church, being convinced that if they are not the church of Jesus Christ that He has no churches on earth. Here I stand and challenge a verification of the above.

"I trust that in the Eternal purposes of His grace in Christ Jesus to meet my brethren and friends in Glory.

"When I came to Autauga County in August, 1832 there was not a single Missionary Baptist Church to be found. I later witnessed the separation at old Cedron. The Hard Shells held the church and property and excluded the Missionaries. I also witnessed the separation at Old Kingston. The Missionaries held the church and property and excluded the Hard Shells.

"The Town of Montgomery did not have framed houses in it. The Sam Dale was running the river from Montgomery to Mobile.

"Presented to Ethan B. Popwell and his father, and their wives and children."

Democratic Harmony In Ranks Is Shown

which would have deprived the rank and file of the party of opportunity to express directly their choice for presidential nominee.

The unanimous position of the committee on this and other subjects brought before it is inspiring evidence of the party's unity of purpose. It indicates the sentiment for harmony which permeates the party in the state and it shows a determination to forget minor differences of opinion in face of the greater responsibility resting upon members of the party in Alabama to join with the democrats of others states in a united effort to rescue the nation from republican misrule next year and restore it to the hands of the people.

Threshed Out in Caucus

Whatever minor differences of opinion there may have been--among individual members of the committee were threshed out in caucus prior to the meeting itself and in its formal acts voters had the satisfaction of seeing a committee unanimous and unified in its plans for carrying on the party's battles next year. Even in caucus the differences seem not to have been serious. Most of the members had come fresh from their home communities with assurance that the genuine democratic way is to let the people express themselves, and in this frame of mind the desultory suggestions that the committee itself or a special convention should choose delegates met short shrift.

Furthermore, the committee confined itself strictly to the task in hand. It made no attempt even through resolution or otherwise to commit the party on any statement of policy. It even felt that it was not the committee's province to take any position on Muscle Shoals-settlement, recognizing that this and other subjects of national consequence should be defined and treated only by a national convention of democrats duly elected and authorized to speak for the party.

The committee by its adherence to party fundamentals and its unity of action has set a stirring example to all democrats of the state and the opportunity presented to party members for full, fair and free expression will go far toward bringing about a genuine appraisal of party sentiment and harmonious and concerted program when the voters shall have made their choice at the polls next summer.

Convention Delegation

Alabama will be entitled to twenty-four votes in the national democratic convention next year. For these places the democrats of the state will select forty-eight delegates, each of whom will have half a vote. The primary election will be held on May 3. A law of the last legislature provides that primary nominees must receive a majority of the votes cast. The committee accordingly provided for a second or run-off primary June 14 in which the leaders and runners-up in the first primary must again go before the voters in the case of those who lack a majority in the first primary. Eight of Alabama's delegates will be chosen from the state at large and four will be chosen from each of the congressional districts as at present constituted.

Letters To The Editor

Editor of Chilton County News:

Nehemiah read from morning until mid-day; Neh. 8:3. Isaiah went naked and barefoot 3 years for a sign; Isa. 20:2-3, and in first chap. he says; Cease to do evil, learn to do well, seek judgement, relieve the oppressed, come now and let us reason together, sayeth the Lord.

Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow, and they that forsake the Lord shall be consumed; verses 16, 17 and 28.

Isa. 2:2 says; And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exhalted above the hills, and all nations shall flow unto it. The Lord alone shall be exhalted in that day; verses 11.

Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her iniquity is pardoned for she hath received of the Lords hand double for all her sins; Isa. 40:2. Read Jer. 16:18.

Turn you to the stronghold ye prisoners of hope, even today do I declare that I will render double unto thee; Zec. 9:12. We see that there is a double for Israel. Let the Bible ans. the following questions; Why was it necessary for a double? When did it begin? How long a time was it to last? How many years after Jacob's death to the time that Jesus rode into Jerusalem and offered to be their King?

When the proper calculation is made to we find it to be 1845 years. Will God favor return to Israel 3690 years after Jacobs death? What is the meaning; I will punish you seven times more for your sins and even I will chastise you seven times for your sins; Lev. 26:18-28. In verse 33 we see that they were scattered among the Heathern, and the land enjoyed her Sabbaths. As long as it lieth desolate it shall rest; verses 34-35. The period of desolation was 70 years. And the 40th verse says: If they shall confess their iniquity, and the iniquity of their fathers, if then their uncircumcised hearts be humbled and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity, then will I remember my covenant with Jacob and also my covenant with Isaac and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember, and I will remember the land; verses 40, 41 and 42.

The present condition of the people is only ushering in earth's great jubilee. How glad we should be that the great enslaver, sin; is to be shorn of his power, that the great prison house of death is to be opened and a release presented to each prisoner.

Look what God has promised to do for Isarel; And they shall dwell safely therein and shall build houses and plant vineyards, yea, they shall dwell with confidence when I have executed judgement upon all those that despise those around about them, and they shall know that I am the Lord their God; Ezk. 28:-25-26. This should be glad tidings to all people, not only the living but also to all in their graves.

Before the end of this great jubilee every human being may go entirely free—may get to man's first estate very good receiving back through Christ all that was lost in Adam.

little later, her portable typewriter er hand, she passed that way to a secluded spot in the woods for own work. Bobby, dimpling and hted, sat low behind the wheel. r, looking just a bit grim, moved essly from one foot to the other re his canvas. Rowena's eyes ed cloudy flame in blue when she t by.

He t right on kissing me and said over over, 'Darling, you do love me— do love me,' and it wasn't until I nised to marry him that he swam after the canoe and——" he poor fishes lived happy for ever ," said Rowena softly.

ere were five telegrams for Bobby t. Louis and, curiously enough five for Peter also. Rowena, he noticed, had another fat letter addressed in the boyish scrawl, and watching with some curiosity as she read it, he saw that while her brows frowned over it slightly, her eyes smiled to their softest hazel. Immediately she finished reading, she counted the bills in her purse and asked the way to the telegraph office.

"Oh, listen to this!" chortled Bobby ecstatically. "Darlings, he's wild! He'll never forgive me, never. He threatens to send the police after me unless I come straight home. He calls me a little devil in plain English by Western Union."

"Oh, Bobby," begged Rowena, "please spare us until we get a little of the well-known fine, black, sandy loam of the Middle West out of our ears."

When they stepped into the elevator, Bobby stumbling blindly as she continued to devour the passionate phrases with her avidly shining eyes, Peter motioned Rowena back.

"I want to speak to you just a minute—about business—if you'll excuse us, Bobby."

Rowena turned back at once and he handed her the five telegrams without a word. They were all from Messrs. Rack and Ruff, saying Rackruff Motors, Inc., was in a state of persistent persecution at the hands of a red-haired chemical engineer who had threatened to sue the company, to burn down the factory, and to beat up every member of the firm.

"What the deuce do you suppose it's all about?" wondered ePter.

"Oh, it must be Carter," said Rowena brightly. "He's mad at Bobby."

So they went up to have it out with her at once. They told her she must quit tormenting him, and write him all the details of their trip, how she came to be a member of the party in the first place, and to send him a copy of their complete itinerary. Especially she must call him peremptorily off Messrs. Rack and Ruff who were likely to become annoyed at such persecution and cancel the trip.

Bobby finally agreed not to tantalize him further and promised to write him a complete account of the adventure.

There were bound to be ever so many pleasant, cool, shadowy shortcuts between St. Louis and Kansas City.

On the way between St. Louis and Kansas City, Peter asked about shortcuts at no end of filling stations and garages as they went west, but no one seemed very well informed about byroads, and for the most part every one advised against attempting any such thing.

It was well on toward noon when Peter found a man in a garage who thought there really was a short-cut just as Peter wanted. He wasn't altogether sure it was a direct route to Kansas City, but at least it did not lead back toward St. Louis.

They had driven about twenty miles along this rambling lane, which at times seemed to turn uncertainly toward Kansas City and then made a dead run for the Nebraska line, when they saw a stalled car in the road before them. The driver lay stretched out on the bank with his hat over his face.

Peter slowed up.

Rowena leaned forward and rapped sharply on the glass. "Never ask advice of a broken-down driver," she warned him darkly. "If he knew what he was doing, he wouldn't be broken down."

But Peter for once had struck the right party. The man knew every road in the state.

Peter thanked him for his careful directions and returned to the car. He was too much of a gentleman to leer triumphantly back at Rowena under the awning umbrella in the rumble seat. He just got in behind the wheel and started the motor.

He had driven fully twenty miles over the worst possible sort of country road when he found that a bridge was out, that there was no detour, and the only possible way to go on in the direction of Kansas City was to go back to the main road and start over. Very meekly he turned around to pay homage to her better judgment,, but stopped short staring open-mouthed. Bobby, who always looked where others did, turned too and her amazement surpassed his own.

The rumble seat was empty. Rowena was not there.

Peter slowly returned over the roads to where the self-styled expert had given him his directions.

Twenty miles!

Bobby closed her eyes. Peter hoped she was praying. He would have prayed himself except that the hard driving over the bad road required his complete attention. But he did keep breathing over and over in his heart the one word, "God! God God!" and trusted the Infinite would understand it for appeal.

Instinctively his foot lifted from the accelerator and at a noiseless crawl the car rolled up to the shadowy bank under the willow tree where the stranger with the stalled motor had mapped out the futile short-cut.

"Oh!" whispered Bobby weakly. "Look—look! Rowena!"

Rowena indeed, lying motionless beside the road where the afternoon sun slanted behind the trees to throw protecting shadows over her slender figure. Peter was out of the car long before it had come to a stop and was up the bank and kneeling beside her. He lifted one limp slim hand. It was stained red.

"Rowena!" he whispered.

Rowena opened her eyes. "Oh, hello," she said cheerfully. "Gosh, you were a long time coming back."

"Are—are you—hurt?" stammered Peter.

"Hurt? Why, no! What do you mean, hurt?" She licked a bit of red raspberry juice from her finger as she spoke.

"D-did you fall out, darling?" asked Bobby in fatuously affectionate tones.

"Fall out?" repeated Rowena. "Certainly not." She stood up, lifted her arms, stretching her slender figure comfortably to it utmost height. "Had a grand nap," she said. "And wrote out just what I think of Missouri. Poor dears, you must be dreadfully hot and tired. Come and sit down—a nature's feast to feed you. Berries and cold spring water. I knew you would be famished so I picked heaps."

"You darling," said Bobby, and greedily fell to. "But will you please tell us," she mumbled, with a full mouth, for she was very hugry, "how you fell—how you got—out of the rumble seat?"

"I climbed out," said Rowena cheerfully. "It's the only way you can get out of a rumble seat."

"But when——"

"But how——"

"When Peter and the broken-down gent were dusting off Missouri in the middle of the road I noticed the wild berries up on the bank among the rocks. I must have got myself out of sight of the car without knowing it, for the first thing I knew, I heard the usual racing of the engine with which dear Peter gets under way, so I ran down and there you were tearing off among the ruts in a cloud of metaphorical glory. So I picked some more berries, and the broken-down gent and I shot craps until the man from the garage came and towed him in. He invited me to go with them, but I knew you would be back for me when you got around to it."

"There was a bridge out on the short-cut," explained Peter quickly.

"I know. The broken-down gent remembered it about ten minutes after you had gone. But of course it was too late then."

"You're very game about it, Rowena. Very sporting. I wouldn't blame you if you didn't speak to me again from here to the coast."

"Oh, nonsense!" said Rowena pleasantly. "This was just an accident. Accidents never make me mad. It's just," she added meaningly, "just—certain—people.

In Kansas City, Bobby found thirty-one telegrams from Carter, each increasingly immoderate in its commands for her to give over this outrageous conduct and return home at once.

Rowena had the usual fat one addressed in the boyish scrawl, and surely she had read no further than the first paragraph when she began counting out her money. Peter had a comforting telegram from Mr. Rack, with a friendly postscript by Mr. Ruff, advising that the red-haired siege was lifted and that they had been honored with a sort of an apology, but warning them to be careful of their future conduct.

Mr. Rack also said they were extremely pleased with the character of the work that had been turned out, and enclosed check for next week's expenses. Peter was extremely grateful for that check, for Bobby had spent the last cent of her week's allowance by Wednesday, after which time he and Rowena had been obliged to carry her between them.

"Chaperons come high, don't they?" grumbled Rowena, as she counted out nickels and dimes to make up her portions of Bobby's last manicure.

It was a genuine hardship to them to be obliged to contribute so extensively to the maintenance of luxury-loving Bobby. On the other hand, her presence was so essential to the all-important tour that they were in no position to quarrel very seriously even with her extravagances.

"For my part, I'd rather pay her bills than read Carter's telegrams," said Peter moodily.

"I wouldn't," disagreed Rowena promptly. "I've learned to read with one eye and listen with one ear, and that way I get through with only half the mental strain."

"Yes, but you've got a rumble to retire to."

"So I have. But I have to sleep with her."

One thing was certain. Her presence was essential, and Carter and his telegrams and her extravagances were alike to be endured.

At Topeka she was startled to find but one telegram awaiting her—a ten-word, straight day message.

"Are you taking first train home or are you not?"

It was not even signed.

Bobby's fright was so genuine, her disappointment so real, that Rowena and Peter tried to console her.

Peter took them out to a movie, and Rowena—with her own money—bought her a cunning little Kansas souvenir, a flask carved out of a corn-cob—and she seemed slightly more resigned.

She was very quiet as they crossed Kansas, and when they complained of the notoriously hot winds, she smiled patiently and said she didn't mind. She ate very little, and had fifteen cents of her allowance left at the end of the week.

When they reached Denver they hurried at once, as they always did, to get their mail, and there was nothing at all for Bobby, not a letter, not a telegram, not so much as a souvenir postcard. She said nothing but turned pale and a little sad smile froze the dimples in the soft face.

When Rowena went down to dinner she made excuses not to go—said she was very tired, said she wanted a hot bath and a good sleep, said she would just read a magazine she had picked out at the news-stand.

They went up to the room immediately after dinner with all good intentions, and Rowena knocked. When there was no answer she opened the door and they went in. The room had a deserted appearance. Bobby's handsome articles of toilet were gone from the dressing table. Her beautiful dressing-gown was gone from the foot of the bed, her satin mules from beneath it. Her imported traveling bag no longer stood beside Rowena's shabby suitcase on the baggage rack.

Peter and Rowena looked at each other in wide-eyed consternation.

There was a note, written on hotel paper in Bobby's round childish hand. It was pinned to Rowena's pillow.

"Darlings, I'm going home. I've got to. If I don't, I'll never get him back. I'll send Peter the money I borrowed as soon as I get my allowance. I'm going on the seven o'clock train and I have already wired him to meet me. You're both just sweet and I love you. But I do wish you didn't quarrel so. I'm glad Carter and I get along better."

"And that," said Rowena flatly, "is that."

"It's all of that," added Peter gloomily.

"Nothing," declared Rowena drearily, "could be more irretrievably fatal than this."

"It was great sport while it lasted," said Peter. "You have been pretty game all the way through Rowena."

"It was corking good business, too," said Rowena. "And taking it all in all, you are not half bad to breeze around with, Peter."

"Well, it's all over now," said Peter.

"You don't suppose we could pick one up here, do you?—By advertising. The way we got Bobby in the first place."

But they both knew it was pretty hopeless.

They said good night with something vaguely suggestive of affestionate regard, for this killing. kindred disappointment gave them a cordial meeting-ground for almost the first time.

Rowena sat alone at her window, little and high up, for she had frugally changed from a double to a single room immediately after the desertion of Bobby.

She was not one to give up without a struggle—nor to give up at all, for that matter.

It was nearly midnight when she shook off her final hesitation, with a mind made up. An idea had come to her, terrifying and tremendous, hours before. She had toyed with it, weighed it in the balance and, finding it wanting, pushed it resolutely away; but had permitted it to work its way back, insidiously sure. At twelve o'clock she called Peter on the telephone and that was an end of her hesitation.

"Listen, Peter. You meet me downstairs in the lobby, right away, will you? I have an idea."

"But I'm in bed!"

CHEVROLET SALES ON NEW CAR INCREASE

Polk Bros. Share Increase With Other Dealers Over The Entire Country

That national sales of new 1932 Chevrolets during their initial week-end showing, exceeded last year's figures is indicated by hundreds of wires received by H. J. Klingler, vice-president and general sales manager, from dealers reporting on the reception of the new cars in their localities.

Polk Brothers Motor Co., Inc., local Chevrolet dealers, have been sharing honors in this increase in sales of the new 1932 Chevrolet. The show rooms at Polk Brothers are displaying the new Chevrolet and state they are well pleased with the fine reception given the car.

Attendance in all parts of the country exceeded that at any previous national showing of new Chevrolet models, and the general tenor of the messages was that dealers expect better business next year than in 1931, Mr. Klingler stated.

While no official tabulation of sales to date will be completed before the latter part of the month, the voluntary reports of dealers and zone officials show that in a great majority of cities and districts orders on hand are well beyond the corresponding period last year, and that in a number of instances dealers made deliveries of display models off their sales floors over Saturday and Sunday.

Indicative of the general interest engendered by the modren, low-priced car were the reports of a number of dealers, who commented on the many well-to-do people who viisted their displays.

A typical commentary on the improvements in the new line came from Chattanooga, Tenn., where the dealer wired: "Please convey to President W. S. Knudsen my appreciation for his fulfillment of his personal promise to give us an automobile with ample power to negotiate Lookout Mountain with ease."

Typical of many messages was one from Mason City, Iowa: "Public more enthused over 1932 models than they were in 1929 when the first Chevrolet six came out." One dealer in Washington, D. C., wired: "Largest Saturday crowd in our ten years with Chevrolet. Twenty-two orders on hand and present indications point to our greatest year."

MT. PLEASANT WINS OVER CHILTON HIGH & CONCORD JR.

In a somewhat hard-fought game last Friday afternoon, the Mt. Pleasant Jr. High School lads swept the Chilton County High School players down to a 22 to 15 defeat, and then to add another feather to their cap, they played the third quarter of the game between Mt. Pleasant and Concord, piling up a large score, which helped the second team trim the Concord players 19 to 8.

In the game against Clanton both teams played hard, trying to get the lead on the other, but the home team stacked up a 5 point lead which they never relinquished during the game except once. when at the beginning of the third quarter with Mt. Pleasant leading 16 to 11, James Tiffin made a nice looping shot from the field, to tighten the score; but Curtis Traywick came right back and blasted their hopes with two nice spot-shots. This little player led the home team in offensive play. He totaled 16 points for the game, while his running team-mate, Burnett, registered the other 6 markers by three goals from the field.

Theo Littlejohn, a former player on the Mt. Pleasant team, was the high scorer for Clanton, 5 points being his allotment, but he played a clever game in dribbling and pass-owrk. His mates, J. Tiffin, and Powell, came next with 4 points each. The Clanton players are fresh from the football field, but they showed skill in handling the basketball and also in playing, as only two personal fouls were chalked against them while the Mt. Pleasant lads were charged with eight.

The Concord game was more interesting than the score indicates, for the visiting team held the second-team players of Mt. Pleasant to a low score, but were unable to cope with the regular team, who played part of the third quarter, running up a one-sided score, which soon grows uninteresting, but the second team went back in and played the last ten minutes of game, allowing the Concord players net their 8 points.

JUDGE SMOOT DI-ED MONDAY IN MONTGOMERY

Held Court In This County, Elmore And Autauga For Several Years

Judge George Fitzgerald Smoot, 47, died at 5 o'clock Monday morning at a Montgomery hospital following an illness of about one week. He was brought to the hospital on Christmas Eve. Judge Smoot was well known among the judiciary of Alabama and was recognized as one of the state's ablest circuit judges.

Judge Smoot, a graduate of the University of Alabama, had spent his entire life in Wetumpka. He practiced law there several years before his election in 1922 as judge of the 19th judicial circuit composed of Elmore, Chilton and Autauga counties.

Judge Smoot had enjoyed excellent health until a few months ago. He was one of the best amateur tennis players in Alabama and had participated in several tournaments in Montgomery. At Birmingham this year he won the singles championship of Alabama. Judge Smoot also was an ardent football fan and a staunch supporter of athletics at the secondary agricultural school at Wetumpka.

The jurist had presided over some of the state's most noted murder cases. The bar recognized him as a fair, able and fearless judge. Although not gifted in oratory, Judge Smoot's charges to a jury were clear-cut. He was a lifelong democrat.

The deceased was a member of the Baptist church, a Mason and Knights of Pythias. He always took an active interest in civic and educational affairs of his town and county. Judge Smoot married Miss Ethel Fuller, daughter of W. C. Fuller, 500 Felder avenue, Montgomery. Surviving are the widow, one son, George, Jr., two daughters, Ethel and Cora Reed, all of Wetumpka; two sisters, Mrs. J. T. Edwards, Montgomery, and Mrs. Sam R. Law, Equality, and one brother, Richard E. Smoot, Birmingham. W. E. Lacy, Wetumpka merchant, is an uncle.

The body remained at Leak's chapel in Montgomery until Tuesday morning when it was carried to Wetumpka. Funeral services were held there at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning from the Baptist church. Burial was in the Wetumpka cemetery.

Among those from Clanton who attended the funeral of Judge Smoot Tuesday morning were Sheriff and Mrs. W. H. Gillespie, Miss Madelyn Orr, Hon. J. B. Atkinson, Hon. and Mrs. L. F. Gerald, and daughter, Celia, T. W. Bryan, Dr. P. T. Hinkle, Tom Littlejohn, W. D. Spigener, H. T. Pipes, Grady Reynolds, Omar Reynolds, Claudie Pipes, M. A. Gore, Eric Hart, G. C. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. J. Z. Mims.

BIG PICTURE IS COMING TO CLANTON SOON

The Wadesonian Theatre, recognized by movie fans in this city as the home of the highest type of talking picture productions, announces that on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, January 5, 6, and 7, they have contracted to present for the very first time on any screen in this city, the all-talking version of the tremendously successful stage play, "Her Unborn Child."

Once in a blue moon there comes a picture that fires the imagination and touches the heart of the amusement-going public; such a picture was "The Birth of a Nation;" so were "Over the Hill" and "The Covered Wagon." Since the talking picture captured the public interest there has been no audible motion picture produced that aroused the tremendous audience response and enthusiasm of the epic film efforts just mentioned.

Not until the talking picture version of "Her Unborn Child" flashed across the screens of this country, electrifying movie audiences with its poignantly human dialogue and its smashing dramatic situations, its tremendously moving story—a page brimming with humor, pathos and realism, torn from the daily

Did You Ever Stop To Think?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

MARVIN E. HOLDERNESS, VICE PRESIDENT OF THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF ST. LOUIS, SAYS:

THAT whistling is almost a lost art. When you and I were kids everybody whistled. 'Whistlers were poor, good, better and best, but it was a useful art and everybody practiced it, regardless of age, sex, color or locality. There was the shrill whistle used for signal or call purposes; the tuneful whistle that carried perfectly the notes of popular melodies; the short or long exclamatory whistle, denoting pleasure, disappointment, fear, surprise, a note for every sudden change in the gamut of human feeling. Josh Billings once said he could always go down into the dark cellar much more courageously if he whistled his way. We whistled in the sunshine and we whistled in the dark. Jimmy Jones, as the champion whistler of Dallas County back in the '90's, was just as famous as Dick Daily is today, even if Dick is captain and quarterback on the Fordyce High, Champions of the State.

A college professor in recent months wrote a derogatory and decrying editorial on the practice of whistling, but it is doubtful whether anybody took seriously his outburst against the simple and manly art. Surely no red-blooded American would ever concede that whistling voices low mentality or evidences an admission of defeat. We shall have to look further for the decline of the practice. Have the radio and the professional entertainers made us ashamed to "pucker?" Or, are we so materialistic that we are getting far away from nature's simple, joyful and profitable usages?

This is just one study on the subject of living happy lives. The sooner we cease to strive for the artificial, the sooner shall we be happy. Let us be our real selves over again, whistling, singing and dancing and leading the simple life. It isn't necessary for all of us to get rich, and we don't have to keep up with the Joneses. Back yonder some of us didn't see any money but about once a year, and not very much then, but we had three square meals a day, and a warm place to sleep. Too many people expect too much nowadays, and don't realize that they could be happy with much less.

LET US HARK BACK TO THE GOOD OLD WHISTLING DAYS.

Dief's Cafe Opened To Public Recently

A look into the recently opened Dief's Cafe will show one that it is under efficient management, and a meal enjoyed there will be convincing that this management is wise in its selection of cooks. Dief's Cafe, winning popularity as fast as Dief's Service Station did, opened to the public last week. It is located across the street from the service station bearing the same name, and is being operated by L. E. Diefenderfer, of Clanton.

The opening of this cafe under its present management will no doubt bring about a different slant on the cafe business in Clanton. Mr. Diefenderfer invites the public to visit Dief's Cafe, located on the highway.

Chilton County Boy Receives High Honor In Agricultural Work In Future Farmers

The degree of American Farmer, the highest degree possible to be awarded a young man in the Future Farmers of America organization, was bestowed on Oliver Manning, of Chilton County, at the recent meeting of the National Congress of Future Farmers in Kansas City, Mo.

MORAL ECHOES

It seems to be human for us to become anxious about the end of things. When the day is about over we become panic-stricken because we have done so little. The same feeling takes possession of us when the week is about over, and when a year is drawing to a close. We are going to become very anxious as we draw to the close of our lives, or as we come to the close of the world. We have too much anxiety about the end of things, and too little about the beginning. 1931 is a record of the past, December is about gone. 1932 is here and January is coming on. We must take our eyes off of the past, and we must now look with anxious hearts into the coming year. If you would make the coming year one that is crowded full of good things, you must become anxious about the beginning of each day, and see to it that something worthwhile is crowded into every day. If you will be anxious about the beginning, you will be happy over the closing.

I took my place at the wheel of my car, and placing my foot on the self-starter, I gave it a hard push. There was a buzzing sound, but no machinery turned. This was done many times and the results were the same. My battery had run down. There was not sufficient power in the batteries to turn the fly wheel. I had to call for the battery doctor. He had the batteries recharged and then my car was ready to move. The year through which we have just passed has been a trying year. We have had anxious moments and foggy outlooks. The depression has well nigh sapped our vitality and courage, and now we are trying to crank off for a new year. Our battery seems to be dead. It matters not in which direction we look, there is nothing in sight. The machinery refuses to turn. The best thing I know is for every man, woman, boy and girl—to get close to the church and close to the Lord, and have your soul life recharged. Take a new grip on God and you will find that you have a new grip on life. By faith have your soul recharged, and the wheels of the new year will turn.

The construction crew was very busy in throwing a bridge across the Alabama River near Montgomery. One morning the man who operated the machinery of a derrick, arose with a splitting headache. He felt so badly that he thought it impossible for him to report for duty. No, that would not do, for he was the only man on the job who could do his work, and if he failed to report for duty, many other men would be thrown out for the day. There was nothing left for him to do but to go to his task and do it. That is the kind of loyalty that we want in our church life for 1932. You may get up on Sunday morning with a splitting headache, but remember that if you do not fill your place, the work will suffer. There is a task in your church next year that only you can do. If you fail, then you are the cause of failure all up and down the line. When you are absent from church on Sunday your place is vacant. When you are absent from the job of the kingdom, you close down the machinery operated by you.

There are two ladies in Clanton, there may be more, who have been to church every Sunday during the year 1931. They are at Sunday school, they are at preaching, morning and night, they are at prayer meeting, rain or shine. These two women have home duties and they have social and club duties, but they are in church life, not for amusement, but for worship. Church going is not a matter of convenience with them, it is a gracious privilege and a glorious opportunity. As we begin the new year, these two good women should have scores and scores of comrades in their church loyalty. It is not going to kill you if you attend church. You are not going to catch a deadly disease if you worship God in His house. You are not going to lose your social standing by being punctual at church. When you fail to do this, you are the one who is going to be the loser. You catch lots more hurtful things by not going to church than you do when you are a faithful attendant. It is better to be exposed to godliness, than it is to wickedness and carelessness.

A large ocean steamer was resting at the wharf at Millville, Florida. The captain invited me to go through his ship and see his crew in action. We went over the vessel, from its top to its bottom, and everywhere I found the men at work. I inquired of the captain, "Why do you have your crew on such earnest duty?" The captain replied, "I am rounding the vessel, preparing to sail in the morning." We stopped before the pilot's office and he was testing his compass, ascertaining whether the needle was pointing due north. The day before the vessel was to sail, everything had to be in perfect order. There were waves and storms ahead, and the ship must be in perfect order to meet the testing hours. We are on another journey into the unknown sea of life. It will do us good and not harm, to consider our ways, to test our compass and to set things in order for the journey. During the sailing of 1932, many of us will meet with storms and sorrows. It is necessary that we have confidence in the compass that guides us across the sea of life. Look carefully over your motives and ideals, examine closely the compass that is to guide you, and may your sailing be over calm seas, and may you be happy on the journey.

TWO RAILROAD MEN

Back in the early '90's two boys were holding down their first railroad jobs in the west. Paul Shoup was a clerk in a Santa Fe office; Joseph H. Dyer was a section laborer on the Southern Pacific, then assistant general passenger agent and so on. Dyer was promoted to freight conductor, yardmaster and other more responsible offices in turn. Probably neither knew where he was going, but both were on their way.

Finally Paul Shoup became president and Joseph H. Dyer became vice-president of the entire Southern Pacific System. There is a lesson in this little story for any young man who can see it.

THE PENSION ROLL

At the end of October, 1931, there were 449,428 pensioners on the government rolls, a decrease of 717 during the month. How these are distributed by classes is shown by the following:

War of 1812—Widows, 8.

Mexican War—Widows, 521.

Civil War—Soldiers, 36,975; army nurses, 22; widows, 149,830.

Indian Wars—Soldiers, 5,295; widows, 4,375.

War With Spain—Soldiers, 195,666; army nurses, 520; widows, 34,620.

World War—Soldiers, 40; widows, 12.

Regular Army—Soldiers, 17,293; widows, 4,251.

The highest number of pensioners was reached in 1902, when a total of 999,446 veterans and widows were on the rolls.

It will be noted that only 52 persons are drawing pensions on account of the World War. When general pension legislation becomes applicable to these soldiers and their widows, as it doubtless will in time, there is no telling how high the number of pensioners will rise, or how long Uncle Sam will be paying for his European excursion.

Inasmuch as we are still paying pensions on account of the War of 1812, which ended nearly 117 years ago, the last widow pensioner of the World War will no doubt survive until the year 2035 or longer. And none can tell what wars the United States may engage in between now and then.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

In the life-story of any great man, the incident most certain to interest every human being of every age is the romance of his courtship and his marriage. Greatness may remove him from average humanity in every other respect, but in this element of romance he touches the lives of all where all understand him.

This day, January 6, probably old style, marks the 173rd anniversary of the wedding of George and Martha Washington, in so far as historians have been able to fix the date, says the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission. While the records do not state the fact, it is probable that George and Martha had heard much of each other before they met. Washington had already established his fame as a daring soldier by his movements against the French on the Ohio and by his courage at the Battle of Braddock's Field, and the young colonel, so often in Williamsburg, the social as well as political capital of Virginia, must have known of the handsome, socially prominent, and wealthy young Widow Custis.

Their meeting occurred when Washington, then commanding the military defences of the Virginia frontier against the Indians, had hurried down to Williamsburg to urge in person certain needed improvements in his command. At William's Ferry, over the Pamunkey River, tradition has it, Washington paused at the house of Major Chamberlayne, which may have been on May 27, 1758, and was pressed by this friend to stop and partake of hospitality. Washington, on his way to see the Governor on important business, at first declined, but at Major Chamberlayne's insistence agreed to stay to dinner. The argument that turned the decision seems to have been Major Chamberlayne's remark that the charming Mrs. Custis was also a guest at his house.

There is almost a humorous note in this snare which fate seemed to cast about Washington's heart. With him was his faithful servant Bishop, whom General Braddock had turned over to him, and whom Washington instructed to stay by their horses until dinner was over. The old orderly well knew his master's punctuality and took it for granted that the pause at the Chamberlayne home would be a brief one. But dinner passed, the sun sank lower in the west, and still Washington had not emerged. At last, so the story goes, Bishop was ordered to stable the horses for the night. It was only too evi- it was a notable and brilliant affair, with the Governor, the military and civil authorities, and the socially elite in attendance.

George Washington was arrayed as the most brilliant figure in the whole assemblage. Naturally so important a matter as the bride's attire was not to be lost in oblivion, and we know that Martha's wedding gown was "a satin quilt, over which a heavy white silk, inter-woven with threads of silver, was looped back with white satin ribbons, richly brocaded in a leaf pattern. There were close elbow sleeves revealing a puff and frill of lace. Strings of pearls were woven in and out of her powdered hair. Her high-heeled slippers were of white satin, with brilliant buckles."

Martha Washington had been born Martha Dandridge. At the age of seventeen she married Col. Daniel Parke Custis, a wealthy man who died eight years after their marriage, leaving her dent that George Washington had found business that to him was more important at the moment than his errand with the Governor.

On the next day the journey to Williamsburg was resumed, but no sooner was the business with the Governor transacted than Washington hurried away to the "White House" on the Pamunkey where the Widow Custis lived. When he left, on June 5, the deeply smitten young Virginia colonel must have been in high spirits, for he took with him the lady's promise to wed him as soon as his military service on the Ohio was finished.

To this day there is a dispute as to whether the wedding of George and Martha Washington occurred at the bride's home or at St. Peter's Church in Williamsburg, but the rector of St. Peter's, the Reverend Mr. Mossom, is known to have officiated at the ceremony, and the date of the marriage is fixed by Jared Sparks as of January 6, 1759. Wherever the event occurred, two children and the mistress of a large fortune. After her wedding to George Washington, months had still to elapse before the happily wedded pair could settle down at Washington's estate of Mount Vernon. Having been elected to the House of Burgesses, Washington was obliged to attend its sessions, and the couple remained at Williamsburg until May, 1759. Then they went to the beautiful estate on the Potomac, to make it their home for the rest of their lives, and to leave it a shrine forever to millions of Americans who hold in reverent memory every incident in their life together.

Nothing in all history outdoes in beauty Washington's attachment to his wife, as she in turn was his best reliance, a source of encouragement in all his trials, a dignified figure in herself, as firmly planted as her great husband in the affectionate memory of succeeding generations of Americans. So, January 6, will linger in our history as the beginning of one of the stately and lovely romances of all time.

THE SON OF GOD BECOMES MAN

John 1:1-18

Rev. Samuel D. Price. D.D.

Another five-year cycle of study begins with this lesson. During 1932 we have three months with the Life of Christ, based on John's Gospel, six months with Genesis and the Era of Moses, and a closing quarter on "Christian Standards of Life." Especially helpful volumes for the year are "Peloubet's Select Notes," Tarbell's "Teachers Guide," and Snowden's "Sunday School Lessons." Vest pocket compendiums are "Gist of the Lesson," Wells, and "Points for Emphasis," Moore.

You will wish to read the complete record as found in the four gospels. A "Harmony of the Gospels" is especially useful throughout the course. Matthew and Luke give the details that are related to the birth of Jesus in Bethlehem. But John goes still further back in time when he says "In the beginning was the Word." Here is a direct reference to the eternal existence of the Second Person in the Trinity, the Son-Christ (Messiah).

John is then introduced. This is the son of Zacharias and Elisabeth. He is known as John the Baptist and is not to be confused with John the beloved disciple who wrote the Gospel we are now studying. In Luke 1 you will find fascinating details that are related to the birth of this really Old Testament character, who is styled the Forerunner of the Messiah.

Sublime activities are attributed to this Son of God. He had His major part in creation during the long ago. The purpose of His earthly ministry was to provide a way of salvation for sinful man: "But as many as received Him, to them gave He the right to become children of God," John 1:12.

Chairman Fess in his keynote speech at the recent session of the Republican National Committee explained that it was the duty of the organization "to place Mr. Hoover in the minds of the public where his stupendous efforts and brilliant leadership justify." If this is done, said Mr. Fess, "there will be no doubt about the results of the contest next November."

It would seem that the public ought to be fairly well informed about Mr. Hoover's capacity for leadership after having watched his performance as President for nearly three years, during which time he has had a large majority of his own party in both houses of Congress, and therefore had the opportunity to demonstrate to the fullest extent his capacity and that of his party to govern wisely, well and economically. The people's estimate of this performance has been rather strikingly illustrated by the circumstance that in all of the elections since 1928 the verdict has been against the administration and a fair index of this is the evaporation of the Senate majority almost to the vanishing point and the substitution for the Republican majority of 103 in the House of an actual Democratic majority.

It is no light task Mr. Fess sets his colleagues to convince the people of the United States that they are all wrong as to Mr. Hoover's genius and efficiency as the the helmsman of the ship of state.

It is rather noticeable that in explaining that the Republicans are not responsible for the Treasury's greatest peace-time deficit in the country's history, and their admiration for the President's plans for balancing the budget, that they carefully ignore the fact that the Republicans have been in complete control of all the government financing for the past ten years. They talk a lot about the necessity of economy and Mr. Hoover's messages bristle with expostulation against extravagance and vociferate the demand for retrenchment. And yet under this Republican control the expenses of the government have been increased to the extent of about three billion dollars a year.

In the two years of Harding the appropriations were $7,647,000,000. In the two years divided between Harding and Coolidge they mounted $40,000,000 more and Coolidge's next two years set them up another billion. Coolidge's closing years taxed the people an additional $600,000,000, and Hoover's first biennial period lifted them a billion dollars more. So that the government expenses in the fiscal years of 1930-31 amounted to the grand total of $10,249,819,215.

Perhaps it would be fairer to the President to cite the Department of Commerce figures, over which department he held exclusive dominion during all of this period until his advent in the White House, rather than adduce the figures of the administrations of which he was a member. When Mr. Hoover took the Commerce Department, it was running along on an appropriation of approximately $20,000,000 a year. When Mr. Hoover left it the annual cost was approximately $40,000,000 a year, and incidental to this he had had built for its accommodations a $17,500,000 palace, three blocks long, 250 feet longer than the Capitol, and seven stories high. The business world is the best judge of whether it has been served commensurately with the $20,000,000 a year additional expenditure.

The treasury deficit means that the treasury is paying out more than its income. Perhaps the present shortage is not altogether the fault of the lavish expenditures of the last three Republican administrations, but it is certain that it would be of vastly less consequence had there been less talk of economy during these administrations and more of the real thing.

It seems probable under all the circumstances that Chairman Fess's picture of the President, which he says must be put before the country, is less likely to be accepted when the same eminent gentleman's expression a decade ago is recalled, when he said in reference to Mr. Hoover's candidacy that "the Republican party will demand a leader whose Americanism is not in question and whose political views are not a matter of speculation." Perhaps the verdict will be more in accord with that of Senator Fess's fellow Republican chairman, Representative Will Wood of Indiana, who presides over the Republican Congressional Committee, and who, as duly recorded in the Congressional Record of that time, announced that Mr. Hoover "is the most expensive luxury that was ever fastened upon this country."

The untimely death of Judge George F. Smoot of Wetumpka will be widely regretted in Alabama. Newspaper men in particular will remember him for his unfailing courtesies to them in connection with their news-getting problems. He was always disposed to cooperate with them and make their tasks easier. He was a competent and upright jurist.—Montgomery Advertiser.

But, on the other hand, they are wrong. 1932 is going to be a year that will see a lot of new things happening. Then after the election, the completion of the job of straightening things up will be finished by the Democrat in the president's chair up in Washington, and all these unnecessary commissions that have been appointed to find out what's wrong with the country will be eliminated, and that much money put in the treasury each day to do bigger things with, and the newspapers won't be getting so blamed much propaganda about what the government is going to do; or is trying to do and failing, and editor's waste baskets won't be so clogged with reports from those unnecessary commissions appointed in Washington to investigate things. Marriages show a little increase during December this year, in Chilton County, according to the list in this week's News. The ages of those people who purchased the licenses certainly do vary. There was one in there 62 years old, and one 17. Undoubtedly somebody is very optimistic, at least I believe there are 29 couples feeling that way. Was just checking up on some figures the other day and found out that of all the persons who were married in the United States during 1930, exactly one half were women. That included white and negroes too.

Then at the last minute I received several cards from persons I did not send cards to. There ought to be some way of knowing how to tell who's who in a case like that. But after all, that is not the idea of Christmas cards, nor presents. However, I realize that it is customary that when a person receives a card or gift from someone, then get busy and send them something, so it won't look so bad. However, personally, I give because I want to. Not to get a present.

The Government In Business

In view of the fact that the Muscle Shoals plant again is the subject of debate in Washington, with the lines drawn between those who advocate government operation and those in favor of leasing to private interests, with the farmer to have first call on the fertilizer resources of the plant, it is interesting to observe what has happened to a government-operated power project in Georgia.

A couple of years ago Crisp County, Georgia, launched into the power business with a great flourish of trumpets. A fine plant was built at public expense and the public was to reap immense benefits; so much so that it was predicted all Georgia counties soon would be demanding government-owned plants.

But, as frequently happens in such cases, things did not turn out as the prophets of public ownership predicted. Instead, misfortune has attended the enterprise from the first and now the county authorities of Tifton are anxious to get rid of the plant on almost any terms. It is losing money, cannot pay interest on the investment, and has cost the people of Crisp County a tax increase of exactly one hundred per cent.

Before the plant was built, the tax rate in Crisp County was 13 mills. Today it is 26 mills and on top of this the plant that brought about the increase is losing money.

For the government to go in business in competition with its own citizens is contrary to every principle of democracy as it is understood in this country. It is unsound in principle and unsound in practice, and generally results in loss to the people rather than in gain. Governments are inherently extravagant, as shown by the enormous deficits existing on all sides, and ventures into the realm of business spell loss in most cases.—Tuscaloosa New,

THE SCRAP BOOK

DIRGE FOR THE YEAR

By Percy Bysshe Shelley

Orphan hours, the year is dead,
  Come and sigh, come and weep!
Merry hours, smile instead.
  For the year is but asleep.
See, it smiles as it is sleeping,
Mocking your untimely weeping.

As an earthquake rocks a corpse
  In its coffin in the clay,
So white Winter, that rough nurse,
  Rocks the dead-cold year-to-day;
Solemn hours! wail aloud
For your mother in her shroud.

As the wild air stirs and sways
  The tree-swung cradle of a child,
So the breath of these rude days
  Rocks the year:—be calm and mild
Trembling hours; she will arise
With new love within her eyes.

January gray is here,
  Like a sexton by her grave;
February bears the bier;
  March with grief doth howl and rave,
And April weeps—but, O, ye hours,
Follow with May's fairest flowers.

MOVIES RAISE GRADES

Some interesting tests with a view to determining the benefits derived from supplementing ordinary instruction by motion picture films illustrating the subjects taught have been made in San Diego and eleven other California cities.

In all more than 11,000 children were tseted, each school being divided into two groups. one of which received both book and film instruction, the other being taught through text books only. The tests covered a period of ten weeks at the end of which examinations were held.

Pupils having the advantage of motion pictures made grade averaging 33 per cent higher in geography and 15 per cent higher in general science subjects than those who used books alone. This experiment appears to have been extensive enough to warrant the conclusion that the combined book-picture method is highly advantageous in such subjects as those mentioned.

Not only is this method beneficial to the individual pupil, but by reducing the number of failures in examinations, it reduces the number of pupils who must repeat courses, thus effecting a saving in expenses for school purposes.

The introduction of educational films is becoming widespread, and there is little doubt that they will become standard equipment for schools of the future.

Omnious Cloud Spoils Holidays For Gov. Miller

bama's higher institutions of learning talked to the Governor about finances was self evident after they left. Just as soon as they left Sid Blan, State Treasurer; W. W. Brooks, chief clerk to the treasurer and John Peach, legal counsel to the Governor appeared in the doorway of the Governor's office and left without saying a word. That the three institutions need money is common knowledge but just how long it will be before they get it is not common knowledge.

The visit of the three college presidents has added to the talk about an extra session of the Legislature. Bob Goode, member of the lower House from Wilcox has addressed a letter to the members asking them to say whether or not they are willing to come to Montgomery to enact cotton acreage reduction legislation. Mr. Goode did not ask them to say a word about the other pressing problems of the State. In the absence of anything official, the political wiseacres put two and two together and wonder whether the educators are willing for an extra session without education relief.

In the past there has been a common idea that the educational forces usually worked hand in glove with the agricultural forces. Some call them "rings." As a matter of fact it has been generally understood that the educational forces never made a move without first consulting the agricultural forces. And on the other hand it has been often said that half the strength of the agricultural forces has been in their ability to corral the educational forces.

Goode Suggests Session

And in view of these things above stated and in view of the letter of Representative Bob Goode of the agriculture forces to the members of the Legislature to assemble in Montgomery for agricultural legislation, many are putting the visit of the presidents of the three great educational institutions of the State on the grounds that they, too, want recognition in the event of a call for a special session.

Gossip is rife about the agricultural and educational situation but so far the reporters of Capitol news have been unable to fathom what it is all about. But the fact remains that the three heads of the great educational institutions of Alabama visited Gov. Miller immediately after publication of the news in The Advertiser Sunday that Representative Goode of Wilcox, wants a special session for agricultural relief. —Atticus Mullin, in The Montgomery Advertiser.

Voters To Go To Polls Tuesday On Amendment

It merely permits the transfer of a fund put upon the backs of Mobile citizens by a carpetbag government after the Civil War to be applied to the general fund of the city to care for a natural increase of the growth of Mobile since Civil War days. It is hoped, therefore that citizens of Alabama who are required to vote upon the amendment to conform to the constitution of the state and not possible to be done otherwise, will vote affirmatively so that the people of Mobile can continue to administer the city's affairs in a sound financial and economic manner.

We who love our city, and want to see it continue to grow and be one of the fine assets of the state, hope that citizens throughout Alabama will help us by voting "Yes" on Jan. 5. It entails nothing to anyone, but would be a gracious and helpful action by those we call neighbors. As an evidence of good faith, Mobile is paying the cost of this election.

Our City Commission, although differing widely in its political views, is united in this cause; the Clearing House Association of Mobile has endorsed the measure; the amendment has been approved by the executive committee of the Alabama League of Municipalities, as well as by the board of managers of the Association of County Commissioners of Alabama. This amendment was voted on four years ago and approved by the voters of Mobile by a majority of two to one, which should be sufficient evidence to have the people of the state understand that this amendment is favored by our people.

LOAFERS IN COLLEGE

The growing idea that a large percentage of young men now in college would be better off elsewhere was emphasized by no less an authority than Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes, in an address at Brown University, from which he was graduated in 1881.

He roundly criticized the many modern college activities which have nothing to do with education, and which attract the mental loafers whose only ambition is to get by and obtain a diploma. Referring to such a student Mr. Hughes said: "I should take him out at once and tell him to make his own way. Those who are not disposed to make good use of their college years would be better off elsewhere."

Neither Mr. Hughes nor any other sensible person would disparage the value of a college education, but the fact is that our colleges are encumbered with many students who have neither the capacity, the energy nor the ambition to profit by college training.

They might as well quit school and engage at once in soda-jerking or in whatever simple tasks their mentality happens to fit.

Miss Willie Jean Patrick Becomes Bride Of Mr. L. C. Lewis At Quiet Home Wedding

Simplicity in its most beautiful manner, marked the wedding of Miss Willie Jean Patrick of Billingsley, to Mr. L. C. Lewis of Brundidge, last Friday, December 25th.

The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Patrick, in Billingsley. "Always" was sung by Miss Maude Lee Patrick, accompanied by Mrs. C. K. Harrell, of Rayburn Gap, Ga., who played the wedding march, as the bride and groom approached the altar. The bride had as her attendants, her sister, Miss Inez Patrick, as maid of honor, and Miss Betty Jane Gregory of Tuscaloosa as maid. Mr. Samuel Martin of Clanton acted as best man for the groom. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

She was becomingly attired in a brown ensemble of silk flat crepe, with accessories to match, with a corsage of pink rose buds and sweet peas. The maid of honor wore a beautiful garment of yellow moire, carrying a bouquet of pink American Beauty rose buds. The brides maid was attractively attired in yellow satin, carrying a beautiful bouquet of pink rose buds. The home was decorated with Southern smilax, holly, with hot house plants adding to the impressive yet simple decorations, with the improvised altar softly lighted with tall burning candelabra. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. M. L. Harris, of Prattville.

The bride, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Patrick, is a member of a prominent family of this section, and listed as a popular member of several college sets.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Lewis of Brundidge, Ala., and is employed in Montgomery. After a short wedding trip the couple returned to Montgomery where they will make their home.

GIFT DAY JANUARY 6TH

While Christmas is universally celebrated as the birthday of Christ, among the Latins the gift-giving feature of the season is reserved for Epiphany, on January 6.

This date is observed in commemoration of the visit of the Three Wise Men of the East to the manger of the Christ Child, to whom they brought gifts of "gold, and frankincense and myrrh."

In Latin America the children are taught to expects gifts on Epiphany, and the evening before they prepare accordingly. There being no snow in those warm countries, the children expect Santa Claus on horseback, so they provide hay for the mythical steed. Next morning they discover with delight that the hay disappeared and in its place gifts have been left for them.

This custom is widespread throughout Cuba, Porto Rico, Haiti and other Spanish-speaking countries, and is aided by gifts of candy, toys and clothing from church organizations in the United States.

Among the poorer classes of children great joy is given by the simplest gift, such as a small bag of candy, a picture card, a bright colored toy, or other inexpensive article. Perhaps nowhere in the world is it possible to contribute so much happiness to childhood by small expenditures as among the little one of Latin America.

HOW MANY ARE A FEW?

In a somewhat light vein the Christion Science Monitor once asked and discussed the question, "How many are a Few?" No conclusion was reached, as there appeared to be no definite authority which might be cited to establish the answer.

Later a correspondent in Newark called attention to the fact that a small Scotch boy had found the answer long ago, according to a story which may be briefly related thus:

The boy was entitled to a "few apples" as a prize for memorizing more verses of scripture than any other member of his Sunday school class, whereupon the teacher gave him three apples. The boy demurred, asserting that he should have eight apples. Pressed for his authority the lad triumphantly produced it from no less a source than the Holy Writ, quoting Peter, thrid chapter, 20th verse, which says:

"Few, that is, eight souls were saved by water."

His contention being incontrovertible, the boy got his eight apples. And, therefore, if anyone should ask, "a few" means eight.

THOSE BUSY BUREAUS

What those government bureaus in Washington can't think up to experiment and piddle with must be unthinkable. After much research the Bureau of Standards recently determined the relative noise-making possibilities of a saxaphone player and a tap dancer. Now these learned scientists are investigating women's hose and the limbs, shapely or otherwise, which wear them

They have decided that a 30-inch length for ladies' stockings is about right, and maybe they will pass a law about it. But, again, maybe not, for we read that many women are protesting against this attempt at standardization, saying that "in the arbitrary length some of them look like infants in socks while others whose legs are shorter than normal claim the stockings will approach their ears."

These protests naturally call for further investigation and research by the Bureau, including measurements for insteps, heel, toe, ankle and calf, to determine the exact dimensions appropriate for the various sizes to be officially authorized.

All of which causes the New York Sun to pertinently remark that "some of the ways and means which the government finds for wasting taxpayers-money would be funny if the deficit and the problem of finding money for taxes were not so serious."

Fess's Speech Makes Hooverites "Writhe"—Blunders of National Committee Pointed Out

Washington. Dec. 28.—The Republican National Committee is made responsible by the New York Times for a share of what the paper calls President Hoover's "bad luck." "No part of it," the Times declares, "can have been harder to endure than the indiscretions, improprieties, infelicities and general incompetence of the successive chairmen of the National Republican Committee. It was a sufficiently unfortunate coincidence that the committee had to meet in Washington just as the session of the new Congress was opening.

"But this might have been got over as an unintended and regrettable maneuver had not Chairman Fess, in his address to the members of the National Committee, carried off first place, with the rest nowhere, for ill-judged, ill-timed and ill-phrased speaking.

"Such a left-handed tribute as he paid to Mr. Hoover was enough to make the warmest supporter of the President writhe. Senator Fess also plainly implied that the Republican party is in for an overwhelming defeat unless it does something to make the country appreciate the real qualities of Mr. Hoover. Here is a great man, declared Chairman Fess, in effect, whose fellow-citizens have been stupidly unaware of his singular eminence. What the party must do is to go out and labor from this day forth to correct the prevailing impression of the President, and prove to an incredulous people that Mr. Hoover has displayed 'a leadership without precedent in American history.' This theme was developed by Chairman Fess with an elephantine awkwardness which none but he can command on such an occasion. After listening to the descriptions of himself as the Great Misunderstood, the Neglected Genius, President Hoover must have felt like crying out, 'Save, oh, save me from my candid friends'!"

Washington, Dec. 28.—Mrs. Mary T. Norton, Democratic Representative of the Twelfth District of New Jersey, who has been made Chairman of the House Committee on the District of Columbia, is the first woman to become Chairman of a committee of Congress. Mrs. Norton also is the first woman Democrat elected to Congress and has been a member of the House since 1924. The New York Times pays her this compliment:

"Mrs. Norton knows cities and their problems, as Washington will discover with pleasure and other American women will note with pride."

To Launch Democratic Fund Drive With Victory Dinners Jan. 14 —Davis To Speak

"Victory Dinners" in the larger cities of the country, featured by the broadcast over a nation-wide radio hook-up from New York of a keynote "preparedness" speech by John W. Davis, General Chairman of the Democratic Victory Campaign, will mark the public launching Thursday evening, January 14, of the Democratic party's drive to mobilize its forces early in readiness for the 1932 Presidential election.

The foregoing announcement was made by Jouett Shouse, Chairman of the Democratic National Executive Committee, through the Victory Campaign headquarters in the Empire State Building, New York, who characterized the dinners as "the opening gun for the Presidential battle of 1932."

Chairman Shouse's announcement followed a meeting of the Democratic victory fund committee in Washington, which was largely attended by State Chairmen of the Victory Campaign and was called to order by Chairman John J. Raskob of the Democratic National Committee.

John H. Fahey, of Massachusetts, Executive Chairman of the Victory Committee, who presided as permanent chairman at the meeting, heartened the committeemen with the statement that one-half million dollars was in sight as a nucleus of the $1,500,000 total, the grand objective.

FREAKISH ACCIDENTS

o

Some most interesting facts concerning freakish accidents are related by Arthur Grahame in Popular Science Monthly, illustrating Voltaire's saying that "it is the danger least expected that soonest comes to us," Among others he relates the followng:

P. Wiggins, Kansas aviator, was bitten by a rattlesnake that had somehow gotten into his plane, while flying at an altitude of about a mile but landed and obtained treatment in time to save his life.

Ceasar Beltram of Lyons, France, was struck by lightning five times during his lifetime, yet finally died of pneumonia.

Some years ago General Castilliano, a Nicaraguan revolutionist, was struck by a falling meteor while sitting in his tent one night and was killed. His superstitious soldiers believed that the Almighty had thus shown disapproval of their cause, so they abandoned the revolution.

Mathematicians have figured that an American will be struck by a meteor about once every 9,300 years on an average. They will also calculate that a person living to the age of 70 has one chance in 7,000 of being struck by lightning.

About 1,000 persons are injured in bathtubs to every one hurt in railroad accidents. About 30,000 Americans are killed every year by accidents occuring in and about their homes, almost as many as are killed by automobiles.

Most ironical of the accidents enumerated by Mr. Grahame was that in which a man was painfully injured by the falling of a horseshoe he had nailed over his door for luck.

Rowena Rides the Rumble

By Ethel Hueston

Rackruff Motors hire Rowena to accompany Peter on a nation-wide tour in their roadster as an advertising stunt. At the last minute Little Bobby is engaged to act as chaperon.

A few miles out Bobby becomes tearful at being parted from her sweetheart and Rowena insists on taking her place in the rumble so that she can ride with Peter and have him to talk to about Carter. Rowena gets Peter to consent to divide the expense money each week as soon as it arrives, and astonishes Peter by eating too economically.

The three tourists reach Denver, after passing through Buffalo, Chicago and St. Louis. Peter and Rowena have many tiffs on the way while Carter keeps wiring Bobby to return to New York. The morning after they reach Denver, Peter and Rowena discover Bobby has deserted them and returned to New York by train. They are faced with the impossible condition of continuing their trip without a chaperon.

"Well, you're not chained there, are you? There's nothing to keep you from getting out, is there? I'm in bed, too, but I'm not going to let a mere being in bed interfere with my professional future, am I? I'll meet you down-stairs in ten minutes." And she hung up the receiver.

Now on the whole, no one could have been more practical about things connected solely with business than Rowena. Her clothes were smart, for all their increasing shabbiness, but they were extremely tailored and trim. Her very manners were crisp and business-like. But something—she didn't know just what—prompted her to discard her chic sports costume that night. She dived to the bottom of her bag and pulled out a soft and shimmery little dinner gown of enticing line and beguiling color. She put on her highest-heeled silken slippers. She got out tinkling little blue bracelets and earrings and chains. And she accentuated her shimmery sweetness with the flattering lines of a chiffon velvet scarf, deep and wide and ruffled.

When Peter, waiting rather sulkily in the lobby of the hotel, first saw her floating toward him he could scarcely believe it was Rowena of the rumble seat. Her rouge-red lips smiled at his frank amazement and she took his hand in hers, powdery soft to the touch and faintly perfumed.

"Peter, darling,' 'she said. "I have a gorgeous idea."

Peter's sulkiness took instant flight. "Gosh, Rowena, you—you're exquisite! You're just ravishing! You must let me paint you like that. You're simply unbelieveable—you're not real!"

"Oh, but this is the real Rowena," she said with seductive sweetness. You never saw me before. You know only a poor little working girl trying to earn her daily bread."

"I—I've just got to paint you like that!"

"You shall," she promised, smiling.

"I suppose it's too late to do it now" he began.

"I'm afraid so." Rowena drew a deep, deep breath. Something about it—something about her—made Peter think vaguely of a swimmer standing cold and bold and bare, body poised motionless, for a distance plunge into icy water.—"Peter—you—you are very sure you are not in love?"

"I will be," he assured her gallantly, "if you look like this very often."

"I'm serious, Peter."

"No, I'm not in love."

"Absolutely?"

"Absolutely."

"Then, Peter, how about this?" Another deep breath—another premonitory quiver of cold flesh anticipating an icy plunge. "You know, marriage isn't the sweetly sacred thing it used to be. It's only a sort of adventure these days, a matter of expediency, or convenience, or emotional experiment. And besides, business is far more important. Don't you think so?"

"I hadn't really thought of it in just that way," said Peter vaguely.

"Well, you think of it and you'll see I'm right. And as long as we're not in love with anybody else or anything, and nobody cares one way or the other—well, why don't we—why can't we—don't you see what I mean? Why not just go ahead with the trip the way we are, and do the work and get the money and everything—and just get married? That's all."

Peter hadn't remotely suspected what she had in mind until she brought the word out, struck him full in the face with it, as it were. And it pulled him up short, shocked and resentful, like a struck man.

had never thought about—being married to you——"

"Well," she interrupted tartly, "if it comes to that I can't think of anything in the world I'd like less than being married to you, either." But she realized at once she was off on the wrong track and quickly changed her method. "Of course, darling," she added kindly, "I know we don't get along very well together, and that we're anything but in love. But it isn't a real marriage I have in mind. Just to cover the proprieties and let us finish up the trip.—And just think how much more money we can save, not always having to buy manicures and souvenirs for Bobby!—I know a judge in New York and he'll annul us as soon as we get back. No harm done."

"Maybe he won't do it."

"Oh, yes, he will. He wants to marry me himself. He'll annul us like a shot out of a gun."

"But, Rowena—" he began wretchedly.

"And, Peter, dear Peter," said Rowena moving prettily in the transparent velvet scarf, "I'm really a terribly nice sort when I'm not working hard and worried about money. Ever and ever so many quite nice people are terribly anxious to be married to me. I dare say as a married couple we shall get along better than most. And we will be careful to get rooms on separate floors of the hotel and make the clerks give us a receipt making a note of it, so we can use it for evidence that we have never—uh—never been—anything but just—well, married, you know."

"That's enough, if you ask me," said Peter in a troubled voice.

"I'm terribly hungry," said Rowena. "Let's go down to that cunning little place the clerk told us about and have a sandwich or something. And you think it over. I had to think up some way out of it, Peter. We just couldn't chuck it—not here—not right at the very front door of the Rocky Mountains. I couldn't bear it."

So they took a taxicab and went down to the nice little place and Rowena didn't say a word about business, or money, or professions. She talked softly of lovely, lovable things, and smiled, and the beads shone on her throat, and stars shone in the blue of her eyes, until Peter declared it was a very good idea of hers and they would get it done first thing next morning.

After breakfast the next morning Peter insisted upon using a small portion of their dwindling expense money to buy a plain wedding ring.

They had no trouble procuring the license, hurried directly to the office of the nearest justice and by twelve o'clock they were married.

Back in the hotel they turned abruptly away from each other as soon as they had their keys from the desk and went up to their rooms by separate elevators. And at one o'clock they were drawing out of Denver, headed north, both a little hushed, a little excited and more than a little nervous.

It was very late that night when they reached Cheyenne. The last twenty miles Peter drove slowly, creeping along as one who dreaded the ultimate arrival and when no amount of slowing down could postpone the inevitable he was plainly on edge.

"It's going to be awkward as the devil," he said moodily.

"Not at all," said Rowena. "Just go right in and ask for two rooms on separate floors."

"You'd better come with me. It will look odd for me to go in alone and then come back for you."

Rowena got out. "J-just be offhand about it, Peter. Be casual."

"Yeh," he growled. "They're going to think it's very fishy."

Obviously. they did think so. Peter strolled up to the desk with with a conspicuous assumption of nonchalance, Rowena tagging nervously at his heels.

"Got a couple of rooms?" he asked the clerk.

"Yes, sir," said the clerk briskly.

"On—er separate floors, I suppose," said Peter hopefully.

"No—connecting," said the clerk.

"Er—well———" began Peter, weakening.

But Rowena nudged him.

"We'd rather have them—er—on different floors, if you don't mind," he stammered and his face grew red.

The clerk looked up at them strangely. The telephone girl came around from her desk in the corner and lounged within good hearing distance. A large man in slouchy clothes sauntered over from the cigar stand. Two men sitting near dropped their papers in their laps and one began to rub his glasses.

"Y-yes, please," chimed Rowena helpfully. "So—so we won't wake each other up mornings. We—sleep late.'

"Um, I see," said the clerk. "Traveling together?"

"Yes," said Peter firmly. "My wife and I are taking a motor trip up to Yellowstone."

"Will you register?"

"Peter Blande," wrote Peter firmly.

"Your—wife, too, please," said the clerk.

Peter hesitated. "Mrs.—Peter—" he wrote slowly.

Rowena leaned over. "I'd rather use my own name, Peter," she said. "For—professional reasons."

Peter crossed out what he had written and wrote "Miss." Then he scratched that out and wrote "Rowena Rostand." But it did not look just right to him so he carefully inserted "Mrs." over the scratched out 'Miss."

The clerk studied the name, the telephone girl looking over his shoulder as he did so. The large man in the slouchy clothes studied Peter.

"New York, eh?" said the clerk.

"Yes," said Peter.

"Yes, indeed," chimed Rowena.

"Motor out together?"

"Yes," said Peter and Rowena in well-timed chorus.

The clerk frowned over the room chart. "I'm afraid we're full up," he said slowly. "Not a thing left."

Peter leaned over the desk and his mild face looked quite grim and ugly. "You said you had two rooms," he said in a low voice.

"We did then," said the clerk evenly. "But just now"—he shook his head—"I'm afraid not."

The telephone girl snickered a little and one of the men sitting near by rustled his paper. Rowena flushed and caught a sharp breah, cowering slightly, but Peter suddenly showed surly and efficient.

"Oh, yes, you have," he said. "Two rooms, and we'll take them. We've got a marriage certificate, if that's what eating you!"

"Yeah?"

"Rowena, get the certificate!"

Rowena hurriedly took it out of the side pocket of her bag. The clerk read it slowly and handed it to the large man in the slouchy clothes who looked it over and nodded churlishly.

"Denver, eh?" inquired the clerk. "Today, eh?"

"Yes," said Peter.

"Some other people drove out with us," Rowena hastened to explain. "And they were unexpectedly called back to New York—and so—the rest of us—Peter and I—just got married."

"We've got a very nice suite on the second floor," suggested the clerk.

"All right," said Peter grimly.

"No," cried Rowena, faint but firm. "Separate floors."

The clerk grinned, not unsympathetically. "All right, all right," he said. "Don't be nervous, lady. We'll put him on the top floor.—Congratulations, Mr. Blande. She certainly a beauty. She'll get over that nervousness."

Peter muttered unspeakable things deep down in his throat, and the boy came in and took their bags and led them off to separate rooms on separate floors. A loud gust of laughter swept up the elevator shaft in their wake.

In the doorway of the room assigned her Rowena turned and held out an appealing hand.

"G-good night, Peter," she said sadly.

HAVE THE GENTILE TIMES ENDED?

Editor, Chilton County News:

What is meant by the Gentile Times? The Gentile Times cover 2520 years. The record is found in Leviticus 26:18-28. The seven times mean seven years of 360 days each. In Ezekiel 4:6 we read: "I appoint thee each day for a year." In support of this we read in Numbers 14:34: "Each day for a year." The children of Israel were carried captive to Babylon in 606 B. C. Adding 606 to 1914 we get 2520 years. 1914 was the end of the Gentile Times. What happened in 1914 as proof of this? We find in Matthew 24:7: "For nation shall rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be famines and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places," and in verse 8 we find: "All these are the beginning of sorrows."

Have we seen these things coming to pass? Yes, nobody can deny it. We find further proof in St. Luke 21:24: "And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. "They" meaning the Jews, who are now returning to their homeland. This is supported by Jeremiah 30:3: "I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it."

Note what happened in the time of the war. In Revelation 11:3 we find: "And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophecy a thousand two hundred and three-score days clothed in sack-cloth," meaning in attitude of mourning. This is three and one-half years, according to the events taking place at that time. 42 months of 30 days each, which is equivalent to three and one-half years solar time, beginning November 7, 1914 would end May 7, 1918. On May 7, 1918 all the officers of "The Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society" were arrested and their work stopped. On June 20 thereafter the officers of the society were sentenced to 80 years imprisonment. Symbolicly speaking the work of the society was killed. This is supported by Matthew 24:9: "Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake." On March 26, 1919 the officers of the society were released, and on March 27, of that same year, efforts were begun to carry on the witness work. It was then that God took His organization into the wilderness. Members of the organization must be fed. In Revelation 12:6 we find: "And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and three-score days." This is three and one-half years: 1919-1922, when the organization, equipped, went forth to serve.

The woman in Revelation 12:1 represents God's organization. Note that the woman is clothed with God's light. The sun was her clothing, the moon her shoes, and the stars are about her head.

The great Dragon was cast out at the end of the world, where we now are. In Revelation 12:12 we find: "For the Devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time." In Revelation 11:18 we find: "And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come," and in Matthew 24:21 we find: "For then shall be great tribulation," and in Matthew 24:22 we find: "And except those days should be shortened there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." God stopped the war.

In Matthew 24:14 we find: "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations: and then shall the end come," meaning the Battle of Armogedeon.

Yours for the truth,

Farmers May Have Clays Tested Free

Alabama farmers who have clays on their farms which they believe would make brick,tile, sewer pipe, china, porcelain, flower pots, etc., may have these clays tested free to determine their commercial value.

The tests will be made by the School of Chemistry, Metallurgy and Ceramics at the University of Alabama and the farmer submitting the sample will be furnished a report of the test without one cent of cost.

The Industrial Board and the University are making the survey in order to assist land owners of the state in locating industries to use their clays of commercial value also to assist industries in locating owners of useful clays.

Farmers desiring to have clays tested are advised to write a letter or card to the Alabama Industrial Development Board, 638 Brown-Marx Building, Birmingham, asking for a sack in which to mail the clay sample. The sack will be self-addressed and properly stamped, therefore the only cost to the farmer will be a postage stamp for mailing the letter requesting the sack.

Clay Willingham Passes Suddenly

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 28.—Clay Willingham, 35, field agent for the tobacco tax division of the State Tax Commission, World War veteran, and only son of Dr. and Mrs. H. J. Willingham, of Florence, where Dr. Willingham heads the State Teachers' College, died at the Baptist Hospital in Birmingham early yesterday morning, following an illness of only four days.

Mr. Willingham and his wife left here last Thursday for Birmingham to spend the Christmas holidays with relatives. Christmas morning Mr. Willingham was stricken suddenly with an acute attack of influenza and was immediately removed to the hospital. Within a short time he developed double pneumonia, and his condition from then on grew rapidly worse, until his passing early yesterday.

At the capitol and in the city, where he was widely known and had many friends, the news of his death was received with expressions of genuine sorrow.

In addition to his father and mother, and his widow, Mr. Willingham, who resided at 27 Earl Place here, is survived by three sisters. Mrs. E. L. Deal, Montgomery; Mrs. Carl Tyree, Florence, and Miss Sarah Frances Willingham, also of Florence.

Mrs. Clay Willingham was before her marriage, Miss Louise Sheppard, daughter of Mrs. Lila Sheppard, of Verbena.

Big Picture Coming To Clanton Theatre Soon

life of an average American family.

"Her Unborn Child" is a talking picture which will rightfully take its place with the finest screen entertainments in motion picture history.

As a stage play it toured the length and breadth of the land, startling legitimate theatre audiences with its frankness, gripping them with its humanness and power, evoking enthusiastic praise from press, pulpit and public alike. Its run of almost one year at the Eltinge and 48th Street Theatres in New York testifies to the popularity of "Her Unborn Child" as a stage attraction.

And now, the powerfully dramatic and pitilessly revealing story of " a boy and a girl in love, forgetting everything else' 'is presented as a talking picture, with a cast of Broadway stage notables enacting in some instances, the roles they portrayed in the stage vehicle. The pungent, outspoken dialog, the thrilling unconventional situations, the smashing dramatic power and delightful comedy relief, the agonizing terror of a girl who loved, not wisely, but too well, the heart-stabbing picture of a mother faced with the terrible knowledge of her daughter's shame, the frenzied, desperate effort of a boy and a girl to avert the terrible consequences of unguarded love, and the satisfying, unexpected climax which turns tragedy into happiness—they all make of "Her Unborn Child" a talking picture which will linger long in your memory. You'll laugh—you'll cry—you'll love it!

TWO AVIATORS DIE IN CRASH NEAR BILLINGSLEY, ALABAMA

Two aviators from Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Lieut. Bruce Tyndall, and Pvt. W. C. Newborn, were killed when their plane crashed near Billingsley, Wednesday of last week.

It was stated that the men were flying to Memphis, Tenn., from Maxwell Field. Newborn's home is in Memphis and he was going there to spend Christmas, while Tyndall was to return to Montgomery, bringing another officer with him.

Just why the crash was caused was not known, it was stated, but officials of Maxwell Field state they believe it due to the fog and bumpy weather, the aviators were flying low, and possibly had motor trouble. At the scene of the crash, the plane apparently started dropping several yards before striking the ground near the home of R. Lee Ousley, farmer near Billingsley.

Several in that vicinity state they saw the plane going down, and as soon as it crashed they were on the scene. An ambulance from Martin & Sons, Clanton, was summoned, and the bodies of the men brought to Clanton, and later turned over to the government officials at Maxwell Field. Apparently the aviators were killed instantly.
